RAIL STRIKE TO GRIP ALL U. S.

JUDGE UPHOLDS TRIBUNE PLEA FOR FREE PRESS

Rules Against City in Libel Suit.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Judge Harry M. Fisher of the Circuit court yesterday sustained the demurrer of THE TRIBUNE in the $10,000,000 libel suit brought against it by Corporation Counsel Ettelson using the name of the city of Chicago.

The court held that there was no cause of action in the articles published by THE TRIBUNE criticising the Thompson administration's management of the financial affairs of the city and charging that the administration had brought the city to the point of bankruptcy.

"This action is not in harmony with the genius, spirit, and objects of our institutions," read the written opinion handed down.

"It fits in rather with the genius of the rulers who conceived law not in the purity of love for justice but in the lustful passion for undisturbed power.

"It will, therefore, be unnecessary to consider the other questions involved."

Cleveland Seeks to Amend.

Although the decision was of this sweeping character, Chester E. Cleveland, special counsel for the administration in several matters, made a technical motion for leave to amend his petition. The court reminded him the ruling was that there was "no cause of action at all," and that therefore he had no right to amend. But the attorney insisted that he wanted to offer the changes in order to get them into the record for an appeal.

"I am satisfied that no matter what your amendments are, if it is the same cause of action you cannot amend," said the court. "But in order to obviate the other questions when you get to the reviewing court I will let you file an amended declaration and will then sustain the demurrer."

Attorneys Weymouth Kirkland and Howard Ellis, representing THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, agreed to a thirty days' continuance on the motion to amend.

"Noww," said Mr. Cleveland, "the only order entered is a continuance of thirty days."

But Judge Fisher corrected him.

"The court sustains the demurrer," he said. "The motion for leave to amend is entered and continued thirty days."

Much Interest in Decision.

A small crowd, unusual for an occasion of this kind, was present in the courtroom when the decision was read. A large number of the spectators were lawyers who crowded inside the rail and up toward the rostrum as Judge Fisher started speaking. Except for the little group of counsel directly in front of the judge, nearly every man in the room was standing until the reading was completed.

After a brief review of the claims set up by the Ettelson declaration Judge Fisher mentioned the points made by the defendant and took up Attorney Kirkland's first and principal contention—that the action was not maintainable, that to allow a recovery would violate the freedom of the press guaranteed by the constitution.

It was to this point that he devoted himself almost entirely and upon this argument that he based his decision. Summarized into the fewest possible words, he ruled that the city is a government and that a government has no right to sue as a private person.

Would Be Club in Enemy Hands.

"Stripped of all elaborate argument," he said in this connection, "the fact remains that, if this action is maintainable, then public officials have in their power one of the most effective instruments with which to intimidate the press and to silence their enemies.

"It is a weapon to be held over the head of every one who dares print or speak unfavorably of the men in power."

And he declared that the persistent use of this weapon would enable government officials to destroy newspapers.

"Aside from the costs involved," he said, taking up the difference between actions by governments and by individual government officials, "there is much that would cause an individual to forbear action.

"The honest official seldom fears criticism. He answers argument by argument and only in extreme cases resorts to law.

"The dishonest official is often restrained by the fear of laying his character open to a searching judicial inquiry. But if he can hide his own infirmities by labeling his action in the

OLD AND YOUNG OF IRELAND SEEK AMERICAN HAVEN

Troubles Are Many Before They Sail.

The following article is one of a series by Miss Genevieve Forbes, a member of The Tribune staff, who has just returned to America, passing through Ellis island as an Irish immigrant girl. Miss Forbes had some remarkable experiences in Ireland and in the steerage before she ran the gantlet of all the terrors of this great American gateway to the United States. She is disclosing what she and her fellow immigrants endured to enter this country. Miss Forbes' experiences bear out fully the charges made against Ellis island. GENEVIEVE FORBES.

New York, Oct. 15.—[Special.]—By the time our little group reaches Dublin we have enlarged it to include several more bound for America. There is Bill, the handsome New York policeman who has been home for a visit in Limerick. And Mary McGinn, with gorgeous red hair and "a hairy" coat. Mr. McKee hastens to tell us he has been working eight years in a Detroit automobile factory. Of course, he is authority on everything.

The majority of the emigrants whom we meet are young boys and girls going over for the first time Next in number come the older young people who are returning to their former job in the states. They are usually accompanied by a younger brother or sister, whom they protect with a rough tenderness that is significant. The third group consists of middle aged and old women and men going over to spend the last years with "the children, who are doing so well, God bless them."

Widow Goes to Wed.

One woman, the mother of six children, all with her, is on her way to Pittsburgh and matrimony Another traveling companion, Mrs. Gallagher, with the face of a saint, the tongue of a shrew, and the heart of both, tells me just what she thinks of me for not having a better Irish accent "You Irish girls who get them Yank ways make me tired," she concludes, and repeats her conclusion several times.

At Dublin my first trip is to the office of the British consulate, located at the police headquarters in Dublin castle. Since the trouble in Ireland all public buildings are under heavy guard. Challenged by sentry after sentry, I am finally admitted to the court yard and a military police officer escorts me to the consul's office

I present all my papers and credentials and fill out a long circular, which demands highly detailed information. I then leave to return shortly with a money order for 2 shillings, the necessary fee. This time, haughtily and ignorantly, I assure the sentry that I know my way to the consul's office and that a military escort is unnecessary.

With equal haughtiness, but no ignorance of his facts, the sentry informs me the escort is not for my protection. A glance at barbed wire fortifications helps convince me.

Five or six of my train companions are in the office. Bill, the genial policeman, is giving them instructions. He is less rhetorical when the consul enters the room. We are told it will take several days to have our passports sent to England and returned. So, wondering about our finances, we go

"POISON PHOTO" ATTACKS MADE ON BERNSTORFF

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Oct. 15.—Some political enemy of Count Bernstorff's has originated the "poisoned photograph" in an attack on the former German ambassador to the United States and now a member of the reichstag representing the Democratic party for Schleswig.

This secret enemy apparently resides in New York. This morning President Ebert, Chancellor Wirth, every member of the cabinet, members of the reichstag, high officials, and journalists, altogether about 1,000, received sealed letters from New York with photographs showing Count Bernstorff splashing in the ocean with each arm around a pretty young American girl. Under the photographs was printed in German, "How Count Bernstorff served his country gloriously during the war."

The count is in Vienna for a vacation, but his party colleagues say the attack was probably engineered by the Monarchist party propaganda department. Monarchists are said to be alarmed at the count's growing popularity as a Democratic party leader.

PARALYSIS WINS; REWARDS FUTILE

Death Ends Eight Year Fight for Life.

After advertising extensively and offering rewards to any one who could cure him of the paralysis which for the last eight years has been slowly eating away his life, Benjamin Hyde, retired building contractor, died yesterday in his home at 659 Wellington avenue.

Offers Reward for Cure.

Mr. Hyde tried remedy after remedy without avail. Over a year ago he signed a contract guaranteeing Dr. P. J. Kraft, a professional hypnotist, $1,000 if he could effect a permanent cure within a month. More than 1,000 answers were received as a result of advertisements offering a similar sum for a remedy.

Wife Doubles Reward.

Then last May Mrs. Hyde doubled the reward. Her husband's pain had increased to such an extent that she had to massage his arm even during his meals.

Mr. Hyde was 61 years old. He is survived by his widow and two children, J. R. Hyde and Mrs. F. W. Mack.

STRIKE AGAINST TEN HOUR DAY TIES UP WARSAW

BY L. C. WALTER.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

WARSAW, Oct. 15.—The greatest demonstration in Warsaw's history occurred yesterday afternoon when more than 75,000 men and women workers paraded in protest against the proposal of George Michalski, Polish minister of finance, to amend the eight hour day to permit two hours of voluntary work overtime.

Street railwaymen and telephone employés went on a strike at noon and other public service employés followed. A large group of workers marched to the diet and to Belveder castle where they sent a delegation to President Joseph Pilsudski.

Throughout the afternoon gendarmes and soldiers armed with machine guns, patrolled the streets in readiness to prevent rioting. To signify sympathy for the demonstrators a big red flag was flown in front of the Russian soviet legation during the parade. Placards with soviet inscriptions, many of them in Yiddish, were displayed. One large card read, "Down with the bourgeoisie, long live soviet Russia."

Lady Beatty, who was formerly Ethel Field, a daughter of the first Marshall Field, expects to remain in Chicago during the admiral's stay in America.

POLICE BATTLE SAFEBLOWERS; KILL 2, JAIL 1

Yeggs Shoot It Out When Cornered.

In a desperate revolver battle staged within a block of the Cottage Grove avenue police station two notorious safe blowers were killed by Sergt. Michaael Grady and Patrolman Ernest Dalidge of the detective bureau yesterday. A third man surrendered when the firing began.

The dead are:

James Bullard, a Canadian safeblower, murderer, and confidence man for whom a reward of $2,500 "dead or alive" is offered by the authorities at Boniface, Man.

Bullard's identification was made complete last night through an exchange of telegrams between Chicago and Canadian police. He was wanted for the murder of Alex McCurdy, whom he shot Nov. 11, 1920, in a Boniface hotel.

Patrick ("Paddy") Joyce, known to the police as a safeblower with a long record.

The captured man is Allen Hillman, alias Addison, called "king of safe blowers."

Led to Place by Tip.

The battle took place in front of the Davis laundry, 2341 Cottage Grove avenue. Sergt. Grady had received information that Hillman had brought an acetylene torch into the Guarantee Welding company, next door to the laundry, to be repaired.

With Patrolmen Gibbons and Dalidge Grady went to the place to investigate.

Late in the afternoon Hillman returned. He asked for the torch. Then Grady stepped out from behind a counter.

"Hello, Al," he said.

Without a word Hillman turned and walked out. Grady followed. Hillman crossed the curb to an automobile in which two other men were sitting.

Grady went up behind Hillman and with a quick leap caught a strangle hold about his neck. At the same time he drew his revolver and ordered the men in the car to throw up their hands.

Davis Fires First Shot.

Davis was sitting nearest and at the command drew an automatic and started firing. At the first shot Grady opened up with his gun. Dalidge came running from across the street, firing all the time.

Then Joyce drew a gun and fired at Dalidge. About twenty shots were fired and, when the smoke cleared away, Davis was crumpled up in the tonneau of the car dead, Joyce was lying in the street dying and Grady was putting handcuffs on Hillman.

When questioned by Chief of Police Fitzmorris and Chief of Detectives Hughes at the station a short time later, Hillman refused to tell anything about the dead men other than that he had met them in a saloon a few hours before.

Grady's Record for Bravery.

Sergt. Grady has been rewarded and praised for bravery many times in the past. He was given credit for the capture of the Cardinella gang and the solving of the Wanderer case. He also captured Eddie Morris after the latter had killed a police officer.

Officer Dalidge was until a week ago attached to the 50th street station. He was in charge of the "flivver squad" there, and has been recommended for bravery twice. Because of this he was transferred to the detective bureau by Chief Fitzmorris last Sunday.

Hillman has figured in the police records for twenty-five years, it is said. He was alleged to be "the brains" of the Bank of Montreal robbery in which $572,000 was taken.

Wilson and Taft to Follow Harding at Nation's Funeral

Washington, D. C., Oct. 15.—The names of Woodrow Wilson and William Howard Taft, as ex-presidents, have been placed next to that of President Harding on the list of invited guests to the ceremonies at Arlington, Nov. 11, when the American unknown dead will be honored by the nation.

WHAT CALL FOR BIGGEST RAIL STRIKE MEANS

Strike order issued by five brotherhood chiefs, calling out 500,000 men Oct. 30. Complete tieup of the country's 200,000 miles of trackage expected by Nov. 2, leaving 2,000,000 workers jobless.

One road, International and Great Northern, a Texas line, will be hit next Saturday.

President Harding confers with public members of rail labor board and interstate commerce commission. He issues statement on forbidding industrial outlook in view of transportation crisis.

More than 73,000 miles of trackage in forty-two states to be affected first day of general walkout.

Five Chicago trunk lines threatened in first day's walkout: Pennsylvania, Chicago Great Western, Chicago & Northwestern, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, and the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific.

Probably sixteen unions will act in accord in giving support to the strike, which is directed by the five big brotherhoods.

Strike headquarters established in Consumers building, Chicago, from whence all activities will be directed.

N. Y. WILL GO ON RATIONS IF BIG STRIKE IS CALLED

New York, Oct. 15.—[Special.]—A complete tieup of the railroads would seriously menace the health of New Yorkers in a week's time, Dr. Royal S. Copeland, health commissioner, said tonight. Three roads entering here, the Pennsylvania, Erie, and Delaware and Hudson, are affected by the first strike call.

He intimated he would call a meeting of various agencies in a few days to plan for the emergency. Every effort would be made, he said, from now until the date the first group goes out, to stock the city with food supplies.

"If the emergency justifies, I shall commandeer all the food supplies in the city and distribute them where they are needed," Dr. Copeland said.

"If the strike takes place, we can bring in a great deal of food by motor trucks. Milk we cannot haul for more than fifty miles, but the staple articles can be brought in from a great distance.

Herschel H. Jones, director of the New York office of the state department of farms and markets, said last night there was little danger of starving because of a railroad tieup, although the situation would be serious

If Japan makes a formal request of the United States to undertake mediation of the Shantung problem, it probably will be accepted, according to a statement in authoritative quarters here.

Japanese Ambassador Shidehara has informally "approached" Secretary of State Hughes on the subject of American mediation.

2 MILLION MEN TO DESERT ALL ROADS BY NOV. 2

Trains Will Move, Is Official's Reply.

A railway wage strike intended to tie up the transportation of the country by Nov. 2 has been called.

The first general walkout will be Oct. 30, on sixteen roads operating in forty-two states and having a trackage of 73,471 miles. Workers on other lines will be ordered out in three groups, one group each succeeding day.

In Washington President Harding started a series of conferences with members of the public group of the United States railroad labor board and the interstate commerce commission in an effort to avert the tieup.

First Walkout Oct. 22.

There will be one walkout next Saturday morning, according to present plans. This will be of the trainmen on the International and Great Northern, a Texas road.

The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, with a trackage of 10,661 miles, will be in the first group. The other fifteen to be hit the first day of the progressive strike are: Chicago and Northwestern, Pennsylvania, Missouri Pacific, Southern Pacific (Atlantic and Pacific lines), Southern railway, Louisville and Nashville, Chicago Great Western, St. Louis Southwestern (whether Texas lines are included not stated), Northern Pacific, Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific, Seaboard Air Line, and the Virginia railway.

Complete Tieup in Four Days.

The strike call was sent out from Chicago last night by the big four brotherhoods and the switchmen's union. While no official announcement was made, it was stated on good authority that the eleven other rail unions, embracing virtually all classes of railroad employes, will support the movement.

The tieup will be absolute within four days, union leaders predicted. The strike call indicates that not even mail trains will be moved.

"Won't Cripple Roads."

Samuel M. Felton, president of the Chicago Great Western, one of the first roads to be affected, said last night that in spite of the strike order many trains will be kept moving.

"What will the roads do when the strike goes into effect?" he was asked.

"We will cross that bridge when we come to it," he replied.

"Will the roads be able to operate after the men walk out?"

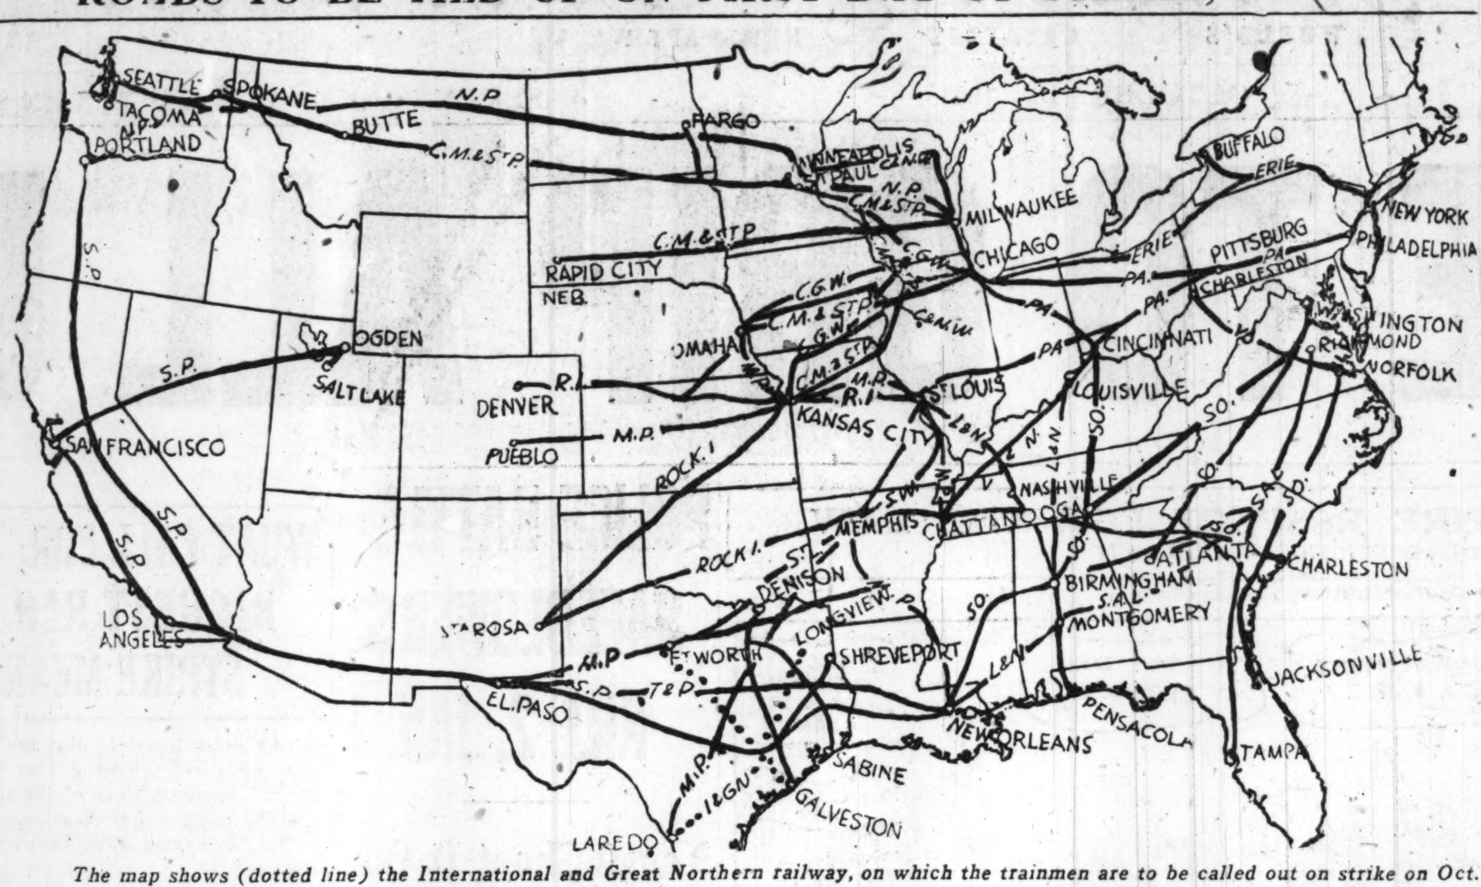
"I haven't any doubt of it," Mr. Felton answered emphatically, "but I don't propose to show my hand now. I can only repeat that we will cross the bridge when we come to it."

"The public had best get its walking shoes on," said B. M. Jewell, president of the railway employes' department of the American Federation of Labor. "I don't understand that the train instructions contemplate the operation of a single train."

Mr. Jewell said the extent to which shopmen will join the strike will be determined today.

Judge K. M. Landis, now in New York, has been asked by

ROADS TO BE TIED UP ON FIRST DAY OF STRIKE, OCT. 30



The map shows (dotted line) the International and Great Northern railway, on which the trainmen are to be called out on strike on Oct. 22, and the rights of way of the railways said to be placed in the first of four groups of transportation lines embracing the entire rail facilities of the country. A general strike is said to have been ordered on the lines of this first group effective Oct. 30. The workers of the remaining three groups will be "called out," one after the other, at twenty-four hour intervals.

Soo line officials to arbitrate the wage dispute. He replied that he must know more about what is involved before consenting to act.

Any strike probably will involve something less than 2,000,000 men, according to an estimate made by Mr. Felton. More than 500,000 have already been ordered out Oct. 30.

While the brotherhoods and the switchmen's union are seemingly the moving factors in directing the walkout, eleven other railway unions, embracing virtually all classes of rail labor, have given at least some support. It is said most of them have secretly voted in favor of a strike.

The largest group is that of the federated shop crafts, whose membership totals 475,000.

Protest Against Pay Cut

The strike, at least technically, must be on the wage issue raised by the 12 per cent reduction of July 1. Actually it will be a protest against the additional 10 per cent reduction railway executives Friday announced they propose to seek. This last, however, does not become a legal strike issue until it has come before the railroad labor board as a dispute and has been passed upon.

The strike call was issued to the brotherhoods and the switchmen's union. It cautioned the men against "violence of any nature."

INSTRUCTIONS TO STRIKERS

Members and officers, the strike call states, are to be governed by the following in the conduct of the strike:

"1. No man in road service involved in the strike will perform any service after hour set to strike, unless he has already begun a trip and has actually left the terminal. If the train has left the terminal, he will complete the trip and deliver the train at the end of run, or tieup point if tied up under the law, after which he will perform no further service until the close of the strike. Men in other than road service will leave the service at the appointed time.

"So far as your legal right to strike is concerned, there is no difference between a mail train and freight train. You have identically the same right to refuse to perform service on a mail train as you have to refuse to perform service on a freight train.

"2. All men on strike will keep away from the company's property, except such men as are designated certain duties to be performed by authority of the organizations.

"3. Every man should understand that the laws of the organizations involved must be obeyed. Acts of violence of any nature will not be tolerated by the organizations.

"4. The local representatives will arrange for a hall for meeting purposes at all terminals, using one of their own lodge rooms if available. Immediately after the strike becomes effective all men will assemble at the hall secured for the meeting purposes. When thus assembled, an organization will be perfected by the election of a chairman, vice chairman, and secretary.

"No person will be permitted to be present in the meeting halls other than those who are on strike, except by permission of the assemblage.

Roll Call Twice a Day.

"5. The secretary will arrange a roll call (alphabetically), with each organization on a separate sheet. Roll will be called twice daily, morning and afternoon. The names of the nonmembers will be kept separate on the roll from the names of those who are members of the organizations. All strikers will be required to answer the roll call and also to be in the halls, where halls are provided, during the day at all times, unless excused by committee action or by chairman of the meeting.

"The secretary will also keep a record of the proceedings from day to day.

"6. In the conduct of every strike there are numerous irresponsible persons, not members of the organizations, who take occasion to engage in acts of violence and disorderly conduct, and such actions are usually attributed to members of the organizations, and great care should be taken by every member of the organizations to avoid associating with such persons and such conduct should be discouraged so as not to cast reproach upon the cause.

"7. Some railroad officials may endeavor to coerce or mislead the men by asserting that men at other points have not quit, or that they have returned to work. Such information should be discounted and all strikers should apply to their officers and committeemen for information, and be governed accordingly, and no member or nonunion man will return to work until the strike is officially declared off, when all will return at the same time, without prejudice and with all former rights.

Duties of Local Chairmen.

"1. The local chairmen of each organization on each division of railroad will jointly supervise the prosecution of the strike on the territory over which they have jurisdiction.

"2. Local chairmen are expected to keep in close touch with the situation and will report daily, preferably by night telegram letter, to their representative general chairmen as to the condition of affairs."

Brotherhood chiefs and other union leaders held their final session in the Masonic temple yesterday.

"LIFE OR DEATH BATTLE"

"We're going out on the greatest strike this country has ever known," said W. G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen. "We are determined to stop this constant encroachment on our rights."

Other leaders refused to discuss the outlook, and none of them would reveal what had transpired at the final joint conference in the Masonic temple.

Brotherhood headquarters have been established here, in the Consumers building, State and Quincy streets, but union leaders refused to admit these are to be strike headquarters.

President Lee of the trainmen was the only union chief who would discuss the crisis.

"It's a fight to the finish, life or death," he said. "Perhaps it is a fight to our death, but we are not going into it blindly. We are ready."

Reports indicated many of the railroads represented Friday at the Blackstone hotel meeting of the Association of Railway Executives had, in accordance with the decision reached at this meeting, drafted thirty day notices of wage reductions and that these will be served on their employés at once.

This procedure — as well as subsequent unsuccessful conferences with employés — is required before the wage reduction issue can be brought before the United States railroad labor board. The railway executives are pledged to pass on to the public in rate reductions any wage decrease authorized by the labor board.

SUPPORT BY MANUFACTURERS

The Illinois Manufacturers' association last night issued a statement, signed by George R. Meyercord, president, urging support of the railroads in the present crisis. It read:

"Every person connected with a firm, corporation, or individual carrying a membership in the Illinois Manufacturers' association is urged to use his influence to sustain the position taken by the railroad executives at their meeting in Chicago at the Blackstone hotel Oct. 14 for a reduction in freight rates.

"The proposed reduction will be brought about by a decrease of an additional 10 per cent in wages, making a total reduction of 22 per cent, the benefit of which the shippers will receive.

"Your directors have been working for almost a year to bring about an adjustment of freight rates. On Sept. 13 they had a conference with the executives of railroads entering Illinois and informed the carriers that many commodities could not move under existing tariffs.

"The result was the appointment of a joint committee [representing the association and the carriers]. This joint committee had a meeting on Sept. 29 and decided upon a plan. The suggestion of the directors was that the public should get the benefit, through a reduction in freight rates, of all further reduction in wages.

Wages Out of Proportion.

"The deflation in our own industrial labor, which has been secured at such frightful costs, will have been in vain is the railroad shop craft labor is sustained as a preferred class. Their wages are much out of proportion with the wages of men in manufacturing enterprises.

"A healthy public sentiment is necessary, and it is the duty of everyone engaged in business to try to bring about an equitable adjustment of wages, and also prices of materials."

To those who expressed surprise that the railway executives should have "walked right into the enemy's camp" and issued their announcement while brotherhood chiefs were considering a strike on the 12 per cent wage cut of July 1, a railway president last night gave explanation.

"We knew this thing had to be thrashed out sooner or later, and the sooner the better," he said. "We knew wages must come down more before there can be rate reductions, and all agree freight rate decreases are imperative.

"At the conference with President Harding, Secretary of Commerce Hoover and other officials last week, a committee of the Association of Railway Executives pledged railroads to make every effort to reduce freight rates. There is only way in which this can be done, and it was so stated at the Washington conference."

The union leaders, who now seem bent on waging a last ditch fight, are armed with the strongest strike vote ever polled by the brotherhoods as a whole.

The union heads are empowered to veto this strike verdict, and it seemed a foregone conclusion they would do this. But the declaration issued by the railway executives on Friday brought a new crisis.

REDUCED FREIGHT RATES ON COAL IS URGED ON ROADS

Washington, D. C., Oct. 15.—[Special.]—Immediate reduction in freight rates on coal is urged in a telegram sent by W. R. Coyle, president of the American Wholesale Coal association, to A. P. Thom, general counsel of the Association of Railway Executives, in Chicago. Mr. Coyle's telegram says:

"Our customers, the consumers of coal, are asking why their coal remains so high. You and we know that coal has come down and that lower prices to them can come only with lower rates.

"A considerable rate reduction is the only move at this time which will gain the entire support of the public for a further wage reduction. When the American public knows the facts, there will be no danger from a national strike."

PRESIDENT ACTS TO PREVENT RAIL STRIKE DISASTER

Confers with Members of Labor Board.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 15.—[Special.]—President Harding, alarmed over the calling of the railroad strike by the brotherhood chiefs at Chicago, is seeking to do what he can to prevent it.

Within an hour after receiving dispatches announcing the call of the strike, it was announced that the President had summoned from Chicago the three public members of the railroad labor board—Judge R. M. Barton of Cincinnati, former Gov. Ben W. Hooper of Tennessee, and G. Wallace Hanger—who reached the White House early this morning.

After a brief conference the President accompanied them to the offices of the interstate commerce commission, called into session to receive them. The President remained for ten minutes.

White House Statement.

A statement issued at the White House did not mention specifically the threatened strike, but in explaining the purpose of the joint conference said:

"The purpose of the meeting was a broad consideration of the possibility of an early adjustment of railroad rates and wages, in the expectation that it would contribute to the industrial revival."

It was indicated that the situation precipitated by the virtual decision of the employés' unions had brought Mr. Harding's plan to a head. It was assumed that the strike proposal formed the principal topic of discussion at the conference.

Organization of Board.

"The railway labor board, created by the Cummins-Esch act," the official statement contiues, "comprises nine members in three groups of three each. The public group are named by the President; the labor group are named from a list nominated by the railway labor organizations, and the managing group from a list of nominees named by the railway executives.

"The board is authorized generally to deal with the labor, wage and working conditions that concern the employés of the railways and is given, in some directions, rather broad powers.

"In asking the members of the public group to meet him the president was moved by the desire to accomplish what he hopes may be important results as early as possible. Recognizing that the labor group and also the managing group are in the nature of things partisans of the respective elements which they represent, the president felt that it was unnecessary to invite these two groups because their attitudes would necessarily be partisan in any consideration of wage questions.

The Attitude of Partisanship.

"The labor group could be expected to advocate maintenance of the highest possible wages, while the managing group could equally be expected to insist that wages ought to be reduced.

"It was, therefore, the president's opinion that the most prompt and effective results might be secured by simply calling in the public group, which is concerned equally with the interests of labor, of management, of shippers, and of the general community.

"The president has been impressed that a somewhat anomalous situation surrounds the relations of the interstate commerce commission and the railway labor board. The interstate commerce commission has very large powers, through its control of rates, to determine what the revenues of the railroads should be, while the railway labor board, through its authority in the matter of wage determination, has a very large power in determining the largest item of railway expenditures.

Why Meeting Was Called.

"The President was, therefore, impressed with the desirability of getting these highly potential bodies together, and reaching something like a definite understanding between them. It is a fact, not entirely without interest, that these two bodies have never officially met together.

"For a long time there has been given much attention to the problem of the railroads in its broadest relations. He has been persistently assured on one side that business could not make a general and lasting improvement until railroad rates should come down, and on the other side, he has been told that it was impossible for rates to come down until the wage charge should be lowered. He, therefore, determined to get together the two public bodies which have to deal with wages and rates and give them every possible encouragement to take a strong lead in the effort at an adjustment."

Conference Lasts All Day.

The conference, which the White House later announced had been called primarily for the purpose of a broad consideration of an early adjustment of railroad rates and wages, continued until evening, when adjournment was taken until Monday afternoon.

No announcement was made, but it was indicated in official quarters that an extraordinary effort would be made to agree upon some sort of a plan whereby the interstate commerce commission and the railroad labor board would coöperate in a readjustment of freight rates and wages and to avert the strike.

In official quarters generally the strike call was a signal for excitement and alarm. At the capitol it was informally discussed, and Senator Cummins, chairman of the interstate commerce committee, declared that the issue should be left by both sides to the railroad board.

"Such a strike would prove an unspeakable disaster," he said. "Its effect on business conditions and the country generally is horrible to contemplate. It would add materially to the immense difficulties already presented."

JAPAN'S NAVY MAY SURPASS OURS BY 1928

Tokio Secretly Building a Large Fleet.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 15.—[Special.]—Japan is embarked upon a construction program which will give her a navy nearly equal in fighting power to that of the United States by 1928.

On the basis of the acknowledged extent of the program the Japanese navy in the making will be only 20 per cent inferior to the American navy. There is, however, a secret Japanese building program, the extent of which is not known, which may establish a complete parity of the two navies, if not a Japanese superiority.

An elaborate comparison of the navies of Great Britain, the United States, and Japan made by Col. Sidney Ballou, treasurer of the Navy league, shows in detail the present and prospective strength of the great naval powers and sheds new light on the armament competition which the forthcoming Washington conference is designed to halt.

Ballou Discusses Statistcs.

"Taken as a whole," Col. Ballou says, "Great Britain is now well in the lead. Upon the completion of the programs now under way the United States, with substantially the same tonnage, will have a slight superiority due to the larger number of modern vessels. Japan's navy will be about 80 per cent of the strength of either of the others.

"This disparity, however, is principally in older ships, so that, for example, if vessels carrying twelve inch guns should be considered obsolescent by the time all ships now authorized were finished, and comparison of capital ships confined to thirteen and one-half inch, fourteen inch, and sixteen inch guns, Japan's relative strength would be materially increased. Any closer comparison involves such a complexity of factors as to resolve itself merely into a matter of opinion. France and Italy are not in the race to maintain supremacy in sea power."

America Vs. Japan.

Here is Col. Ballou's comparison between America and Japan as to the great ships which constitute the backbone of a navy:

"We excel in older ships, but the margin rapidly decreases with more modern construction. The Settsu is the only vessel old enough to carry twelve inch guns, as against six of our earlier dreadnaughts. Following this Japan built four battleships and four armored cruisers, giving her eight ships armed with fourteen inch guns as against eleven American battleships. The post-Jutland programs of both countries call for sixteen vessels, each armed with sixteen inch guns. Our three year program, adopted in 1916, will give up ten battleships and six armored cruisers. Japan's 'eight-eight' program, as the name implies, calls for an equal number of each type.

"Japan's last four battle cruisers are not yet laid down, but her budget calls for their completion before 1928. Twelve of our sixteen are proceeding under reduced appropriations, the battleships at about 25 per cent of capacity speed and the battle cruisers at about 50 per cent, and their date of completion is officially designated as indefinite.

If Our Fleet Is Divided.

"In grand total Japan will have 76 per cent of our number of capital ships in a fleet at least two knots faster and 83 per cent of our capital strength measured in tonnage. Her fleet is of course superior to either our Atlantic or Pacific fleet taken separately.

"If strategic conditions in the Pacific are to be taken into consideration the heavy disadvantage of either fleet being compelled to fight on the opposite side of the ocean without adequate bases must be given considerable weight in a comparison of material strength.

A comparison of the big ships of the three navies by classes, built and building, follows:

	Gt. Britain.		Utd.States.		Japan.
	Built....	Building.	Built....	Building.	Built....	Building.
Battleships, first line....	26	0	18	6	6	7
Battle cruisers, first line.....	6	4	0	6	4	8
Battleships, second line...	6	0	15	0	4	0
Battle cruisers, second line...	4	0	0	0	0	0
Cruisers, first line.....	2	0	0	0	0	0
Cruisers, second line...	4	0	10	0	5	0
Light cruisers, first line...	45	4	0	10	9	14
Light cruisers, second line...	14	0	3	0	1	0

"In firm adherence to the idea that all old mixed battery battleships are obsolete, Great Britain has ruthlessly scrapped not only every pre-dreadnaught, but the original 'dreadnaught itself, while half a dozen more of the older vessels still on the list are marked 'for disposal.'" Col Ballou adds.

"The United States is still holding in reserve the semi-dreadnaughts Michigan and South Carolina, the six Connecticuts and five New Jerseys, a powerful secondary fleet, though useless against dreadnaughts. Japan has four old battleships of similar type.

Battle Cruisers a Necessity.

"The war seemed to demonstrate the importance of battle cruisers in their special line of work, and their weakness in taking part in a pitched engagement with battleships. A well proportioned navy should, therefore, have both, and Great Britain has finally decided that her four ships just authorized shall be of the Hood type, classified as powerful battle cruisers."

On the all important subject of the personnel to man the ships, Col, Ballou says:

"Great Britain has 123,700 regularly enlisted men and 10,158 officers at present in her navy. Japan has 68,800 men and 7,430 officers, with provision for increase with the commissioning of new ships up to a maximum of 140,000 men at the completion of her 'eight-eight' program.

"The United States has at present 106,000 men and 8,727 officers, with no provision for increase with the completion of our 'three year' program. France has 50,000 men and 3,730 officers. Both Great Britain and Japan have a more numerous and better organized reserve than has the United States."

PARKER ADMITS EVASION TO HIDE CO-OP SHORTAGE

Declares He Is Ready to Tell "Whole Truth."

Harrison Parker, trustee and chief factotum of the Coöperative Society of America, yesterday confessed to Federal Judge Evans that he had "evaded as much as possible" in the bankruptcy hearings on the society in an effort to conceal a shortage of $117,000 in the books of the Great Western Securities corporation, fiscal agents for the organization. He is now ready "to tell the whole truth," he declared.

At the same time it was stated that $1,450,000 of the certificates of the bankrupt Fruitvale project, turned in on Friday as part of the $7,000,000 claimed as assets by the coöperative society, were worthless.

Expect Grand Jury Action.

At the conclusion of the inquiry, Judge Evans said that the matter was one for presentation to a federal grand jury. He continued the hearings before him until Monday morning, and ordered that Parker's wife, Edith Stubbs Parker, and Charles C. Higgins, the "New York capitalist," about whose whereabouts much mystery has been created, be present when court opens.

For the first time since its beginning the investigation took on a distinct note of seriousness; for the first time, too, the cheering claque which had followed Parker from his offices ta the federal building and back again was absent.

Attorney "at Rope's End."

Attorney Julius Moses, representative of the receivers, at the conclusion of the hearing Friday evening told Parker and his cohorts that he was "at the end of his rope," and that all further testimony must be taken before Judge Evans. This statement the attorney repeated at the opening of court yesterday.

Parker's testimony was preceded by a statement form Gustave Kopp, president of the Great Western company, who was warned by Judge Evans that he had made statements which later might be made the basis of a criminal action.

"If you testify here it must be done with the knowledge that anything you may say later may be used against you," the judge declared.

Says Parker Had Free Hand.

Kopp then said that he was very much in ignorance in regard to the affairs of his company, having imposed such "trust" in Parker that he allowed him to do virtually what he pleased.

The early part of Parker's testimony concerned the receipt of a letter from Mrs. Parker containing securities last Monday. Parker previously had refused to divulge much concerning the missive. Yesterday he told all about it. Then he said:

"Judge, I have been as evasive as I possibly could be ever since the lawsuit was started in order that I might check the accounts of the organization.

"I knew the accounts were $117,000 short. I knew that if that fact came out in the newspapers a prejudiced opinion would be formed which would give me very little show.

Finds Omissions on Books.

"I immediately got to work on the books and found that $25,000 paid to the Wisconsin Pea Canners' association was not recorded and another item of $75,000 to the same company was not marked down.

"There was a discrepancy left between $15,000 and $17,000. This amount I made up with the aid of my wife."

"I think that I should call the district attorney and let him listen to the evidence presented and take it to the grand jury," Judge Evans said as he left the bench. "There is only one method by which an honest man should try to protect an honest business—and that is at the time when his business is questioned and he is brought to trial.

"Then he should tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth."

KEPT IT TO THEMSELVES

Pictured above is the former Miss Flora Mae Hackett, the Indiana girl who won The Tribune's prize for beauty. She now is Mrs. Royal Christansen. Mr. Christansen is a war hero, but, better than that, he has been the constant sweetheart of his wife since they were children.

MISS FLORA MAE HACKETT of Monon, Ind., winner of THE TRIBUNE contest grand prize of $10,000 as the most beautiful girl in the central states and recipient of hundreds of proposals as the result of her published likeness, is married.

THE TRIBUNE discovered Miss Hackett as a beauty. And THE TRIBUNE discovered that she—

Eloped to Lake Forest on July 15 and there became the bride of Royal E. Christiansen, 1615 Farwell avenue, Rogers Park.

Confronted with "the evidence," the beautiful bride, a visitor in the home of her husband's parents, last night laughingly confessed.

"Not even Royal's parents nor my father knew until you found us out," she said.

The marriage was not the result of a hasty romance. Their first meeting was six years ago, when she was only 13 years old. She has visited many times in the Christiansen home.

Christiansen, who was wounded overseas in September, 1918, invalided to Fort Sheridan and discharged in April, 1919, is a department manager for Ross & Co., printers.

WASHINGTON NEWS IN BRIEF

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 15.

President Harding summoned public members of the railroad labor board to Washington and conferences began today to be continued Monday in an extraordinary effort to bring about a readjustment of railroad rates and wages and to avert the strike.

Secretary of State Hughes urged the American public to have confidence in the delegates to the disarmament conference and to let them work out their problems without unnecessary embarrassment.

In addressing a delegation of foreign born citizens, President Harding appealed to them to consecrate their lives to America, although they may still retain affection for their kinsfolk overseas.

Republican senate leaders, apprehensive at the growth of opposition to the new peace treaties and over the loss of an affirmative vote through the death of Senator Knox of Pennsylvania, are urging Gov. Sproul to fill the vacancy before the treaty vote is taken next week.

The bureau of mines announces that the University of Illinois has discovered a process for obtaining a good grade of coke and coal from coals which heretofore seemed devoid of coking properties.

Legislative representatives of trades unions in Washington adopted resolutions of opposition to what they charge is a conspiracy to destroy the department of labor by amalgamating it under the government reorganization plan with the proposed department of public welfare.

MEDICAL CENTER OF CITY TO HAVE 500 ROOM HOTEL

$2,500,000 Structure to Be Built on West Side.

BY AL CHASE.

Chicago's great medical center on the west side, internationally famous for practically everything but its hotel accommodations, at last after about twenty years of talk is to have a magnificent $2,500,000 fourteen story 500 room hotel-hospital. It will be called the Franmore and will be at the northwest corner of Jackson boulevard and Wood street. According to the architects, Berlin, Swern & Randall, work will start in six weeks. This means that Chicago's first high class large hotel between the loop and Elgin will be open about Oct. 1, 1922.

Leading Chicago physicians agree that such a hotel not only will add to the prestige of the city as a medical center but it will prove a great benefit to the seventeen medical institutions, with their 2,677 beds, grouped in the neighborhood, by relieving congestion and enabling them to care for more patients.

Bevan Praises Project.

"I believe that a hotel such as the Franmore, built in the medical center of Chicago, would be of immense service in accommodating relatives of hospital patients and of patients who are waiting for admission to hospitals, and an excellent place for convalescents who still need medical observation," said Dr. Arthur Dean Bevan. "Properly constructed and properly conducted, it would be a definite asset here in Chicago."

Big Waiting Lists at Hospitals.

"Every hospital has a continuous waiting list, thousands being turned away every year for lack of accommodations," said Arthur J. Francis, president of the hotel company. "The Franmore will care for convalescent patients who must now be cared for by hospitals until discharged.

"The Franmore will care for regular hotel guests, relatives and friends of patients and physicians. There will be a small amphitheater for medical societies and for clinics and other gatherings, thus enlarging the possibilities of Chicago medical centers."

BEATS BURNING COAL OR WOOD.

New Burner Makes Gas in Any Stove—Burns 94% Air—Gives Twice the Heat.

A wonderful new burner which makes and burns its own gas out of common kerosene (coal oil) is the proud achievement of the International Heating Company, 4552 North Broadway, Dept. 106, St. Louis, Mo. This amazingly simple and inexpensive invention is superior to coal, wood or city gas for cooking, baking and heating, and can be set into any stove in a few minutes, making the hottest kind of blaze controlled by a simple valve. It is absolutely safe and does away with all dirt, smoke and building of fires. The recent big cut in the price of oil makes it a great money-saver. The manufacturers offer to send this remarkable invention on 30 days' trial to any reader of this paper. They make a special low price offer to one person in each locality to whom they can refer new customers. They also want agents. Write them today.—Advertisement.

JAPAN READY TO ABANDON RACE EQUALITY ISSUE

Wants Access to Large Area in Asia.

BY CHARLES DAILEY.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

YOKOHAMA, Oct. 15.—Japan is prepared to drop the race equality issue at the Washington conference on limitation of armaments and far east questions. Instead, its delegates will concentrate upon obtaining an understanding with the powers, permitting the settlement of Japan's vast excess population in Manchuria, Mongolia, and Siberia.

If this understanding is obtained Japan will not oppose the closing of the doors of the United States and Australia to its immigrants. Japan is further pledged to guarantee an open door to the sparsely populated Asiatic countries to which it seeks free access.

The Japanese delegates to the conference received their final instructions just before they sailed for America from here today on the Kashima Maru.

Seeks Three Power Treaty.

Other instructions, in brief, include the following:

Japan desires an agreement for the abolition of offensive armament in the Pacific, and prohibiting, also, future armament such as the defenses contemplated for several of the islands.

The remodeling of the Anglo-Japanese alliance into a three power treaty with America, or a five power treaty including France and Italy, guaranteeing the peace of the Pacific, will be sought. In this event the British alliance will be abrogated.

A harmonious agreement with the other powers for the territorial integrity of China, including the withdrawal of foreign troops and the abolition of extraterritoriality, will be asked. Also financial relief for China through a consortium.

STINNES TO TRY TO MAKE GERMAN RAILROADS PAY

BERLIN, Oct. 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—A leading article in today's issue of the Deutscher Allgemeine Zeitung, the organ of Hugo Stinnes, the German industrial magnate, supports recently current rumors to the effect that he is planning to take over German railways and possibly other public utilities from the state in order to run them on a paying basis.

The article declares that the refusal now to endeavor to fulfill the obligations of the Versailles treaty would be answering ".Geneva insanity with similar foolishness," and that the only thing for Germany to do is to continue working.

The article declares that the German state enjoys no credit at home or abroad and that private enterprise must come forward if the state is not to collapse.

TRUST DELEGATES ON ARMAMENT, HUGHES' REQUEST

Hopes the Public Won't Hinder Their Work.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 15.—[Special.]—Secretary of State Hughes asked the American people today to have confidence in America's delegation to the international conference on limitation of armaments to meet here Nov. 11. He wants the public to permit the delegates to perform their duties without embarrassment.

Tells of Purposes.

Writing to Miss Christiana Merriman, secretary of the Foreign Policy association and the National Council for Limitation of Armaments, a Washington clearing house for disarmament organization, Mr. Hughes said:

"You may be assured that the state department welcomes the aid of public spirited citizens in furthering the objects of the conference in limitation of armament and keenly desires to facilitate all who are engaged in the effort to give accurate information and to develop sound opinion.

"I am not sufficiently informed as to the plans of your organization to comment on them and certainly, I do not wish to be put in the position of criticizing and attempt, as you put it, to direct public interest intelligently.

Asks Public Confidence.

"Being deeply in earnest in this matter and solicitous for the success of the negotiations which involve grave difficulties and will undoubtedly afford many opportunities for misunderstanding, I am naturally anxious that the American people should place confidence in the American delegation and that those who are most interested in the objects to be attained will permit us to endeavor to attain them and to perform our respective work without unnecessary embarrassment. It is quite clear from your letter that you share this view."

URUGUAY MAY ARBITRATE PERU AND CHILE ROW

BY J. W. WHITE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 15.—Dispatches from Santiago say that the visit of Señor Buero, the Uruguayan foregin minister, continues to be the subject of much diplomatic conjecture in diplomatic and government circles.

The generally accepted idea in well informed circles is that it is directly connected with the Chilean-Peruvian differences over Tacna-Arica and is the result of conversations begun by the Chilean special embassy which recently visited Argentina, Brazil, and Uruguay. It is believed that the visit has for its object either the formation of a South American league or the calling of a Pan-American conference to consider the Tacna-Arica problem.

Peruvian newspapers controlled by President Leguia intimate that Peru is willing to participate in such a league or conference provided the United States, Argentina, and Brazil participate. Another theory is that the Uruguayan foreign office is preparing to act as an intermediary between Chile and Peru.

U. S. EMPLOYS 10 EX-SERVICE MEN IN DRY CAMPAIGN

Upon the eve of his departure for Washington, where he is to hold conference with Prohibition Commissioner Haynes, John Kjellander, chief of prohibition forces in Chicago, received word yesterday from the former empowering him to employ twenty-five additional men for work here.

Mr. Kjellander at once placed eighteen men to watch the breweries he has seized during the last few days. Ten of the additional men were ex-soldiers and the additional seven will also be ex-service men, he said.

PLAN DRY ILLINOIS.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 15.—[Special.]—John Kjellander, federal prohibition director of the Illinois district, and Assistant Director Gregory will arrive here Monday to confer with Federal Prohibition Commissioner Haynes with a view to improving the efficiency of dry enforcement methods in Illinois.

It is understood that they will seek to get the Haynes approval of a plan to divide Illinois into two enforcement districts, one made up of Chicago and immediate adjacent territory, and the other composed of "downstate" territory.

Under this plan, it is understood, Kjellander would devote his attention exclusively to enforcement in Chicago, while Gregory would take charge at Springfield.

DATE OF SMALL'S TRIAL LIKELY TO BE SET THIS WEEK

Governor's Allies Said to Be Urging Delay.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Two important moves made at Waukegan yesterday by the prosecution and conferences in Chicago of attorneys for the defense gave substantial indication that the trial of Gov. Small is to be started at the earliest possible moment. One of the strong possibilities for this week is that Judge Edwards, who will preside over the trial, will fix the definite date for its opening.

State's Attorney Mortimer of Sangamon county permitted the announcement at Waukegan that Elam L. Clark, veteran Waukegan lawyer, had been retained by the state to appear as the Lake county attorney in the prosecution of the Small-Curtis cases. This followed the word that State Representative William F. Weiss of Waukegan is to be one of the staff of assistant attorneys general serving under Attorney General Brundage.

Brundage Gets Jury Eligibles.

Early yesterday morning two representatives of Mr. Brundage appeared at the Lake county courthouse and obtained the list of 10 per cent of the voters of the county, now prepared as the current roster of citizens eligible for jury service.

It is from this list that the first veniremen will be drawn for qualification upon the jury that Gov. Small and Mr. Curtis will have to face. If this list is exhausted in seeking a jury, it will be up to the court to direct the summons of special veniremen who will come "from the body of the county," their selection for service then being largely in the hands of Sheriff Green. In the Orpet murder case more than 2,000 veniremen were examined before a jury was chosen.

No word came from the Chicago conference of the Small lawyers, beyond the reiteration that Gov. Small is "ready for trial," and that "the trial cannot start too soon to suit us."

Small's Allies Prefer Delay.

This policy is reported, politically, to be highly unsatisfactory to the inside leaders of the Cook county Lundin-Thompson machine, who are said to have been set aside as confidential advisers of the governor, in so far as his criminal trial is concerned. The rumor is credited that the governor himself wants quick action, while his political allies prefer delay until after the April primaries.

Attorney Clark, who probably will have immediate charge of selecting the jury for the state, is one of the best known lawyers of northern Illinois.

No Change in Road Fete.

George H. Bairstow, chairman of the road and bridge committee of the Lake county board of supervisors, and E. H. Clifford, secretary of the Waukegan-North Chicago chamber of commerce, yesterday said no change is to be made in the plans for celebrating the opening of the new concrete Waukegan-Chicago road because of the location of the governor's trial in Lake county.

"We have planned to invite Gov. Small of Illinois and Gov. Blaine of Wisconsin, as official representatives of the two states. We will hold it, if possible, on Armistice day, and it is probable that it will include the planting of memorial trees. The occasion will be no political love feast for anybody."

Representative J. M. Pace Resigns from Legislature

Macomb, Ill., Oct. 15.—Representative James M. Pace today filed his resignation from the Illinois general assembly. He was chairman of the committee on roads and bridges and resigned to accept the postmastership of Macomb. This is Mr. Pace's third term in the general assembly.

The highest-salaried girl in her class

WHEN she graduated from high school, she faced the usual problem. A business man suggested she study filing as a profession. She took a course at the Illinois School of Filing, where she learned every important method of filing. Today she holds a position of responsibility in a large bank. According to her high school principal, she is the highest-salaried girl in her class.

But she is only one of the many thousands of young women who have found in filing a well-paying, congenial profession. A course at the Illino School of Filing will equip ou, too, to step into a lucrative position.

This course in filing and the opportunities open to graduates, are explained in an interesting, readable booklet: "Filing as a Profession for Women." Write for your free copy or call in person. Ask for Miss Gladys Bridge principal

FOUR DEATHS IN DAY CAUSED BY AUTO ACCIDENTS

Mrs. Martha Moore, 1240 South Tripp avenue, died at the Garfield Park hospital yesterday soon after she was struck by an automobile at Crawford avenue and 14th street.

Nine year old Olga Wouk of Lyons, Ill., was instantly killed yesterday by a machine which sped away. Witnesses observed the license number, however, and Peter Stoinoff of La Grange was arrested. He denied driving the death car.

Henry Skupia, 4, 1743 West 17th street, died in St. Anthony's hospital from injuries received Friday when he was hit by a truck at 18th and Wood streets.

A coroner's jury investigating the death of Mrs. Cynthia Lundberg, 62, 1127 Wolfram street, recommended that John Scherer of 1423 Oakdale avenue, the driver of the machine which struck her, be held to the grand jury on a charge of manslaughter,

ASK 2 INQUIRIES IN BIRTH OF GIRL TO INSANE PATIENT

With Ald. John Toman announcing yesterday that State's Attorney Crowe, as well as the Chicago Medical society, will be asked to investigate conditions at the Chicago state hospital at Dunning, the officials at the asylum declared they will "welcome all investigations."

Mrs. Mary Kral, 2440 South Sawyer avenue, a patient at the hospital, gave birth to a baby girl Aug. 20. An inmate of the institution is the father of the child.

"It is impossible to avoid an occasional occurrence of this sort where thousands of insane patients are dealt with annually," said Dr. Daniel D. Coffee, recently appointed managing officer at the hospital.

ROBBER HELD IN $100,000 BONDS.

Edward Dolfin, 8419 Kerfoot avenue, was held to the grand jury in bonds of $100,000 yesterday by Judge William N. Gemmill in the Englewood court on four charges of robbery with a revolver. He pleaded guilty.

FALL OF GREEK KING HINTED AS FOE VISITS U. S.

Venizelos Says He'll Stop in Chicago.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Oct. 15.—Former Premier Venizelos of Greece and his wife sailed for America on what will really be their honeymoon.

"One who has helped to guide his own nation's hand is never done with the study of politics while he lives," he said. "All questions affecting the welfare of humanity appeal to him and he must study them. When he ceases to do so he is dead though living.

Will Visit Chicago.

"I am visiting Washington soon after my arrival in America and I hope that I shall meet President Harding and all the leading American statesmen. After Washington we shall visit Chicago and then go to California. I hope to spend six months in the United States before returning to England via Canada."

M. Venizelos refused to discuss the rumor that he was going on a financial mission in connection with the reorganization of the Greek government.

Hear King Will Lose Job.

Rumors of the coming deposition of King Constantine are increasing in force and it is significant that M. Venizelos recently was in Paris at the same time as was Sir Basil Zaharoff, a Greek millionaire, who is said to be the maker and unmaker of Greek governments and who exercises a great influence over the policy of both Great Britain and France toward Greece.

MOVIES BRING U. OF I. CAMPUS TO OLD GRADS

Moving pictures played a feature part in two University of Illinois gatherings in Chicago yesterday.

Following a talk by Mrs. Tiffany Blake, one of the university trustees, on "Our Stadium: What It Will Mean to Us," alumnæ of that institution, meeting at the Chicago College club, were introduced via the film to members of the faculty and football squad.

Meanwhile 500 former students of Illinois had gathered at the Illini Club of Chicago's luncheon at the Morrison hotel to view cinema scenes of the campus and hear reports of the Iowa-Illinois football game.

RATIFICATION OF PEACE TREATIES IS NOT SO SURE

Outlook Worries G. O. P. Leaders.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Oct. 15.—[Special.]—Opposition to the German, Austrian and Hungarian peace treaties during the last week has quietly gained strength to such proportions that only a perilously narrow margin in favor of ratification remains.

Republican leaders, frankly worried over the outlook, want Gov. Sproul of Pennsylvania to appoint a successor to Senator Knox, who died Thursday, without a moment's delay. Senator Knox, although an "irreconcilable," was counted in favor of the treaty and his sudden death still further weakened the proponents of the pacts.

Democrats Are Wavering.

According to the latest canvass of the senate, only eleven Democrats are willing to support the treaties, and several of these are said to be wavering, despite the fact that Senator Underwood, Democratic leader, and Senator Hitchcock, leading senatorial advocate of the league of nations, favor ratification.

Senator Knox's death cuts the Republican membership of the senate to fifty-nine. Three Republicans are against the treaty. Eleven Democrats and fifty-six Republicans make a total of sixty-seven senators favoring ratification, or just three more than the necessary two-thirds of the senate.

May Change Their Minds.

There is also a chance that some of the opponents of the treaty will change their minds before the final roll coll, but Republican leaders are taking no unnecessary risks. They expect Gov. Sproul to make the appointment of Senator Knox's successor Monday. It is understood that the place has been offered to State Senator William E. Crow, and if he accepts he probably will be able to reach Washington in time to vote on the treaties.

The German treaty will be brought up Monday and will be given the right of way over all other legislation, including even the tax bill.

TRIBUNE DEMURRER IN $10,000,000 CITY HALL SUIT UPHELD BY JUDGE FISHER

COURT RULING AGAINST CITY IN LIBEL CASE

Opinion Holds There Is No Cause for Action.

name of a municipality the number of suits would be governed only by political expediency."

Takes Up Falsity Contention.

Toward the conclusion of his opinion, Judge Fisher commented upon Attorney Cleveland's contention that the statements published by THE TRIBUNE were false.

"Finally, it is argued that the demurrer admits the allegations in the declaration are false and to sustain it would be sanctioning falsehood," he said.

"It is not the sanctioning of falsehood, it is the protection of the right to speak the truth, the exercise of which right would become very hazardous if actions such as this could be maintained. For fear of publishing an occasional falsehool accidentally, men would refrain from telling the truth.

"The court has no more sympathy with newspapers indulging in scandal and defamation than have the most bitter assailants of the press. But the remedy is not to be found in new laws suppressing publication.

"Such laws would merely result in suppressing the only remedy for the evil—publication of the truth even of the press."

Duty of Press to Community.

The court also dwelt upon the good and bad qualities of the press as a whole, its duties to the community and the nation, the good faith with which it performs those duties, and the consequences that befall from disregard or violation of those duties.

"Fortunately," he said, "while the good the press is capable of rendering, if unafraid, is without limit, the harm it can do has its own limitations.

"The press is dependent for its success, for its very existence, almost, upon public confidence. It must cater to public sentiment even as it labors to build it up. It cannot indulge long in falsehoods without suffering the loss of that confidence from which alone comes its power, its prestige, and its reward.

"On the other hand, the harm which would certainly result to the community from an officialdom unrestrained by fear of publicity is incalculable."

After Judge Fisher had rendered his decision Corporation Counsel Ettelson and Mr. Cleveland held a conference in the former's office.

"We have decided to make no comment except to say that we think Judge Fisher's decision is wrong," Mr. Ettelson said. "We will take immediate steps to appeal the case."

TEXT OF DECISION

Following is the text of Judge Fisher's decision holding the city has no cause of action in its $10,000,000 libel suit against The Tribune:

This matter came up and argument was heard on the general and special demurrers filed by the defendant to plaintiff's declaration. The declaration consists of one count and avers that plaintiff is a municipal corporation having within its corporate limits a population of about 3,000,000 people; that it owns, maintains, and operates a large variety of properties aggregating in value more than $350,000,000; that in order to maintain these properties it expends annually about $50,000,000; that it is obliged to purchase large quantities of supplies and materials through competitive bids; that it stands in need of good financial credit; that it was engaged in the making of extensive public improvements, the cost of which is largely defrayed by issues of its bonds which are sold on the open market; that whatever affects injuriously the credit of the municipality increases the cost of supplies and lowers the rate at which its bonds are sold; that the city has numerous special funds, such as the traction fund, water fund, etc., which are separate and distinct from its corporate funds; that although there was a deficiency in the corporate fund for the year 1920, all the other special funds were solvent.

Cites Charge Against Tribune.

It further avers that the defendant, the Tribune company, a corporation, is the owner and publisher of a newspaper in the city of Chicago known as THE TRIBUNE, which has a daily circulation of approximately 400,000 in Cook county, and a large circulation elsewhere in the United States; that the defendant published in THE TRIBUNE concerning the plaintiff certain false, scandalous, malicious, and defamatory matter.

Then follows a large number of articles alleged to have appeared in THE TRIBUNE, which, if taken together as referring to the same subject matter, appear to have been published during a campaign for the nomination of a Republican candidate for governor of the state of Illinois. These articles were in opposition to the candidacy of one Len Small, who sought that nomination.

The opposition is mainly on the ground of his connection with this political group of which the mayor of the city of Chicago is alleged to be the dominant figure; which group it is charged has brought the city of Chicago to a state of insolvency. In different terms the article refers to plaintiff as being "broke," "bankrupt," and "insolvent," etc., all of which the declaration avers to be false and untrue.

The declarations contain the following averment:

"That all of said publications were published by the defendant with the intent and purpose to injure and impair the financial credit of the plaintiff and to give the impression and lead the readers of the said publications to believe that the management of the administrative and governmental affairs of plaintiff were conducted in a corrupt and incompetent manner."

And concludes, "by means of the committing of which said grievances by the defendant the plaintiff has been greatly injured in its good name, reputation and financial credit, and has been otherwise injured to the damage of the plaintiff in the sum of $10,000,000."

Three points are relied upon by the defendant as grounds for sustaining its demurrers:

1. The action is not maintainable. To allow a recovery would violate the freedom of the press guaranteed by the constitution;

2. The articles complained of are not libelous; and

3. [Special demurer.] Each article should have been pleaded in a separate count.

The first point raises broadly the question whether under the state of our law defamation of a municipality is actionable.

NO PRECEDENT IN U. S.

This question, so far as can be ascertained from the reported cases, has never been presented to any court of the United States and only once in England.

Manchester vs. Williams, 1 Q. B. [1891], 94.

in which case the decision was against the plaintiff on the ground that the article complained of, if libelous, was a libel against the officials and not against the municipality; and, although the court in its opinion states that a corporation, evidently meaning a municipal corporation, may sue for libel, it is of no value as a guide in the case before me, because the reasons upon which that statement is based are not given.

It is not the precedent of a foreign tribunal but the reason for the precedent alone that we look to. Moreover, cities in England are not the same as ours. English municipalities are more in the nature of private corporations than governmental agencies.

City vs. Hasley, 25 Ill. 485; Howland vs. Maynard, 159 Mass. 434; Mount Pleasant vs. Beckwith, 100 U. S. 514; 1 Dillon on Municipal Corporations, 3d Ed., Sec. 28-29.

The question, therefore, whether governmental bodies can sue for libel could not have been considered by the court in that case.

Holds Cited Case Not in Point.

The case of Chinese association vs. Chinese Newspaper company, 13 British Columbia 141, cited by plaintiff as an authority, is not in point. It simply decides that a nontrading corporation may sue for libel. The rest is obiter dicta. The questions here involved were not considered in that case.

I found no direct opinion of any commentator upon the subject. An examination of the early English law was helpful only to the extent of pointing out the necessity of avoiding its principles. Its history, like the history of the laws relating to publicity in most of the European states, tells a large part of the story of the struggles for human liberty. It is a succession of repressive measures with varying degrees of inhuman penalties on the one hand and a stubborn resistance to them by the champions of liberty on the other.

Every instrument which genius devised to facilitate the spread of knowledge was regarded as a new monstrosity to be kept in check. The printing press brought forth laws limiting the number of printers, the number of presses, prohibiting the importation of books, censorship, licensing, stamp laws, registration, and every other form of restriction which the despotic rulers and their ever ready allies, tyrannical judges, could devise.

The Star Chamber did not hesitate to assume jurisdiction and set its machinery in motion in aid of the worthy efforts of the other departments of state and church against the diabolical efforts of spreading information.

Feared the Newspapers.

The newspaper seems to have been particularly feared. To collect and publish news could not be regarded as an honest occupation, and therefore, to circulate news was as dishonorable as to circulate lies. Scroggs, C. J., in R. vs. Harris 7 St. Tr. 929, tells the jury that:

"All the judges met at the king's command and held that all persons that do write or print or sell any pamphlet that is either scandalous to public or private persons, such books can be seized, and the person punished by law. And all writers of news, though not scandalous, seditious nor reflective upon the government or the state, yet if they are writers [and there are few others] of false news, they are indictable and punishable on that account;"

And in R. vs. Carr, 7 St. Tr. 1127, the same judge again lays down the law as follows:

"When by the king's command we were to give in our opinion what was to be done in point of the regulation of the press, we did all subscribe, that to print or publish any news, books or pamphlets of news whatsoever is illegal; that it is a manifest intent to the breach of the peace, and that they may be proceeded against by law for an illegal thing. Though the thing is not scandalous, yet it is illicit and without authority, and the author ought to be corrected for it."

Special Laws to Suppress Papers.

Special laws for the suppression and regulation of newspapers were enacted by parliament. Laws for the protection of the king and the great men of the realm were made the basis of both civil and criminal prosecutions. The truth was no defense.

Happily, we have not inherited this part of the common law or statutes of England.

Cooley's Constitutional Limitations, 515 and 531.

The English common law and certain parliamentary acts which are of a general nature have been adopted as a rule of decision for the courts of our state, but only in so far as the same is applicable to the habits and condition of our society, and is in harmony with the genius, spirit, and objects of our institutions.

Boyer vs. Sweet, 4 Ill., 120.
Stuart vs. People, 4 Ill., 395.
Chap. 28, Hurd's Revised Statutes of Illinois.

But the mere fact that no precedent exists for such an action as this, though a circumstance worthy of consideration as indicating that the legal profession did not believe in its existence, for, surely, similar causes for complaint were not uncommon in this country, is not, of itself, sufficient ground for denying the right of action.

A remedy is to be found in law for every wrong unless the granting of the relief comes in conflict with the express provisions of our constitution or with some well recognized principle of public policy.

Cites the Constitution.

Section 4, Article II of the constitution of 1870 provides:

"Every person may freely speak, write, and publish on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that liberty; and in all trials for libel, both civil and criminal, the truth, when published with good motives and justifiable ends, shall be a sufficient defense."

This is a broad, sweeping guarantee of the enjoyment of a great liberty, and inhibits interference therewith by legislative enactment or judicial interpretation, whether the restraint is attempted in the form of license, censorship, etc., before the publication, or by way of criminal prosecution or civil damages subsequent to the publication.

Cooley's Constitution Limitations 520; Chaffey 32 Harv. Law. Rev.; Shang vs U. S. 249.

To a law-abiding people, the form of legal restraint does not matter. If one must answer to the law for an act, he is not at liberty to engage in it. If he is subject to penalties, it is as much a prohibition as if he is required to obtain a license. Cooley, on page 520, says:

"The liberty of the press might be rendered a mockery and a delusion and the phrase itself a by-word, if, while every man was at liberty to publish what he pleased, the public authorities might nevertheless punish him for harmless publications."

Seeks Only to Protect Rights.

The constitution does not assume to create new rights; it recognizes certain rights already existing which it seeks to protect and perpetuate.

12 Corpus Juris 710; Cooley's Constitution Limitations 514.

It is, therefore, necessary to ascertain what were the abuses that the framers of the constitution had in mind and for which responsibility is provided. That was not left altogether to the discretion of the legislature and the courts. If it were the entire article could be made impotent by defining everything that is desired to be restrained as an abuse. It is clear that what they had in mind were those abuses which were recognized by law as such, and it is not very difficult to ascertain what they were.

The freedom of speech and of the press was, at the very inception of our government, regarded as indispensable to a free state.

Cooley's Constitutional Limitations 512.

We had before us the experience which history recorded in words of blood of the futility of the attempts to suppress it. The force which urged men to freely express their thought, even at the risk of life itself, could no more be controlled by authority than would a normal mind obey the command to cease functioning. Torture and death brought forth only a more positive assertion of the right. Those who attempted to check this passion were branded by history as barbarians and tyrants.

4 DIVISIONS OF RESTRAINT

Patterson in his book on the "Liberty of the Press, Speech, and Public Worship," pp. 4, says:

"They [meaning the forces which endeavored to suppress freedom of speech] have learned that it is idle, impotent, and vain to continue the conflict longer on the old basis; and, therefore, they admit that the primary right of all men is to think and say what they like both about themselves and everybody else, and for this simple and all sufficient reason that no power known to mankind has been discovered strong enough to compel them to abstain. All that remains, therefore, is to see in what direction and on what conditions the feeble restraints left available can be brought to bear."

It was these "feeble restraints left available" that the framers of the constitution had in mind as the abuses for which responsibility was reserved. They are to be found under four great heads—namely: Blasphemy, immorality, sedition, and defamation.

Ex parte Harrison 212 Mo. 83; Patterson on Liberty of the Press, etc., 5; Cooley's Constitutional Limitations 521. Hammond's Blackstone's Com. [1890] 151

By the way, while Blackstone says that these restraints apply only to previous restraints, nevertheless, it proceeds to say that the restraints are only possible when they come under those four heads.

Libel Affects Only "Private Persons."

In speaking of the last mentioned permissible restraint Patterson, pp. 6, says:

"While the restrictions already mentioned which are founded on blasphemy, immorality, and sedition show the boundaries of free speech and thought as affecting the public generally, there is a fourth limit, on the other hand, as affecting individuals, known under the head of libel or the invasion of the reputation of private persons."

It will thus be noticed that defamation or libel is that class of prohibited publications which affect only private persons.

In determining, therefore, whether a publication is libelous or not it is not sufficient to examine the character of the words written or printed, but it is necessary also to ascertain whom it affects. If it is concerning a private person, any words which affect him injuriously, within the meaning of the law, is actionable. Not even the truth is a defense unless it is published with good motives and justifiable ends.

APPLIES LAW TO THIS CASE

But when the words spoken affect the public nothing is actionable, either civilly or criminally, unless it comes within those narrow fields, in which all who are decent and possess a sense of reverence and loyalty have agreed it would be overstepping the bounds of freedom to travel without restraint. These fields, as has been seen, are: Blasphemy, immorality, and sedition. No matter how false, how defamatory, or how injurious publications may be which affect the public, if they do not fall within one of these three categories they go unrestrained.

We are not here concerned with blasphemy or immorality. If the articles complained of are neither seditious nor libelous, they are unrestrained.

It is admitted by plaintiff that they are not seditious. But if they are utterances affecting the public, and are not seditious, then they are not actionable, because the only other prohibited publications are those which affect private persons. Do they not, in fact, belong to that vast field of utterances affecting public affairs which do not come within the narrow confines of sedition and, therefore, remain free from any interference?

An examination of some of the reasons which led to the distinction made by law between publications affecting the public and those affecting private persons will be helpful in finding the answer to this question.

Government for the Governed.

In a free state every part of government, general or local, exists for the good of the governed and not for the governors. The governed, who constitute it, participate through their representatives in the whole machinery of government. The public business is the business of all the citizens, and the officials having direct charge from time to time are but their servants managing their affairs for their good.

The worthy citizen takes an interest in these affairs as he does in his personal matters, and holds his representatives strictly accountable for their stewardship. He retains the absolute right in common with the other citizens to change his servants. He comments, criticizes, censures, and praises, as he desires, to obtain service in conformity with his conception of public good, as well as to advise with the other citizens on the necessity or desirability of a change.

So long as he does that without advocating unlawful means or inciting a breach of the peace, he is not only within his absolute rights but he is performing a public duty.

COVERED BY STATE LAW

The law has, therefore, made the prohibited field for public comment very narrow, and it is now clearly defined so that it may be known what the limitations are.

In our state the statute fully covers it.

Section 265-a and 265-b. Chapter 38, Hurd's Rev. Statutes.

"It shall be unlawful for any person to advocate openly, by word or writing, the reformation or overthrow, by violence or any other unlawful means, of the representative form of government now secured to the citizens of the United States and the several states by the constitution of the United States and the constitutions of the several states."

"It shall be unlawful for any person to publish, issue, or knowingly sell or distribute any book, paper, document, or other written or printed matter which advocates crime and violence as a means of accomplishing the reformation or overthrow of the constitutional representative form of government so secured to the citizens of the United States and the several states."

Other sections follow to the same effect with reference to acts other than spoken or written words.

Similar Provisions for U. S.

Similar provisions are made by the congress of the United States for the protection of the federal government. In fact, it seems to be the law now generally accepted in England and in other states of the Union, in the absence of statutory definitions, that seditious libel is limited to publications which advocate the reformation or overthrow of the existing government by other than lawful means.

It is clear, therefore, that the articles complained of, though spoken of the municipality and, therefore, affecting the public, do not come within the prohibited field, and by reason, as well as by specific legislative enactment, belong to that class of utterances the freedom of which the constitution guarantees, unless, by some legal fiction, the plaintiff is to be regarded, for the purpose of this suit, as a private person, in which event the publications are defamatory and libel would lie.

Definition of Libel.

Libel, as defined by our statutes, is, in conformity with the principles of law generally accepted, applicable only to private persons or corporations. It is defined as follows:

"A libel is a malicious defamation, expressed either by printing, or by signs or pictures, or the like, tending to blacken the memory of one who is dead, or to impeach the honesty, integrity, virtue or reputation or publish the natural defects of one who is alive, and thereby to expose him to public hatred, contempt, ridicule or financial injury."

Sec. 177, Chap. 38, Hürd's Revised Statutes.

This definition, though only to be found in the Criminal Code, has been held to govern civil libel.

Foster vs. Bone, 28 Ill. App. 813; Beeson vs. Gooleard, 167 Ill. App. 83; Ogren vs. Rockford Star, 288 Ill. 405.

Private corporations may sue for libel.

Willfred Coal Co. vs. Sapp, 193 Ill. App. 400, and cases cited: Cross Coal Co. vs. Rose, 2 L. R. A. [N. S.] 741; Ohio and M. Ry. Co. vs. Press P. Co. 48 Fed. 206; Odgers on Libel and Slander [1912] 591-593; Howell on Slander and Libel [1914] Sec. 448; Brayton vs. Cleveland Special Police Co. 52 L. R. A., 525 and notes.

And it is argued by plaintiff that a municipal corporation in this state stands in precisely the same position as a private corporation so far as its property and property rights are concerned. Wagner vs. Rock Island, 146 Ill. 139 and People vs. Chicago, 256 Ill. 558, are relied on as authority.

SIFTS CITY'S AUTHORITIES

In the first case, which was a bill in chancery seeking a construction of certain municipal ordinances with reference to the water works of the municipality and to enjoin the enforcement of certain rates, the court held that the supplying of water was an enterprise, which, though impressed with a public use, may under proper legislative authority be carried on by a municipality, or by a private corporation. That when a municipal corporation undertakes to operate such an enterprise, it does so in the exercise of its private and not governmental function. The opinion quotes approvingly from I. Dillon on Municipal Corporations, Sec. 27:

"In one sense such powers are public in their nature, because conferred for public advantage. In another sense they may be considered private, because they are such as may be and often are conferred upon individuals and private corporations, and result in a special advantage or benefit to the municipality, as distinct from the public at large."

Quotes from Another Case.

It further quotes the following from "Appeal of Brumm, 12 Atlantic Reporter, 855":

"In separating the two powers—public and private—regard must be had to the object of the legislature in conferring them. If granted for public purposes exclusively, they belong to the corporate body in its public, political, or municipal character; but if the grant was for private advantage and emolument, though the public may derive a common benefit therefrom, the corporation quo ad hoc is to be regarded as a private company. It stands upon the same footing as would any individual or body of persons upon whom the like special franchises had been conferred."

APPLIES LAW TO CITY

There is nothing in this case which even, hints at the proposition that in the management of its affairs or in all matters where its property is affected, a municipality can throw off its character of a public governmental agency. It has certain rights and obligations in conection with specific undertakings which the legislature specially conferred upon it, instead of upon private corporations, which, because the undertaking may be carried on by a private individual or corporation, is, when carried on by a municipal corporation, regarded as not an exercise of a governmental function, and is governed by the same rules of law which would govern private companies; but the municipality remains a political, public body.

Quite on the contrary, with reference to this private enterprise, the court holds:

"Though not an exercise of the powers of sovereignty, it is undoubtedly a business which is public in its nature, and belongs to that class of occupations or enterprises upon which a public interest is impressed."

Basis of Public Interest.

It would therefore seem that this case carefully analyzed and applied to the case at bar is rather an authority for the proposition that the right of citizens to freely comment upon public matters extends even to those enterprises which, though undertaken by a municipality as a private function, become nevertheless impressed with a public interest.

The public interest follows not only from the public use, but, also, from the right to prevent waste, inefficiency and corruption in connection with its management by public officials. As counsel for defendant so well suggested, the wider the scope those semi-private or quasi-public undertakings assume, the greater becomes the opportunity for waste, corruption, favoritism and political manipulation, and, therefore, the more reason for the widest latitude for public criticism and comment.

Isolation Hospital Case Cited.

In the second case, People vs. Chicago, the city was fined for employing a woman in the isolation hospital in violation of the woman's ten hour law, which the statutes made specifically applicable to public institutions. The court held that the hospital was one of those enterprises which do not come within the governmental functions of the city, and, therefore, that

"In securing performance of specific duties imposed upon municipal corporations the state has the same power of coercion and the same method of redress for nonperformance as in the case of individuals."

The opinion specifically holds that municipalities are governmental agencies. There is nothing in this case which in the remotest way suggests that under any circumstances could the interest of the citizen in the condition and management of the municipality be lessened, or his right to freely speak of it abridged in the slightest degree, by reason of the fact that the municipality has proprietary interests. It might be somewhat in point as indicating that a municipality can be held to answer in an action for libel.

CITY AGENCY OF STATE

Speaking of the character of Illinois municipalities in Byrne vs. Chicago General Ry. Co., 169 Ill., 75, Judge Magruder says:

"The city is but an agency of the state and governs within its sphere for the state. . . . In like manner, the government exercised by the city is exercised as an agency of the whole public and for all the people of the state. A municipal corporation, like a state or county, is within its prescribed sphere a political power.

"The city of Chicago, to the extent of the jurisdiction delegated to it by its charter, is but an effluence from the sovereignty of Illinois, governs for Illinois, and its authorized legislation and local administration of law are legislation and local administration by Illinois through the agency of that municipality."

To the same effect was the holding in Chicago Railway vs. Chicago, 292 Ill. 198.

City's Relation to Public.

In its relation to the citizens who constitute it, and their right to take that interest in its affairs which is a prerogative of citizenship, a municipality is never anything but a public political body. In the furtherance of the public good it may engage in certain private enterprises, but that can never be used as a shield to ward off adverse criticism, no matter how injurious, of the acts of its officials, of the management of its affairs, of its financial condition or of anything which might tend to keep its citizens sufficiently informed to be able to guard against abuses.

Municipalities have no character or reputation to defend. They exist to conserve order and advance the public good. They have power to make laws and provide penalties for their disobedience. They levy taxes and expend public revenue for the protection of the health, safety and morals of their citizens.

Limitation Affects Cities.

These are attributes of government, and no matter what else the legislature may empower them to do in the public interest, the rule of law which limits restraint upon the freedom of speech and of the press applies with equal force to municipalities as to the state or any political subdivision thereof.

This conclusion is inevitable whether you consider the reasons in support of the limitations of restraint on utterances affecting the public or those which support the greater inhibitions permissible on the freedom of expression affecting individuals.

These reasons are admirably stated by Patterson, page 9:

"As a general rule, therefore, the protection of one's character and reputation comes home to each more closely than any exercise of the right of censure, denunciation and criticism of third parties; and hence, freedom of speech, if nothing else is involved, must give way to the desire of maintaining reputation. It is in every way more salutary that he whose character is libeled should be protected than that he who libels should be able to speak his mind freely. Both are good, but if they clash and become incompatible, the better must be preferred."

Here we find not only the reason for a different rule affecting private persons, which cannot possibly apply to municipalities or other governmental bodies, but also a suggestion as to what should be the guiding consideration for the court in the application of the rule. He should balance good against good and prefer the better.

VALUE OF PRESS TO WORLD

Modern invention has brought the several parts of the world so closely together that the prosperity, well being, and safety of every person is more or less affected by happenings in the remotest parts. There is need of so much knowledge in our complicated social order that, unless we were advised by those who are expert in collecting information and disseminating it, we would be helpless. We would know nothing beyond our own immediate affairs.

It is, therefore, not only a great privilege, but, to my mind, a positive moral duty of those who have the facility to keep a watchful eye and to give generous expression on all public matters, the knowledge of which few citizens could obtain even when personally seeking it.

In days gone by, when knowledge on the part of the public was feared more than the plague, brave men risked their lives in the performance of this public function; but, in our day, the press has almost entirely assumed this duty, which it performs with such marvelous speed and economy that for a mere trifle the poorest citizen has the collected information delivered to his door the very day of the happening of the events, no matter how distant from his home.

World's Eyes and Ears.

The press has become the eyes and ears of the world, and, to a great extent, its voice. It is the substance which put humanity in contact with all its parts. It is the spokesman of the weak and the appeal of the suffering.

It tears us away from our selfishness and moves us to acts of kindness and charity. It is the advocate constantly pleading before the bar of public opinion.

It holds up for review the acts of our officials and of those men in high places who have it in their power to advance peace or endanger it. It is the force which unifies public sentiment.

Trade and commerce depend upon it. Authors, artists, musicians, scholars, and inventors command a hearing through its columns. In politics it is our universal forum.

But for it the acts of public benefactors would go unnoticed, impostors would continue undismayed, and public office would be the rich reward of the unscrupulous demagogue. Knowledge of public matters would be hidden in the bosoms of those who make politics their personal business for gain or glorification.

While not always unselfish, yet in every national crisis we find it constant and loyal, rendering service of inestimable value.

PRESS ROLE IN WAR

Observe the rôle it played in our recent national emergency. It was the advance agent of our treasury, and the rear guard of our army. It set us to work upon the minute and told us when our several tasks were done. It informed every soldier when and where to report for duty and gave him his instruction with reference to it.

It kept us in touch with our men in the field and carried messages of cheer and encouragement. It built up our spirits, aroused our determination, and finally had the honor of heralding in every household the joyous news of victory and peace.

Service Results in Power.

It is only natural that the rendering of such service should result in corresponding power; and power without the abuse of it is unfortunately rarely found. The press is no exception. Economic interests often lead a great portion of the press to serve the commercial elements of the community upon which it largely depends, to the detriment of the public.

But, fortunately, while the good the press is capable of rendering, if unafraid, is without limit, the harm it can do has its own limitations. The press is dependent for its success, for its very existence, almost, upon public confidence. It must cater to public sentiment even as it labors to build it up. It cannot long indulge in falsehoods without suffering the loss of that confidence from which alone comes its power, its prestige and its reward.

On the other hand, the harm which would certainly result to the community from an officialdom unrestrained by fear of publicity is incalculable.

CITY POSITION BOOMERANG

Plaintiff's counsel's own argument shows where the law which he contends for, if it were the law, would lead us to.

"Everything," he says, "which affects the city in its finance or in its property must be treated by law the same as if it were spoken of or done against a private corporation. If a libel would result in an increase of 1 cent on the cost of pencils the city could maintain an action."

It is difficult to imagine a case of adverse criticism of a municipality which could not be shown to have affected it or its property in some remote way. Moreover, if plaintiff's position is sound, does it not logically follow that criticism directed against the responsible officials of the city, which would result injuriously to the municipality, would give rise to a like cause of action on behalf of the city?

To say that a city is an unsafe place to live in because of the corruption or the inefficiency of the police department is almost certain to keep away prospective residents whose payment of taxes would otherwise enhance the city treasury.

Other Matters Affect City.

To say that the mayor of a city has no regard for contractual obligations would unquestionably keep men from bidding and contracting with the city on the same basis that they would if they were certain that they will have no trouble in enforcing the city's obligations. To charge that bribe money must be paid in order to obtain a contract from the city would result in keeping responsible bidders away and increase the bids of those who would offer it.

"To charge that political favorites are preferred in the letting of contracts for improvements will keep away many more bidders than would a charge of insolvency. For, as a matter of fact, a municipality cannot be insolvent, in the sense in which that word is ordinarily used.

At any rate, a contractor desiring the work could readily ascertain how and when the money will be forthcoming to pay the obligations of the contract, but when favoritism governs the granting of contracts he knows, if he is not of the favored few, how useless it is to bid for work.

In short, almost anything unfavorable that could be said of the government or its officeholders is likely to affect the municipality financially, just as injuriously as the charges laid against the defendant.

MISCHIEF OUTWEIGHS GOOD.

The case of Manchester vs. Williams, supra, was prosecuted on this very theory that the municipality was injured by a libel upon its officials. It is too evident to permit of doubt that, balancing good against good, the mischief which would flow from an application of the rule which would permit the city to sue as a private person would overwhelmingly outweigh the benefit which could possibly come from it.

Stripped of all the elaborate argument, in the confusion of which the question for decision might look difficult, the fact remains that, if this action is maintainable, then public officials have in their power one of the most effective instruments with which to intimidate the press and to silence their enemies. It is a weapon to be held over the head of every one who dares print or speak unfavorably of the men in power.

There are men who, in the interest of public service, would not be terrified by criminal prosecution and imprisonment. They would keep up the struggle against a corrupt government even from the cell, if the instrument for conveying their thought would remain intact.

Success Would Destroy Papers.

But the recovery of heavy damages in a civil action, or even the necessity of continually defending against such attempted recovery, would destroy the instrument itself, the newspaper. Especially would this be true in smaller communities, where the newspapers have not large means. The cost of the defense alone would be sufficient to impoverish them.

In civil actions, unlike criminal prosecutions, the jury is not the judge of the law, and a friendly judge (and such a thing is not impossible) would have the right to instruct the jury to find the defendant guilty, or, if a verdict unfavorable to the plaintiff were returned, to set it aside, and order a new trial, and continue granting new trials until a favorable verdict were obtained.

It is argued that there ought to be no greater right to criticize a municipality than to criticize public officials, because the same considerations of public policy are involved. That at best the right of the citizens to speak of the government should not go beyond fair comment and criticism; and responsibility should follow false statements of fact, as in cases of libel of officeholders and candidates for office; but the cases cited by counsel for plaintiff clearly point out the distinction between the two classes.

In Post Pub. Co. vs. Hallam, 59 Fed. Rep. 530, Judge Taft, now chief justice of the Supreme court of the United States, says:

"The existence and extent of privilege in communication are determined by balancing the needs and good of society against the right of an individual to enjoy a good reputation when he has done nothing which ought to injure it. The privilege should always cease where the sacrifice of the individual right becomes so great that the public good to be derived from it is outweighed. . . .

"We are aware that public officers and candidates for public office are often corrupt, when it is impossible to make legal proof thereof, and, of course, it would be well if the public could be given to know, in such a case, what lies hidden by concealment and perjury from judicial investigation. But the danger that honorable and worthy men may be driven from politics and public service by allowing too great a latitude in attacks upon their characters, outweighs any benefit that might occasionally accrue to the public from charges of corruption that are true in fact, but are incapable of legal proof."

DO NOT APPLY TO A CITY

None of the above considerations are involved when the action is by the municipality. While good reason exists for denying a publisher the right to print that which he cannot prove against an individual, and recklessly to pry into his personal affairs, defaming his character and reputation, no reason exists for restraining the publication, against a municipality or other governmental agency, of such facts, which, as Judge Taft puts it, is well that the public should know, even if it lies hidden from judicial investigation.

There are other differences to be found between an action by a municipality and an action by an official whose personal character and integrity is attacked.

In the one, the prosecution is at the public expense; in the other, at the personal expense of the plaintiff.

Aside from the costs involved, there is much which would cause an individual to forbear action. The honest official seldom fears criticism. He answers argument by argument, and only in extreme cases resorts to law. The dishonest official is often restrained by the fear of laying his character open to a searching judicial inquiry; but if he can hide his own infirmities by labeling his action in the name of a municipality, the number of suits would be governed only by political expediency.

Protects Right to Speak Truth.

Finally, it is argued, the demurrer admits the allegations in the declaration, and to sustain it would be sanctioning falsehood. It is not the sanctioning of falsehood, it is the protection of the right to speak the truth, the exercise of which right would become very hazardous, if actions such as these could be maintained. For fear of publishing an occasional falsehood accidentally men would refrain from telling the truth.

The court has no more sympathy with newspapers indulging in scandal and defamation than have the most bitter assailants of the press; but the remedy is not to be found in new laws suppressing publication. Such laws would merely result in suppressing the only real remedy for the evil, publication of the truth—even of the press. Judge Cooley, fifth edition, Constitutional Lim., page 530, sets forth his view very forcefully:

"They must be left at liberty to speak with the freedom which the magnitude of the supposed wrongs appears in their minds to demand, and if they exceed all the proper bounds of moderation, the consolation must be that the evil likely to spring from the violent discussion will probably be less, and its correction by public sentiment more speedy, than if the terrors of the law were brought to bear to prevent the discussion."

This action is not in harmony with the genius, spirit, and objects of our institutions. It does not belong to our day. It fits in rather with the genius of the rulers who conceived law not in the purity of love for justice, but in the lustful passion for undisturbed power. It will, therefore, be unnecessary to consider the other questions involved, and since I find that the demurrer ought to be sustained not merely because of any defect in the pleading but because no cause of action exists, nothing can be gained by amendment. The demurrer will, therefore, be sustained, and judgment will be given for the defendant.

'PRACTICAL GIRLS' TELL THE WORLD 'WHAT TO WEAR'

Camp Fire Edict Now Offered as Arbiter.

New York, Oct. 15.—While designers of women's fashions and dress reformers have been arguing, ordinary people have wondered what next, and paid bills, the camp fire girls have been trying to find out what girls who like the out of doors and want practical clothing to be practical, but not ugly, think girls should wear.

The results obtained in that organization that has 140,000 members follow:

Skirt must be 10 inches from the ground, hardly more or less, and 50 inches around the hem.

Sleeves should be sleeves, and not sleveless, extending an inch or two over the elbow.

A low neck, whether round, V or square should be high enough to convince all that it is not evening in an opera box, but a brisk day at the office or in the schoolroom.

A straight line model is best for showing off both the slim and stout figure to the best advantage.

Trimming of any sort should be indicated rather than emphasized.

The most attractive assets to any street dress are collar and cuffs.

A bit of white next to the face sets off the complexion.

Simple, But Comprehensive.

From the headquarters at 31 East 17th street her, a "questionnaire" was sent.

"What," it was asked, "are your recommendations for an ideal dress?"

The results following discussions at meetings then were communicated to Miss Helen Buck, head of the arts and crafts division.

"There was no one particular dress recommended," Miss Buck said. "For Camp Fire girls know that basis of beauty in dress is individuality. One color will go well with one girl and not at all with the next. The same thing is true of style. In some cases —from upstate—I found that the jumper dress was favored because it could be made 'different' and yet at the same time might suit all; that it was inexpensive and made up well in any material from linen to velvet; that it was hygienic.

A Versatile Dress.

"They also said it could be made to look tailor made with a belt and a business blouse for the daily occasion of work, but that it could just as well be used for dressy occasions by substituting a crêpe blouse and a silk sash.

As another hint, Miss Buck said: "If a girl can make her own hats, and we encourage and teach our girls to make their own hats and dresses, she can have as many hats as she wants."

GLADYS AGNES SEIP.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

THE elopement of Mrs. Richard E. Seip, 26, wife of a Tulsa, Okla., auto racer, with C. H. Robinson, a Kansas City motor car salesman, ended last night in tears and the detective bureau.

"I want to go back to Dick, my husband," pleaded Mrs. Seip. "I have confessed everything. He married me out of a convent when I was 15. Mr. Robinson has ruined my home."

Mrs. Seip and Robinson were arrested yesterday at Lake and La Salle when he nearly crashed his automobile into a police car.

The husband has been notified.

"NELLIE BLY" HAS BROTHER JAILED IN AUCTION SALE

New York, Oct. 15.—[Special.]—Mrs. Elizabeth C. Zaman, the writer, known as "Nellie Bly," appeared at an auction sale of furniture and antiques, which she says she collected in all parts of the world, in what she claims to be her home today and caused the arrest of her brother, Albert P. Cochrane, 62, and Paul W. Towner, 49, who is president of the Steel Barrel Company of America.

The two were arrested at the old Cochrane homestead on Beverly road, Flatbush, and locked up. For the last two days the furniture, bric-a-brac, and antiques in the residence have been under the auction hammer. A great number of things had been sold.

3,000 TO ATTEND MINING CONGRESS HERE TOMORROW

Three thousand representatives of the mining industries will attend a six-day convention of the American Mining congress opening tomorrow.

The development of a constructive industrial platform is one of the principal subjects on the program. Among those who will address the convention are C. H. Markham, president of the Illinois Central railroad; Gov. Mabey of Utah, and T. T. Brewster of St. Louis. The critical situation in West Virginia, scene of recent labor battles, will be discussed by John J. Cornwell, former governor of that state.

The National Exposition of Mines and mining equipment will be held in conjunction with the convention.

IDENTIFY THREE PARTICIPANTS IN MURDER HOLDUP

John "Plucks" Flannagan, William "Paddy" Fox, and James Burns were positively identified last night in the detective bureau as the trio who robbed the drug store of Samuel Reisman, 3601 South Halsted street, Friday night. One of the bandits shot and killed Dr. John M. Lipson, owner and chief surgeon of St. Paul's hospital.

Three witnesses of the murder, summoned by Chief of Detectives Michael Hughes, had no difficulty in picking out the three from a number of suspects brought before them.

Burns, Fox, and Flannagan were taken an hour after the slaying during a police raid on a saloon known as the "Pistol Inn" at 4100 South Dearborn street.

Hays Is Invited to Banquet Here for Postmaster

Postmaster General Hays is scheduled to speak at a banquet at the Hotel La Salle Nov. 7 in honor of Arthur C. Lueder, Chicago's new postmaster.

Five thousand invitations will be issued for the affair, which is being given by fifteen organizations of which Mr. Lueder is a member. Henry T. Carr is chairman of the general committee, while Lucius Teter and Herbert A. Cole are treasurer and secretary, respectively.

BRITAIN AT THE CONFERENCE.

The success of the conference on limitation of armaments depends primarily, as we have pointed out before, on the willingness of the powers concerned to consider the viewpoint and legitimate interests of one another.

This may be stated differently by saying that the success of the conference depends upon its good will or upon the sincerity and vigor of its will to contrive a basis upon which the great powers can live at peace in the world.

Of a general desire to be relieved of the crushing burden of armament there can be no doubt. Of a general desire to escape, so far as possible, the waste and inhumanity of war there can be no doubt. But general desires fall far short of practical results and remain futilely in the high air of aspiration, unless governments and their peoples try to look at the problems of adjustment broadly and from the different viewpoints of the parties concerned.

Thus it is important, as we have said before, that we in America and our representatives consider the needs of the nations with which we have the most difficult and vital relations. It is important that we try to see how a patriotic Japanese must feel about the Pacific situation and how a patriotic Briton must feel about relations which touch us. We have tried to outline roughly the needs of Japan. What interests has the British empire to protect and advance within the limits of the coming conference?

The first and most obvious of these is sea power. That is, the ability to insure the uninterrupted subsistence of an island population which does not support itself, and the ability to keep up communication with parts of the empire widely separated by seas, parts too small and weak to protect themselves from attack by larger neighboring nations. The British empire, moreover, is a commercial organism and lives by foreign trade. It must therefore protect its trade and hence its freedom of transport throughout the world. These considerations are and must be the foundation of British foreign policy, and we cannot expect Great Britain to make concessions which threaten this foundation.

The United States could exist, though less prosperously, without foreign trade. It is our happy fortune to be self-contained or rather self-containable. Of course, we should be seriously injured by a serious restriction of our trade expansion, and we do not intend to permit ourselves to be seriously restricted. But with England the influence of the foreign trade factor is not merely important, as with us, but paramount and essential. We may safely go farther in concession for the sake of peace and good relations than can British policy.

With its incontiguous territory, its dominions in far distant parts of the world, with its dependence upon a world-wide commerce and its dependence for actual existence upon sea communication, the British situation is much more unstable and hazardous than ours.

In the Pacific the empire is concerned for the protection of Canada, Australasia and her considerable commitments in India and China. Her subjects in Canada and Australasia have the same interest as the American people in preventing an invasion of Japanese colonists, with whom our people can neither compete nor assimilate. So far as a militant policy on the part of Japan may threaten a decision by force against the will of the English speaking peoples under the British flag, British policy must keep company with our own. Great Britain is also concerned, and more concerned probably than the United States, with a possible development of Japanese hegemony in the Asiatic continent. That, if it followed an illiberal policy, might injure our trade interests in the Far East, and eventually, though we think not probably, even involve the danger of Japanese aggression upon our own shores. But British interests in Asia are more weighty than ours, at least at the present time, so that British policy ought to be not inconsistent with our own lesser interest so far as it concerns itself with a menace of militant aggrandizement by Japan.

On the other hand, British diplomacy at the conference may not be compelled to take an unequivocal stand on these issues. We doubt if it will be. Japanese statecraft is tactful and practical, and is unlikely to force or perhaps even raise issues which would bring about an open alignment of Great Britain with us. This is foreseen, we think, in Downing street; hence the continuation of the Anglo-Japanese treaty.

Great Britain, in other words, as we see it, realizes that she is not likely to be compelled to commit herself to opposition to Japan and in this event her profit seems to lie with a policy of friendly neutrality. She is wise enough to recognize Japan's need for expansion, as we ought to be, and her effort will doubtless be to assist Japan to find a direction which shall not bring her into collision with British interests. In this effort, it seems not impossible for us to join. But meanwhile, it would be wise for us to give over the naive expectation of our Anglophiles that we can rely upon sentimental considerations to influence British policy in our favor and retain for us the benefits of a costly naval establishment. The British navy is maintained by the heavy taxation of the British people not for the protection and advantage of all English speaking peoples but for that of the British empire.

Washington, in one of his memorable utterances, reminds us that we must not expect a nation to follow any policy beyond the limit of its interest, and Americans will protect themselves from disappointment and avoid unreasonable resentment if they will foresee and weigh British policy not with regard to an illusory sentiment but with regard to the right of the British people to serve and protect their own interests. American opinion and American policy should be perverted by neither the sentimental Anglophiles nor the Anglophobes, who are so vociferous in the nation's discussions. Both should be founded on a cool acceptance of the substantial interests involved, with a clear headed recognition that it is the primary and controlling duty of governments to represent the interests of their own people who have chosen them as their trustees.

The United States had the misfortune at the Paris conference of a representative who conceived his function otherwise. At the present conference it is hoped and expected that America's substantial interests will be conserved to the best of the ability of our representatives, but this is not incompatible with a due regard for the viewpoints and interests of the other powers. In fact, in the measure that we are able and willing to give fair consideration to these viewpoints and interests and seek intelligently to assist in satisfying them, consistently with our own legitimate interests, we shall help to make the durable peace we earnestly seek.

THE TWILIGHT OF THE KINGLETS.

King Alexander of Serbia has a girl in Paris and has decided to stay there. He will hang his crown on a hickory limb and keep out of Jugo-Slavia. Fourteen thousand of his affectionate subjects have been arrested as members of an organization plotting to kill him. He is through. Jugo-Slavia may look in the situation wanted column for a king. All he wants is enough money to support life and a lady in Paris.

Part of the time while the war was being fought old King Nicholas of Montenegro supported himself in Paris by conferring stars of the third or second order of the Black Mountain or Black Eagle, being an accomplished imperial wizard and king kleagle himself.

Americans were the best customers for this wizardry and kleagling. The avowed purpose of America being to do good for humanity, it was easy to find a citizen of this country who had merited well of the Montenegrin crown and who would accept a token of gratitude. The token when forwarded would be found complete except for the ruby or other precious stone needed by requirements. This, it would be understood, was beyond the resources of Montenegro but certainly not beyond the resources of the recipient, who might, when he had purchased a stone and had it set, return the badge for inspection by the royal jeweler.

Details of the subsequent proceedings, the badge with the set stone having been returned for royal inspection, may be jumped over. If the person honored did not understand the delicacies of royal procedure he could be placated with the badge of a higher order, also without its required jewel. The person decorated might have been vague in his recollection of the distinguished services which entitled him to the first token of esteem, but he never had any doubt as to what he had done to earn the second. Both in dignity and emolument the business had many advantages over selling shoe laces or lead pencils.

There is a fringe of kings and kinglets along the Atlantic fringe of Europe, and some of them are solvent and secure, although the Spanish crown is reported to have its wings ready for a flight and H. G. Wells wants King George to become "Mr.," but gets no encouragement.

The Scandinavian kings are apparently happy and well liked, but they do not make much use of the purple. Before the war an elderly, unidentified gentleman was found in a Hamburg street, where he had fallen and died of a stroke. The identification revealed him to be the king of Denmark, who had been taking a solitary evening stroll in a strange town.

Once away from the Atlantic fringe, where kings are more or less of the plain people, monarchy virtually disappears. The little fellows have gone with the big, the kinglets with the kings. Switzerland is full of Hapsburgs who have more spare time than spare change.

Tino of Greece seems to be a prosperous exception to the rule of bankruptcy, but Tino actually has torn a bigger hole in the purple than any of the others. He violated rule I. in the old book of kingship. Kings might eat with the plain people. They might borrow money from them, cheat them at cards, make love to their wives, and pat the children on the head. They might, in hard luck, give music or dancing lessons or teach languages.

There were many things a king might do if he were out of luck, but there was one thing no king or anybody in the family might do. That was marry with the plain people. Royalty could not dilute the divinity. It was demonstrable that a king might be killed by the plain people. That was injurious to the king concerned, but it did not do the damage to the institution that would be done by marriage.

When Tino and Mrs. Leeds married the Princess Xenia to young Mr. Leeds monarchy was knocked through the ropes with no chance of recovery. Mrs. Leeds and young Mr. Leeds have destroyed the institution of royalty in Hellas. It might have survived Mrs. Leeds marrying a prince (probably not), but it cannot recover when a princess marries young Mr. Leeds.

The Leeds, we fear, have bought on a falling market. King Alexander tosses a kingdom to the winds, declining to have it as a gift. We do not know what dot Mr. Leeds brought to the three marriages he contracted, but, knowing Tino's shrewdness, we suspect it was the whole works.

It may be lucky for Mr. Leeds if it is a sum sufficient for bad times and if, indeed, bad times should come and remain. If the kinglets came out of the twilight with new confidence and with reassertion of sovereignty the young man might be dismayed to find that he was only morganatically married and could be put aside for a proper husband.

What a wreck of an innocent and trusting life.

BALD.

[Aurora Beacon-News.]

Baldness is more common among meat eaters than among vegetarians, says Charles F. Pabst, writing in the Western Medical Times.

He says, to check the loss of hair, you should use tonics, take special exercises, special foods, special drinks, and exert mental effort only moderately. It isn't worth it.

Man once was as hairy as a monkey. Fully civilized he will be as hairless as an egg. The bald man usually lives in advance of his time, even though a bald head probably started the theory.

SONG.

Come, and let me sing you
A song of bygone hours;
Perchance some thought shall bring you
The scent of vanished flowers;
Perchance it will awaken
A dream of long ago,
Of sunny trails forsaken
For those of cloud and snow.

Mayhap it will remind you
Of peace-appointed days,
When I was wont to find you
In blossom-haunted ways;
When like a benediction
The dew was full of light,
And care was but the fiction
Of life's old eremite.

Come, we'll sing together
As we were wont to sing;
This rough and icy weather
We'll drown with songs of spring;
We'll dance and sing a measure
Shall bid our hearts be gay;
So find the golden treasure
We lost—but yesterday.

Sir: Of my class of thirty alleged students, not one had ever heard of Thomas Henry Huxley, and my heart was bitter within me. Later, on my way down the corridor, the posted announcement that all schedules of engineering students must be signed by Professor Okey, brought me a modicum of solace; and when the 11:15 Rock Island train brought yesterday's Trib, and I read the statement in Memory Tests that there are twenty-four books in the Old Testament, my heart once more sang hymns at heaven's gate.

Where Do They Get That Stuff At!

Sir: In London they tell of an American, who, upon his arrival in that great city, asked of a passerby, "Where is the best place to stop at?" Our fellow citizen was duly instructed in the following wise, "Just before you reach the at, silly." It is not a direct importation; so you will understand that the laugh was not on me. Had the poor unfortunate been a devotee of Octavius Roy Cohen, and had he said, in the lingo of "local color," "Where at is the best place to stop?" the superior being, would have been outa luck. C. M. A.

ONE of the best lines we have enjoyed lately was from the pen of Opper, the cartoonist: "Life is a journey between two rooms, the room in which you were born, and the room in which you will die."

THE FLOWERS OF AUTUMN.

Hail flowers of autumn, stately they and strong
To stem the winds and helias' scorching rays.
The gentle breeze and showers of April days,
Come when the tender flowers of spring belong.
The sunflowers, like a waving yellow sea,
With faces made from shining molten gold.
The goldenrods and asters; silphiums bold,
And blazing star in purple, bending free.
The startling white of boneset, gentians blue;
The lion's tooth and odd shaped dragon's head.
The autumn carpet's thick, watch where you tread,
You'll crush with careless feet their varied hue.
October's all aflame with wondrous bloom;
Soon frost will come and then its sudden doom.
ORPHEUS.

IT is rather difficult to make a jest of a radiator that doesn't radiate, particularly, when one is paying a goodly sum for said radiation. And it is not for us to inflict our personal grievances upon you merely because the w. k. circumstances over which we had no control thrust us into the job of col conducting. But if the general public is also suffering heatless hours, that's different. Are there any more at home like us?

DESPITE the warning of Siwash that "if this takes, more will follow, as I am no sundodger and have seen a few sunsets up and down the Pacific coast," we spare space for his assertion that nothing around the Golden Gate can compare with "Phœbus dropping lazily behind the snow-capped Olympics, bathing their crests in a diaphanous pink, that can never be limned on any canvas." He deposes that the assertion can be confirmed by any inhabitant of Seattle. Well?

JINGLES.

This was originally a hunting song. Vijakibo heard it as a little girl in the south, from an English nursemaid:

Come a whoop, come a whoop—
Come a high lo.
Along the merry stream
Come a ram tam tam.
Come a hippy, hippy lam,
Come a reo rio,
Bow wow wow.
Sing fransi iddle de,
Thru the woods we will run brave boys,
Thru the woods we will run.

A. writes Or, childhood epic:

I went to the river and couldn't get across.
Jumped on a camel's back and thought it was a hoss.
The hoss wouldn't go, so I sold it for a hoe;
The hoe wouldn't dig, so I sold it for a pig.
The pig wouldn't squeal, so I sold it for a wheel;
The wheel wouldn't run, so I sold it for a gun.
The gun wouldn't shoot, so I sold it for a boot;
The boot wouldn't wear, so I sold it for a bear.
The bear wouldn't holler, so I sold it for a dollar;
The dollar wouldn't pass, so I threw it in the grass.

One of many fine ones submitted by B. J., who learned it in the early '50s:

Chick-a-ny, chick-a-ny crany crow,
Went to the well to wash her toe.
When she got there the chicken was dead.
What time is it old witch!

IT is a coincidental fact that the letter from A Country Parson, Grand Chain, Illinois, arrived in the nick of time for today's paper. He writes:

"Very recently you suggested 'Is Christianity a Failure?' as the most appropriate theme for a Sunday sermon. You were thinking of the controversy between capital and labor. Being quite humble and willing to comply, I did so last Sunday. Perhaps you will be interested to know that my conclusion was that it is only fair to judge an institution by what it has done for those who have adhered to its rules and unfair to judge it by what it has not done for those who have failed to adhere to its rules. . . .

"I went around the hirsute course just now in 275 with an iron I have had for eighteen years. Hazards are few and I left the turf in perfect condition."

THE class in journalism understood, but, if letters constitute a criterion, any number of contribs didn't. Our surprise is painful. We hasten to elaborate:

"The house looks as though it had never been painted."

Supply the ellipsis between as and though. The disjunctive conjunction makes nonsense of the statement:

"The house looks as it would look though it had never been painted."

Whereas:

"The house looks as it would look if it had never been painted."

Simple, eh?

AS we are shockproof, we shan't flicker an eyelash when the info comes that world war vets are singing it—

FLU AND HEALTH RECORDS.

THREE years ago right now we were in the midst of an epidemic of influenza, a part of a pandemic of the disorder which involved all that part of the world that has a highly developed civilization Where it came from we do not know, and where it went to is also unknown. It swooped down on the United States and found us unprepared and almost unwarned. This anniversary week is a very good time to pause and take inventory.

The report of the United States census office shows that the year 1918 has a mortality rate of 18.1 in the registration area, as compared with 14.3 in the preceding year. If we go back just twenty years before this epidemic, we find that the average death rate year by year of the decade preceding was higher than that of 1918. In the intervening twenty years we had grown so accustomed to better health that setting down in 1918 in the midst of 1898 conditions shocked us almost beyond belief.

What made matters seem so bad was the concentration of so much of the 1918 sickness in September, October, and November. Few of the dire prophecies made in 1918 have been fulfilled. In 1918 it was said that influenza begat consumption. Before June, 1919, the Buffalo health department was out with proof that the influenza epidemic had not increased the amount of consumption in that community. Since that time substantiation has come from every direction.

Never in the history of the world has the decline in the consumption rate approximated that of the last three years. When one develops consumption it is natural to blame it on an attack of influenza if there has been one.

There is no proof. In fact, there is some proof to the contrary.

Many persons with heart disease charge their troubles to influenza. A study made in Cincinnati soon after the epidemic subsided seems to prove that there was some increase in heart disease in the wake of the influenza, but as time has gone on there has come no support of the theory that influenza causes heart disease.

Some people with Bright's disease lay their trouble to attacks of influenza. There is no proof that influenza causes Bright's disease.

Of course, the neurasthenics lay their troubles to influenza, but exaggerating their discomforts and blaming the other fellow are two foundation stones of their disorder. As a matter of fact there is no proof that influenza caused any organic diseases from baldness to corns and everything in between. Whoever says his disease, disorder, or discomfort, whatever it may be, originated in an attack of influenza is saying something he cannot prove.

On the other hand, the death rates never have been so low as they have been since the influenza left us. The 1918 influenza wave held on until well into 1919, and yet the death rate of 1919 was enough below the average to half offset the excess of 1918. There was a small wave of influenza in 1920, and yet 1920 had a death rate as low, or lower, than 1919. The 1921 rate so far is much lower than that of 1920. No important group of diseases is more important than it was prior to the great influenza epidemic of 1918.

SIGNS OF SENILE DEMENTIA.

J. M. D. writes: "1. What are the symptoms of senile dementia? 2. How does a person act who has it? 3. Is there a cure? 4. What can be done to help the patient?"

REPLY.

1. Insanity of the dull, listless type.
2. Most of the time he is quiet. His mental wanderings are quiet. He is feeble physically.
3. No.
4. Give him good care. Keep his bowels open. Regulate his eating. Institutional care is best.

GIVE BABY TOMATO JUICE.

Mrs. A. H. J. writes: "I have a daughter who is 8 months and 3 weeks old. She has had a diarrhœa for about two months. Her stools are sometimes green and sometimes yellow. Her bowels move about six times a day, more or less. She is breast fed and weighs about 21 pounds. She is not fretful, but nurses often. She weighed about 7½ pounds at birth. What do you advise? How soon shall I wean her? Her first tooth has just come through."

REPLY.

She has slight indigestion. Feed her somewhat less and give her some orange or strained canned tomato juice. She will probably need no treatment except this temporary decrease in food. When the weather gets cooler start her on cereals, soups, and bread, in addition to the milk and fruit juices. Do not wean her until cool weather. Why not partially breast feed until about Thanksgiving?

FOR LOVERS OF NATURE.

Mrs. E. A. writes: "Tell Mr. Squirrel Hunter that I am a fellow sufferer. Red bugs, especially the woods variety, are absolutely poisonous to me. I have suffered with the bites for days after an expedition in the woods. Even though I took salt baths with plenty of soap they would still stick. The best remedy I have found is to rub the sores with wet laundry soap. It is also fine to relieve burning and itching mosquito bites.

MARRIES A FOREIGNER.

Chicago, Oct. 10.—[Friend of the People.]—Please tell me whether a foreign born woman having become a citizen through marriage to an American born citizen loses her right as an American when she secures a divorce from her husband.

If she does, what happens to her children that have been born here.

G. H. O.

Section 4 of the act of congress of March 2, 1907, "Expatriation of Citizens and Their Protection Abroad," provides as follows:

"That any foreign woman who acquires American citizenship by marriage to an American shall be assumed to retain the same after the termination of the marital relation if she continue to reside in the United States, unless she makes formal renunciation thereof before a court having jurisdiction to naturalize aliens, or if she resides abroad she may retain her citizenship by registering as such before a United States consul within one year after the termination of such marital relation." H. L. ROETHE,
Acting Chief Naturalization Examiner.

HAS HIS NAME CHANGED.

Mount Carroll, Ill., Oct. 6.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—What is necessary in law to change one's name? Would the signing of the new name, with the real name in parenthesis, be sufficient? M. AND B. M.

No legal proceedings are required to make a change of name valid. It is sufficient if you use the new name and give notice of change to those persons to whom the information may be material. In transactions in which your old name appears we suggest that you continue to use it to avoid confusion. For example, if real estate records show title in you under the old name, when you come to sell you should use the same name. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

PAVING WILL BE LAID.

Chicago, Oct., 9.—[Friend of the People.]—What is holding back the paving of 79th street east of Vincennes avenue? The street is terrible, as there were new car lines laid a while ago and the failed to pave between the tracks, but merely dumped some loose gravel and left it. When the weather is dry the dust nearly chokes the residents and in wet weather the street is well-nigh impassable.

A. P. W.

A public hearing was held Dec. 3, 1920, on paving 79th street between Stony Island and Vincennes avenues, and at that time the street was ordered paved with brick; but owing to objections of property owners nothing further is to be done in the matter until a year from the date of the hearing. Next December we will be in a position to continue with the proceeding and hope to have the improvement started next year.

EDWARD J. GLACKIN,
Secretary Board of Local Improvements.

OWNERS SHARE EQUALLY.

Chicago, Oct. 5.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Please advise which division fence is mine. My lot faces south on an east and west street. I have been told that the west fence is mine, and others say that I share that fence with the neighbors. The lot on the east side is vacant. C. B.

Adjoining owners of inclosed property are required by statute to contribute equally to the cost and repair of the division fence.
TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

WEEDS CUT.

Chicago, Oct. 9.—[Friend of the People.]—Will you kindly have the weeds cut each side of walks, Birchwood street between North Clark and Robey? The weeds and grass have not been cut all summer and are over waist high, and, since recent rains, lap over walks.

Thus far my communications about weeds, to the city, have been ignored and I will greatly appreciate if you will call the matter to the attention of the proper authorities. P. W. M.

These weeds have been cut down.

Superintendent of Streets.

CLINGING TO THE TALE OF THE COW.

Chicago, Oct. 10.—The story of the great Chicago fire is and will be ever an interesting subject of discussion and reminiscence on each succeeding anniversary. The vivid description by Mr. Ahern in your issues of the 9th should be preserved with all other data pertaining to the great fire.

However thrilling this narrative, does not it jar our preconceived idea as to the origin of the fire? Could we not have been left happy in the illusion of Mrs. O'Leary and her dear old cow? We are not willing to accept his version of the cause and think there are thousands of others who will not thus be ruthlessly disillusioned.

The intimation by others that a party of rowdy beer drinkers caused the fire is almost sacrilege.

The dry propaganda to charge the fire to beer is not to be considered; so let us give Mrs. O'Leary and her cow her proper place in Chicago history and erect a fitting monument of bronze or marble in Lincoln park—for the building of a great city, or, at least, causing it to be a more splendid one than it would otherwise have been, deserves a fitting tribute.

F. POPE.

KICKING OVER THE COW LEGEND.

Streator, Ill., Oct. 9.—In reading over today's SUNDAY TRIBUNE, I was very much interested in the story of the great Chicago fire, written by Mr. Michael Ahern, who was a reporter in 1871.

I have been selling chemical fire extinguishers for a number of years, and am always interested in knowing just how fires start. A few years ago I was in Wenona, Ill., my old home town, and among other prospective buyers, I called on Mr. Thomas Southwell, who at that time was running a shoe store. In my selling talk I told Mr. Southwell that if there had been a fire extinguisher at hand at the time Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked the lamp over it might have saved the City of Chicago.

Mr. Southwell replied that Mrs. O'Leary's cow did not kick the lamp over. "I know," he said, "for the reason that I was there. A bunch of us young folks, both boys and girls, were having a party not far from Mrs. O'Leary's house. We boys had plenty of beer. The girls wanted tea. There was plenty of tea in the house but no milk. One of the girls suggested that one of us go over to Mrs. O'Leary's and get some milk. Five or six of us boys went over. Mrs. O'Leary was in bed. It was about 9 p. m. She knew us, as we were all acquainted in the neighborhood, and said that all the evening milk had been sold, but we could go to the barn and have all the milk we could get from the cow and welcome. While some of the boys were trying to milk others were striking matches so that the milker could see. As the matches burned down they were dropped in the straw bedding. Shortly after we got back to the party Mrs. O'Leary's barn was in flames."

Mr. Southwell is dead. I was well acquainted with him and knew him to be a man you could depend on what he said, and fully believe the above is the true cause of the Chicago fire.

PURPOSES AND EFFECTS OF THE MOVIES.

Chicago, Oct. 10.—Answering M. J. C. in this morning's TRIB., may I suggest "Honi soit qui mal y pense." My wife and I saw the picture in question, a splendidly acted, perfectly staged production of actual events of real life, told in a manner to sustain interest. Nothing therein was shown that cannot be read daily in the press, nothing happened that we are not familiar with—that happens every day in the ordinary run of life. Must the "movies" teach a lesson? It has been our impression that they were for enjoyment and pleasure, and, like anything seen or read, their propriety or impropriety rested entirely with the state of mind in which they were viewed.

A COUNTER IRRITANT TO K. K. K.!

Chicago, Oct. 10.—Isn't the announcement of the organization of the National Unity Council as a sort of counterirritant to the Ku Klux Klan most interesting at this time?

And is it not worth noting that ex-Gov. Edward F. Dunne, who is chairman of the National Unity Council, was one of the triumvirate of spellbinding Americans sent to Ireland some time ago on Sinn Fein money to "investigate" the situation in Erin and promote the cause of Irish independence?

It is no secret that one of the objects of the Ku Klux Klan is to checkmate the intrusion of just such movements as the Sinn Fein movement into American life. It proclaims "an uncompromising standard of pure Americanism untrammeled by alien influence."

If the National Unity Council is to run it a race for first honors in such a laudable enterprise as that, 100 per cent Americans on the side lines will be glad to cheer both of them.

AMERICA FIRST.

CRAZY LIKE A FOX.

Chicago, Oct. 10.—These insane murderers are a great lot. They are so crazy that they always have their "shooting irons" in fine shape.

They are so crazy that they shoot fairly straight.

They are so crazy that they can always find the man they're after.

They are so crazy that they can plan their crimes to the utmost perfection—even to the minutest detail.

They are so crazy that they can find their way to a high class attorney.

3 PER CENT INTEREST ON SAVINGS.

Chicago Oct. 7.—When the chaiman of the congressional committee investigating the building situation said that the bankers were worse than Shylocks, he said something really to the point. He should have added that as profiteers they stand easily at the head of the list.

By their system of commissions, recommissions, etc., the bankers add to the legal rate of interest to a point where the average pawnbroker becomes a piker.

Now what I want to know is this: Why are they not passing a share of these unusual profits on to the depositor? Don't you think that the depositor is entitled to some of this easy money?

I would like to find out why the interest rate for the depositor still remains at 3 per cent. X. Y. Z.

RAILROAD WORKING RULES.

Chicago, Oct. 10.—Responding to the article of "Actual Service Man" published under date of Oct. 2, voicing disapproval in the contemplated wage cut:

The writer believes that due consideration be given the general employé of the railroad. However, should any consideration be given the employé who works the "split run," one who labors a few hours in the morning during the rush and again in the evening, putting in eight hours in all, for which he draws fourteen and one-half hours' pay?

Why pay these men while they are at refreshment? No wonder the officials of the railroads are about to swing the ax and cut wages.

Eliminate this uncalled for money waste and a general wage cut is unnecessary. J. M.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

INDIAN SUMMER.

By John Greenleaf Whittier.

From gold to gray
Our mild, sweet day
Of Indian summer fades too soon;
But tenderly
Hangs, white and calm, the hunter's moon.

In its pale fire
The village spire
Shows like the zodiac's spectral lance;
The painted walls
Whereon it falls
Transfigured stand in marble trance!

"Making all these native trees bear commercial pecans will add vast sums to the annual income of Texans and provide plenty of these choice nuts for every American home at reasonable prices, and some besides for export," Col. Dr. Hexamer was 59 years old. He was born in Philadelphia and was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania in 1882, and later received the degrees of Ph. D. and LL. D. A decoration was bestowed on him in 1907 by Emperor William of Germany. It was the order of the Red Eagle.

CONSPIRACY LAW THREATENS KLAN, RULING IN TEXAS

Attorney General Reports to the Governor.

Austin, Tex., Oct. 15.—Attorney General C. M. Cureton late today, in an opinion to Gov. Pat M. Neff defining the legal status of the Ku Klux Klan, held:

"Any order, organization or body of individuals who agree and confederate among themselves to do any act which would be in violation of the laws of the country would be illegal, and every act of every individual composing the conspiracy in furtherance of the conspiracy would be illegal.

"This would apply to the masked parades where such parade is a part of and in furtherance of a purpose to do some act which would be in violation of the law."

"Good Purpose" No Excuse.

The opinion concludes:

"We therefore conclude that all efforts of persons under any name they may have assumed to better the moral conditions of the country through the medium of threats, intimidation, and personal violence in violation of the spirit and letter of the constitution and its laws of our state and each and every act done and performed by them carrying out or furthering any illegal purpose, or which has for its object the doing of any act forbidden by law, would involve the guilt of all participants having knowledge of the general purpose to do illegal acts or actual knowledge of the doing of any illegal act."

WOOD AT HELM; PLEDGES HONEST FILIPINO RULE

Calls Islands Outpost of Free Government.

MANILA, P. I., Oct. 15.—Leonard Wood became governor general of the Philippines today. He was sworn in on his arrival from Japan and immediately took up the duties of his new office.

"It is my purpose, so far as it lies in my power, so to conduct the government that it will be characterized by economy, efficiency and true progress; government of the people by their representatives to the extent provided in the Jones bill; government characterized by honesty and morality and appreciation of the fact that public office is a public trust; that fitness is an absolute requirement for appointment to office," Gen. Wood said in his inaugural address.

"There must be no turning back, but steady progress on sound lines. The people of the Philippines have made wonderful progress during the last twenty-three years. I doubt if any people under the friendly guidance of another have made a greater advance in the same period.

Praises Unselfish Aid of U. S.

"This has not been accomplished by the Filipinos alone, but with the absolutely unselfish aid of the United States, acting through thousands of loyal and unselfish Americans, who have worked with an eye single to the best interests of these islands.

"In considering the progress made we must not forget the work of Spain through the centuries spent in implanting the Christian faith.

"Although oriental in blood and birth, the people of the Philippines are closely allied in religion, in ideas of government, in methods of administration and in law to the great Christian nations of the west, and especially with Americans as to form of government, civil and religious liberty and liberal institutions.

"As a people you were born and educated as Christians. There must be no turning backward in the Christian faith. In this connection it is well to remember that the first sign of decadence of a people is disregard of religion; that the people be well grounded in their faith is essential to real stability and progress.

"Give Women Equal Rights."

"Your enthusiasm and thirst for education and your accomplishments in building up a sound system of public education is beyond praise. We must keep it up. Indeed, we must extend and improve it. Education must be free to all. Your women must be given equal opportunity with your men.

"The government must encourage, not discourage, private enterprise. As a general policy I believe that the government should keep out of business.

"The judiciary must be independent and stable and keep absolutely outside of politics, for an independent and fearless judiciary is the foundation of stable governmet.

"We must push forward our public works, especially roads and irrigation. We must give far more attention to public health.

Asks Coöperation of All.

"My purpose is to do the best I can to reëstablish the credit of the Philippines, to build up their commerce, increase the prosperity of the people and make the government a model of efficiency. This I cannot do without the coöperation and support of Filipinos, Americans and other residents of the islands.

"We must do all we can to build up and instruct public opinion, for without it true representative government cannot endure. We must do everything possible to push forward the study of the English language and make English the language of the people of the Philippines. Nothing will do more to strengthen the spirit of solidarity and aid in developing an instructed, sound public opinion than a common language.

U. S. Will Not Turn Back.

"Establishment of sound, stable, representative government in the Philippines must not fail, for the effect of efforts which were made here in the orient to establish such a government extends far beyond the limits of the Philippines. Indeed it reaches out to every people who are dreaming of liberal institutions and of government by the people.

"It shall not fail, because the United States has put its hand to the plow and will not turn back."

MOROS RESENT IDEA OF RULE BY FILIPINOS

They Trust Gen. Wood and Want U. S. Control.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

The ultimate solution of the Philippine problem may be the retention by the United States of certain naval bases and trading ports and also the island of Mindanao, with the adjoining Sulu archipelago, abandoning the rest of the islands to complete self-government by Filipinos.

The Filipino leaders of the northern provinces are making a brave effort to face and conquer the "Moro problem." But it is a grave question whether these Mohammedan people of the southern seas will ever be content even to share in a government dominated by their northern neighbors, whom they have despised as an enslaved and conquered race during long centuries.

At present the Filipino civil government in Moro land is kept alive only by the force of the United States. Were the United States to withdraw sovereignty civil war would sweep the country.

Curiously enough, in no place in the islands do the Filipino people appear to better advantage than in their contact with the fanatics of the south. I rode through Cotabato valley, in Mindinao, with Gen. Wood and his party recently. On both sides of the road the wild grass and trees had been cleared away and fields had been cultivated.

There were bungalows there and home scenes that would fit in with a California real estate ad. It was a colony of Filipinos set in a country that ten years ago was unsafe even for soldiers of the United States.

Hope Rests in Schools.

The colonists were mostly Visayans from Cebu, unable to speak the Moro language. They had set up their own schools, neat concrete buildings placed in shady places by green lawns. The children sang for us and recited from their books, and appeared as bright and neat as a similar group anywhere. Down the road was a Mohammedan school where children in native costume were seated on the floor reading in unison with shrill voices the unintelligible words of the Koran.

Another school had just been opened by a Filipino teacher for Moro children. In these Moro schools, started after much opposition from the Moros, lies the only hope of ever bringing these people into sympathy with western ideas and American civilization. In the larger towns dormitories have been established and many of the sons and daughters of the native rulers have begun to study under Filipinos sent down from the Manila normal school.

Americans Direct Work.

Americans are still in general supervision of the educational work. They report an uphill fight against the prejudices and ignorance of the older generation. The leaders of today are as savage and primitive as when the American soldiers came twenty years ago and killed their fighting men by the thousand.

At Pickit I found six Moros in jail for stirring up trouble against the Filipino schools. The Filipino constabulary had raided a meeting and had arrested the ringleaders. Arms were taken from them and they were sentenced to six months each in jail. They said they would rather go to jail than send their daughters to a Christian school. The daughters are a great asset as slaves or wives. When a Moro wants a slave girl or a wife he has to buy her from the father. One may have as many wives as he can afford.

Moros Trust Gen. Wood.

The Moros are a difficult people to deal with, and few administrators have understood them. Gen. Wood knows them, and they trust him as a father. He will make administrative changes that will quiet them for a time, but he will insist on the American schools going on. The Moros want the Americans to come back as governors.

American residents of Sulu have petitioned the American government for a government in that territory administered by Americans, and that this government be independent of the Filipino legislature, and subject only to the congress of the United States. They would have this government over Mindanao, Palawan, and the Sulu archipelago—an empire in itself and the fairest and most productive part of the Philippine islands.

ISADORA DUNCAN RUNS BOLSHEVIK DANCE SCHOOL

MOSCOW, Oct. 15.—[United Press.]—Isadora Duncan, pioneer of the modern school of esthetic dancing, said today that she had become an ardent bolshevik.

The American dancer, who came here from Paris in July to start a revolutionary school of dancing, at the invitation of the soviet government, is esconced in a beautiful house that was formerly the residence of the director of the imperial ballet. She will begin with 300 children, and later will have a thousand.

"The communist leaders are heroes; the bolsheviks have the most capable fine arts museum in Europe," she said.

Russia Aids Thousands of Jews to Come to U. S.

RIGA, Letvia, Oct. 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Russian soviet government has decided to permit, and is endeavoring to facilitate, the departure from Russia for the United States of thousands of Jewish families who have relatives in America, according to advices received here today.

They bought Cyclone to clean rugs and also insist on using it to shampoo the hair!

This young woman is neither a film star nor a professional model. In fact, she will not permit us to use her name, but she has heavy and gloriously beautiful, glossy hair that is the admiration of her large circle of friends. Because of its abundance it had been a great care to her until she began using Cyclone as a shampoo. She consented to pose for this photograph after a recent shampoo with Cyclone, the evaporating cleaner, and her smile is the smile of enthusiastic endorsement.

This proves that you can, with perfect safety, use Cyclone on your most delicate rugs and fabrics. Because we are told that it makes the hair clean, fluffy and colorful, just as it leaves the rugs clean, soft and silky.

This "discovery" has been repeatedly called to our attention by users of Cyclone—a discovery, by the way, which our own women demonstrators and other employes had made long ago. But it remained for the women of Chicago to recommend and urge Cyclone in this field, not originally dreamed of by the makers.

It's the logical thing to do

—we are always glad when some one finds a new use for Cyclone. It is easy to understand why the peculiar effects that distinguish Cyclone from all other cleansers in the general household field should make it an ideal hair cleanser. It is marvelously effective and harmless to the most delicate skin or fabric. It quickly evaporates and leaves no gummy, dirt-collecting residue. The ingredients are the finest and purest that money will buy. A fancy price could not improve its quality or cause it to do its work more perfectly. Cyclone factory employes wear no gloves while at work and yet their hands are as delicate as though they were kept daintily manicured.

"Shampoo" your rugs with

Cyclone Cleaner

The EVAPORATING Cleaner

Cyclone—not magical, but just the same nearly every Cyclone user calls it "magic."

Cyclone does easily all kinds of hard and so-called impossible feats of cleaning—does them so simply that its use is a joy, not a burdensome task. Its original and startling accomplishments are a constant surprise. It took a woman to discover that by the use of Cyclone she could make as fresh and clean as new an expensive corset whose perfect fit had endeared it to her heart, after the corset had become disgracefully dirty and soiled. Another woman found that only with Cyclone could she remove the dirt and grime from the white pillars of her pergola. Another found that one-time white linen window shades could be wiped clean and fresh with a Cyclone solution. Another that the life of her delicate silk hosiery could be doubled by a Cyclone dip instead of the destructive soap and water rubbing. Another gave the same treatment to delicate silk lingerie with equally happy results. Still others found that a Cyclone dip restored their handsome draperies. Others, that it removed spots from clothing and left no ring. Cyclone does all these things and more. It does them so quickly, easily, and cheaply and with so little labor that, once tried in any home, it becomes immediately the standby for all time.

Cyclone restores colors that have become so dull you believe they are gone forever. Carries away the dirt by a magic all its own. It requires no laborious scrubbing—only a gentle rub, and, better still, no rinsing at all. Clean the rug right on the floor and leave it there. It will evaporate quickly and look like new. And for the reason that there is no sticky residue left in the body of the rug, the nap will not pack, but will be soft and silky. Best of all, the rug will stay clean as long as a new one. This, you know, is not true of rugs cleaned in the usual way. Full directions for cleaning rugs will be found on the can.

FEAR ULSTER WILL CLOG IRISH PEACE MACHINE

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Oct. 15.—There is a complete lull in the Irish negotiations over the week end, the delegates spending their time visiting friends in London and the neighborhood. Several of the London papers announced this morning that some of the delegates would go to Dublin to confer with Eamon de Valera, but none left London.

Mr. de Valera receives a report by courier daily of the proceedings of the conference.

It is likely that an announcement will be made early next week of an extension of the truce terms agreed on by the conference. The critical period next week will not be helped by the opening of parliament when the Ulsterites will be sure to do all in their power to embarrass Prime Minister Lloyd George by questions framed for the purpose of wrecking the peace.

Ulster May Enter Parley.

BELFAST, Oct. 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—Sir James Craig, the Ulster premier, in an address here today dealing with the Irish conference in progress in London and with Ulster's position regarding it, made remarks which were regarded as a strong intimation that he expects to participate in the peace negotiations.

He said he might not have an opportunity of making another public speech for some time, "as I may be engaged in most delicate operations regarding the future of our beloved country."

"If I am asked to go into conference with the prime minister and his cabinet," Sir James continued, "it may be that my lips would be sealed while the conference is proceeding. Remember this: Don't be overelated if you hear that Ulster is up and Sinn Fein is down, and don't be downhearted because the rumor gets abroad that Sinn Fein is up."

Addresses Laborites.

He declared he would see that Ulster's rights were not interfered with.

"They seem to think," he said, "that nibbling at Ulster is like a mouse nibbling at cheese, not making much impression at first, but if the mouse goes on for a month or two the cheese disappears. What I wish to convey is that Ulster is not cheese to be nibbled at. Ulster is rock—granite—that will break the teeth of those who try to nibble it."

4 BIG WIRELESS COMPANIES PLAN WORLD SERVICE

PARIS, Oct. 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—The four principal wireless companies of the United States, Great Britain, France, and Germany concluded an agreement today whereby they will coöperate in the scientific and commercial development of wireless telegraphy throughout the world.

Executives of the four companies, who have been in session in Paris for a fortnight, announced the agreement in a statement in which it was said "a comprehensive arrangement which has been made will work for the efficient, economical, and immediate dispatch of wireless messages, and at the same time prevent the wasteful use of the relatively few wave lengths available for long distance communication."

"The coöperation of the four companies," continues the statement, "should result in the full utilization of scientific research for the elimination of the static and also lead to the fullest development of radio art, thereby assuring to the public and the press reliable and adequate communication service throughout the world."

Women, Infuriated by High Prices, Raid Vienna Shops

VIENNA, Oct. 15.—Groups of women infuriated by high prices stormed and plundered markets and shops in various parts of the city. Many of them were arrested.

ARREST AMERICANS AS FORGERS.

VIENNA, Oct. 15.—The police today arrested Leo Kerpner and Hugo Mahler, alias Louis Ross and Jacob Mahler, of New York, and Abram Croatia, who were alleged to have cashed forged checks on American banks for many thousands of dollars.

200 YEAR OLD MYSTERY BARED BY CLAIRVOYANT

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Oct. 15.—Craigie Lodge, a residence in the Isle of Wight, which derives its name from the fact that it was once occupied by the novelist, John Oliver Hobbes Bracket and Mrs. Craigie Bracket, daughter of John Morgan Richards, wealthy American pill manufacturer, has been the center of a short lived sensation.

The skeleton of a child was found in the garden of the lodge and the police were notified. While they were making investigations, the present owner of the house, Mrs. Bethell, gave a tea party at which one of the guests was Mrs. Pollock, a member of the well known legal family, who claims to have clairvoyant powers. Mrs. Pollock was shown some bones from the child's skeleton, and, clasping her brow in approved fashion, she declared: "There is another skeleton there. The skeleton of a woman near that of the child. If you dig you will find it."

The gardener dug and discovered another skeleton. Mrs. Pollock asserted the child had died from violence and in a number of interviews suggested the mother had come to her end by dubious methods. The police had an archeologist examine the skeletons. He said they were at least 200 years old.

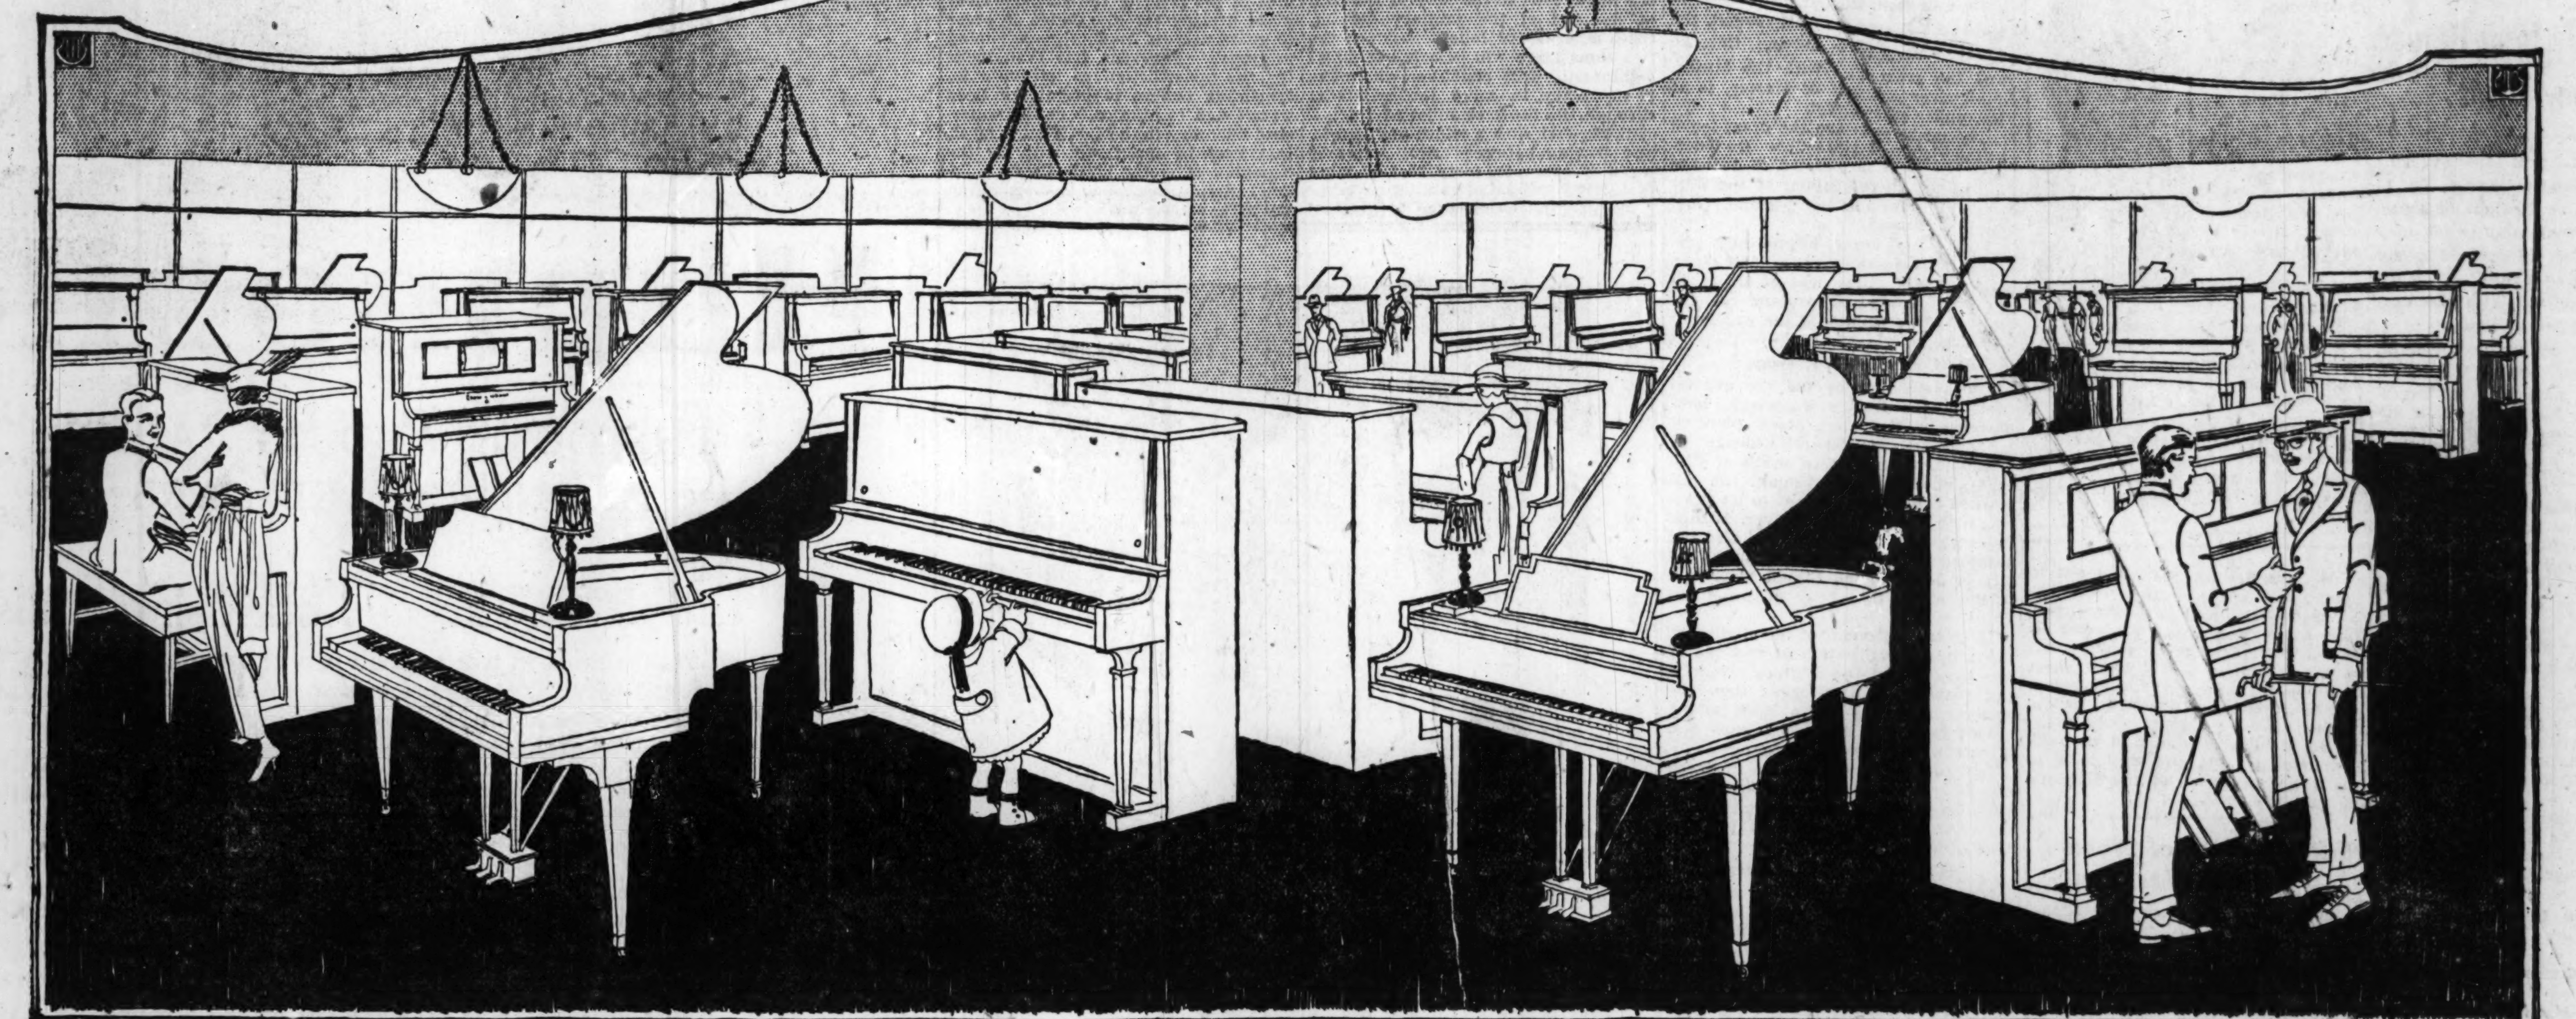
NOTHING DOWN ON A PIANO



There is a bargain for you here

A big event

SPECIAL attraction is now given to many of the unique features of our Salesrooms. The annual Sale of Pianos Returned from Summer Homes is in full swing. It offers peculiar opportunities for savings. Each year we receive from fine summer homes pianos which we have rented for summer use. The service which they have had is so slight that you could hardly consider them as used pianos.

A wonderful opportunity

Just think of it! Pianos direct from fine homes at Lake Geneva, Lake Forest, Lake Beulah, Charlevoix, Oconomowoc, Petoskey, and other summer resorts may be purchased at savings of from 15 to 40%.

Buy satisfaction

There are no hidden defects to be reckoned with in these instruments. You know you are buying satisfaction. Only high grade Grands, Players and Uprights are included in this sale. They have been completely overhauled by us. This has been done for this extensive clearance. Four shops have been busy in order to prepare them in time for this annual event.

Pianos like new

Hundreds of pianos bought during sales of the same character in former years are now giving service in Chicago homes. Many of the pianos in this sale enjoy as fine musical qualities as the day they left the manufacturer's floor. All worn parts are replaced by us. Rigid inspection is given every instrument. Mars and scratches are removed and the instruments refinished when necessary. Tone and action are of the best.

Pianos of special styles

The majority of the instruments offered in this sale have had slight use but there are also a number of new pianos. Others, too, have been received in exchange. We sell them with the same guarantee as a new one. In view of the large saving to be made, we feel that teachers, students, and music lovers should arrange for an early examination of these values.

A unique advantage

The point that makes this sale so advantageous is that you will find here at a low cost pianos which are practically new. Celebrated makes are included. Steinway, Lyon & Healy, Steck, Knabe, and Brambach are the names of only a few.

Act now!

No family should deny itself musical enjoyment. Our prices and terms bring the instrument within the reach of all. An investigation is urged. An investment in a good piano reaps a daily return in happiness. We will send a piano to you on thirty days' free trial. Only the very expensive types are excepted. Pay no money down. All we ask is a nominal cartage fee as evidence of good faith.

Could you ask terms more fair?

You have the use and the entertainment derived from the piano for thirty days. We feel so sure that you will keep the piano that we have made this exordinary inducement. Monthly terms as low as $10.00 may be arranged. Send in the coupon today and get further details. Or better still, come in and compare the values side by side in our salesroom. Inspections cordially invited. A visit implies no obligation.

A few of the many exceptional bargains

Group A

We have included in this select group instruments which are exceptional bargains. They are offered at very low prices. For practical purposes they are as good as new. Painstaking repair work makes it difficult to distinguish the old from the new. The list contains instruments by some of the foremost piano manufacturers. The prices range from $125 up. Just think what this means! You obtain a beautiful piano with over-strung scale, double veneer finish, and genuine ivory keys at this low price. Where can you equal such values?

Judge these values yourself

Group B

A more select list of pianos comprises this group. The prices are a little higher but not what we might be entitled to ask. These choice instruments have been carefully overhauled by us. All are guaranteed. Here is a truly wonderful display of upright pianos. We are sure that they will bring satisfaction to many Chicago homes this winter. Let us reserve one for you. Prices range from $265 up.

Instruments for the whole family

Group C

This group includes only high-grade player pianos. Upright and Grand models are both shown. Our thirty day trial plan will place one in your home. An instrument selected from this group will bring endless joy to you. All have guaranteed action and will play the 88-note player rolls. Brass hardware is used throughout. Both foot-power and electrically controlled instruments are displayed. Case designs are of the latest style and are finished in mahogany, oak, or walnut. Prices are from $450 up.

A visit will convince you

Group D

Be sure to see this wonderful display. Such bargains will not long remain unpurchased. The instruments are of such high character that it is unusual to find them in a sale. There are fifteen especially choice pianos which we are confident will be bought by the first fifteen customers who see them. No one should hesitate to purchase here now. The terms are so convenient you will hardly notice the payments. Do not deny yourself the pleasure that ownership of such a fine instrument will give you. Grands, Uprights and Players are included in this group. At $650 up.

KANSAS MINERS MAY ORGANIZE OUTLAW UNION

12,000 Men Idle; Refuse to Obey Lewis.

Pittsburg, Kas., Oct. 15.—[Special.]—Collapse of Kansas District No. 14 f the United Mine Workers of Amer-ca and the formation of what may e called an outlaw miners' union are hreatened today as a result of the de-elopments in the coal fields here dur-ng the last forty-eight hours.

The administration of Alexander M. Iowat, in jail for defying the indus-rial court, and suspended on Thurs-ay by President John L. Lewis of the nternational union, is still in office, eclining to make room for the pro-isional officers appointed by Mr. ewis.

More than 12,000 miners, followers f the imprisoned union leader, are lle and flatly refuse to go back to ork in compliance with the interna-ional's orders.

Sections of State Split.

Observers here see in a breach be-ween the northern and southern op-ratives the nucleus of a new organiza-ion.

The northern miners at a meeting in ranklin yesterday adopted resolutions ondemning Lewis' action in suspend-ng the district authorities and reiterat-ng their opposition to the industrial ourt.

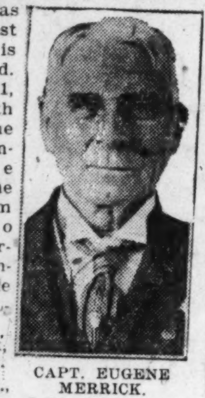
At Scammon last night the down-tate men adopted a report by their elegate to the Indianapolis conven-ion. He voted against the Howat in-ubordination.

Both Sides Checkmated!

Financial difficulties may still fur-her complicate the situation. Both sides have notified the banks not to honor the other's checks: and the banks probably will not honor either. The State Federation of Labor is looked to for help for the strikers, but as the federation is said to be short of funds, little assistance is expected.

A new provisional president for the district, appointed by Lewis, is expected Monday. He is said to be a Pennsylvania man, and may have to sue to get possession of the district's offices and records.

"KID" OF THE G. A. R., ONLY 67, STOPS OFF FOR CHICAGO VISIT



CAPT. EUGENE MERRICK.

Capt. Eugene Merrick, who claims to be the youngest living member of the G. A. R., was Chicago's guest yesterday. He is now 67 years old. At the age of 11, when he was with company C of the 147th Illinois infantry, he drummed the boys in blue from Chattanooga to Savannah. During the Spanish-American war he served as a captain.

Capt. Merrick, a native of Kendall county, Ill., has elected to spend his latter years in the climate infected town of Los Angeles, where he is well known as a temperance worker. He is now en route home from Indianapolis after representing Stanton post No. 55 at the fifty-fourth national encampment there. He is being entertained by F. C. Smalley, 1910 Washington boulevard.

ILLINOIS STARTS $20,000,000 WATERWAY SOON

Bloomington, Ill., Oct. [illegible]—[Special.]—Illinois' $20,000,000 improvement, the great waterway connecting Chicago and the great lake with the Mississippi river and Gulf of Mexico, is at last under construction.

The initial steps are the great locks in the vicinity of Marseilles. On Tuesday, Oct. 18, it is planned to dedicate the locks with the laying of the first block of concrete at Bell's island. Gov. Small will attend.

Bell's island is one of the most picturesque tracts along the Illinois river, about twenty miles east of Utica, in La Salle county. The plans call for the western terminus of the waterway at Utica.

Course of Waterway.

The plans provide for the general route of the Illinois waterway, commencing at the water power plant of the sanitary district of Chicago at Lockport, twenty miles south of Chicago and extending through the tail race of the sanitary canal to its junction with the Des Plaines river. It then follows the latter stream, and also the Illinois-Michigan canal, through the city of Joliet to the Illinois river and thence along that body of water to Utica.

If, in the judgment of the engineers, the proposed utilization of sections of the Illinois and Des Plaines rivers is not feasible or practicable, then the general route, as given may be deviated from and the old Illinois and Michigan canal improved for use.

In order to carry vessels of large size it is provided that the channel of the Illinois waterway, where practicable, shall be not less than 150 feet bottom width.

At Least Eight Feet Deep.

The minimum depth of channel in the earth sections will not be less than eight feet, and in the rock sections ten. The minimum depth over the miter sills of the locks will be not less than fourteen feet.

The minimum width of the locks will be 110 feet and the minimum length 600 feet. Engineers who made a careful investigation of the proposed waterway reported that the route, as defined, with the minimum depth and width of the channel as prescribed, is entirely practicable and the most advantageous that could be selected.

A few miles below Joliet there is to be a dam at the foot of the fall in the Des Plaines river. That dam would set the water back to the level of the dam at the end of the sanitary district, three miles above Joliet. Between the two dams there will be a fall of sixty-eight feet. This condition will make it necessary to carry the waterway through the heart of Joliet at a depth of thirty feet with a width of 270 feet, and flowing between two immense walls of concrete, forty feet or more in height.

Should this construction be realized Joliet will become a port of much importance, with harbor frontage of eight miles. There will be ample room for vessels to pass, even when craft are tied up at the wharves upon each side.

Another interesting possibility is the suggestion that the railroads may utilize the waterway in moving cars upon huge barges plying between Joliet and Chicago in cases of congestion of freight in the Chicago yards.

To Guard Against Floods.

It is required that the water be kept at the normal stage of forty feet below that of the level of the Chicago river while passing through Joliet, in order to guard against flooding the adjoining property. Provision has been made for the construction of adequate intercepting sewers to dispose of flood waters and to take care of the watershed tributary to the Des Plaines river, that may be interfered with by the changing of water levels through Joliet. Similar action is to be taken in the city of Ottawa.

Hupmobile

THE OUTSTANDING VALUE AMONG CLOSED CARS

This roomy, well-tailored Hupmobile sedan is built complete in Hupmobile's own shops.

It takes rank, in workmanship, with much costlier closed cars. Yet its price is so low, due to Hupmobile production methods, that it stands out clearly as greater value.

It is a thing of beauty, as every really fine closed car ought to be, and yet so rugged that it "stands up" like an open car.

The body is just as carefully engineered, and just as sound in construction, as the chassis.

The result is a beautiful, easy-riding car, with a very low running cost; and, at the same time, one so stout and strong that the owner can be sure of years of good service.

CITY ASSAILS 2 VALUATIONS FOR SURFACE LINES

Says They Should Be Same for Taxes and Rates.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

There is a distinct and large difference between the valuation of the surface lines for taxing purposes and for rate making purposes. Chester E. Cleveland Sr., special attorney for the city administration, claims that the figures should be identical.

He presented testimony to the Illinois commerce commission in the rate hearing, which showed the valuation for each purpose as follows:

Purpose	Amount.
Rate making	$160,200,000
Taxation	58,950,000
Difference	$101,250,000

The old utilities commission asserted in its decision that the law contemplates that one basis shall be used for valuing property for the purpose of taxation and a different basis for appraising property for the purpose of establishing just rates of fare.

Millions in Unused Buildings.

The city has also presented testimony to show that the companies have $3,442,080 worth of buildings which are either vacant or have been leased, and consequently buildings of that aggregate value are not used for transportation purposes.

The city also presented testimony asserting that the Chicago Railways company has 156 cars and the City Railway company 101 cars which are not in service. The value of these cars was placed at $1,504,867. This same testimony relative to buildings and cars was presented to the old commission.

By a different method the city further attempted to prevail upon the commerce commission to reduce the valuation upon which the companies may earn dividends. It took the capital account of $160,200,000 of the companies and asked that certain items be deducted for rate making purposes. These totaled $50,105,215. The old utilities commission considered these same items—with one exception—at the request of the city, and deducted $44,000,000 from the capital account.

Before Supreme Court This Week.

What the companies intend to reply has not been indicated. They have a week in which to prepare. In Washington this week attorneys for the city and the companies are scheduled to argue before the United States Supreme court the 7 cent fare case, which was appealed from the old utilities commission to the Sangamon county Circuit court, then to the state Supreme court, and then to the nation's Supreme court.

If the city wins there a 5 cent fare will be reëstablished as a contract obligation, and the present case before the commerce commission will be dropped.

Church Honors Two Couples Who Celebrate Their Golden Wedding Anniversaries.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN DUST.

MR. AND MRS. CARL NEIMANN

SIXTY years ago Mr. and Mrs. John Dust and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Neimann of South Chicago attended the same school and church in Pomerania, Germany. They married and came to Chicago fifty years ago. Forty-seven years ago these four people joined others in founding the Bethlehem Evangelical Lutheran church of South Chicago. Members of this church honored them recently on the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding day. The couples were remarried by the Rev. T. Thieme while 500 friends looked on.

Mr. and Mrs. Dust did rescue work following the Chicago fire in 1871.

AMERICAN SPIRIT IN FOREIGN BORN, HARDING'S PLEA

May Retain Love of Overseas Home.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 15.—President Harding, addressing a delegation of foreign born citizens who called at the White House today, appealed for consecration to America, declaring that without it "the real America to which we all aspire" was impossible.

"I have said a good many times we of America have no racial entity, and we are making, therefore, a people which is born of national inspiration," the President told the delegation. "We are the blend of all peoples in the world. I sometimes think we are much better for that.

American Spirit Needed.

"But to make the real America to which we all aspire we must have distinctly an American spirit, and you cannot have that without consecration to America. This is not impossible even for those who come here from foreign lands and who retain affections for native land and still retain an interest for their kinspeople.

"I would not think very much of a citizen, even though he came to America and then gave all his energy and all his soul to making a better republic, if he did not still feel concern for those of his kinspeople in the land from which he came.

Urged to Help U. S.

"At the same time we do want everybody in America consecrated to make this a better republic, a better republic for the exercise of the efforts of our people and for those who come to America to find a home and our offering of opportunity."

The delegation invited the President to attend and speak at the "America's Making" exposition to be held Oct. 29 to Nov. 12 in New York. The President took the invitation under advisement, but said it was unlikely that he would be able to accept it.

GOMPERS FINDS U. S. IS 'PLOTTING' TO HARM LABOR

Washington, D. C., Oct. 15.—[Special.]—Charging the existence of a conspiracy to destroy the department of labor in the government reorganization plan now being worked out, trade union legislative representatives in Washington adopted resolutions today condemning the purpose.

The meeting, presided over by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, voted unanimously to oppose "any attempt to weaken, destroy, subordinate, or amalgamate the department of labor," declaring that its maintenance as it exists is necessary to the interests of labor and the public.

$250,000 worth of Oriental and Chinese Rugs on Sale at 50 cents on the dollar!

—These rich and luxuriant specimens were thrown back on the hands of our wholesale department by dealers over the country, who were unable to dispose of them because of the general business depression.

This vast surplus stock must be sold without regard to cost, profit or former selling prices.

SWINGING into its second phenomenally successful week tomorrow morning, we can very safely and conservatively pronounce this the most remarkable sale of Oriental and Chinese Rugs in the retail history of Chicago. A portion of the time during the past week it was physically impossible for us properly to serve the vast crowds of buyers, to all of whom we extend our sincere apologies. We did the best we could, and hope you will come again this week.

Notwithstanding the avalanche of rug lovers, who took advantage of this rare and exceptional opportunity to buy one or more rich and luxuriant specimens at half price, scarcely any impression has been made on the assortment, so large was it in the beginning. So, when you come tomorrow, you will be amazed at the magnitude of the offering, as well as the exceptionally low prices which prevail.

Rugs purchased now may be held for future delivery

All of the fine Rugs included in this sale were originally imported by us from the world's greatest rug centers. We consigned them to our high grade dealers over the country; they were unable to dispose of them, however, because of the general business depression, and we had to take them back. Now, you have the opportunity of choosing from the entire collection at 50 cents on the dollar. Be here tomorrow morning; if you expect to buy a rug any time soon, now's the time to buy it.

We continue the sacrifice of this colossal collection of fine Oriental and Chinese Rugs at exactly one-half of the regular price.

OLD AND YOUNG OF IRELAND SEEK AMERICAN HAVEN

to a nearby hotel and plan to see the town.

First Trip to Dublin.

In spite of the fact that Wexford is less than 125 miles from Dublin, for many of the girls and men it is their first sight of their capital.

With awe we pass and repass the famous Mansion house, headquarters of Dail Eireann. It is just before Lloyd George's answer to De Valera's note regarding his attendance at the peace conference, and there is a lull of tension in Mansion house activities.

Important looking men ride up on unimportant looking bicycles. People as humble as our group are seen to enter. At last we cross the street, walk up the circular walk shaded by large old trees and protected with a high stone wall.

Before we have a chance to pull the knocker the door swings open and an old wizard, stooped and half blind, becomes negative before I have had an opportunity to become interrogative.

But the servitor is Buckley, and he has been at Mansion house for twenty-seven years, and who has more right than he to be negative?

We tell him we just want to look around, and mention as friends of ours the names of several well known Sinn Fein workers from Wexford. Buckley is as near all smiles as he is capable of being, and urges us to take chairs.

We are in the anteroom, dull looking save for four large gold framed mirrors, handsome mementos from the eighteenth century. On one wall is a picture of Queen Victoria, presented on the occasion of her first visit to Ireland, 1849. On the opposite wall, above a high mantle, is a picture of O'Connell; near it are a mace and gong.

We turn the pages of the visitors' registry, talk to Buckley about "the situation," listen to excited voices in a nearby room, recognize several Dail members as they come in, and finally leave, just as the assembly is about to convene.

(Tomorrow—Adventure at the American consulate and the steamship office.)

"HOME OF THE BABY LOBSTER"

At the North American Restaurant you have all the comfort and convenience of the most expensive dining places including the privacy of your own table instead of big boarding-house tables; and you serve yourself and pay only for the food you eat.

Breast of Milk-Fed Chicken with Bacon and Cream Gravy or Giblet Sauce for only sixty-five cents

A whole baby Lobster for 65 cents, hot with melted butter or cold with chili sauce, is only one of the many things which have made the North American the greatest sea-food restaurant since the days of Rectors. Here are other sea-food specialties of ours:

Half-dozen Cotuits, on the halfshell, with cocktail sauce	25c
One dozen fresh shrimps, with cocktail sauce	30c
Oyster Stew—made in an individual dish, with 6 big New York Counts, an entire bottle of Certified milk and a big piece of butter	35c
Fried Oysters—7 big New York Counts, fried to your order, with Tartar or Chili sauce or ketchup	35c

BREAKFAST

Big sweet roll, zwieback, coffee cake or fresh toast with butter or honey	5c
Individual pot of Coffee (2-cups) with real cream	10c
Fluffy Honey Waffle, with 3 strips of bacon or Mickelberry's Old Farm Sausage, butter, pure maple sap or honey	25c
2 fresh eggs fried in butter and 4 strips of bacon	30c
2 fresh eggs fried in butter and a big piece of real ham	45c

What better food than fried chicken when it comes to you right out of the pan and sizzling hot? Here, for only 65 cents, you can have breast of chicken with bacon and cream gravy or giblet sauce: Or, for 55 cents, a liberal portion of dark meat of chicken.

Each chicken we fry is a fine plump youngster. It must be the exact weight and quality which we know is best for frying or we won't buy it. If you have ever eaten fried chicken at the North American you know that aside from the fact that better chicken cannot be had anywhere, the portion we give you would cost close to $1.25 at any other high class restaurant or hotel.

Another appetizing specialty of ours consists of broiling for you, before your eyes, a juicy tenderloin or sirloin steak. It will be a real steak with just the right taste. And either will cost you only 75 cents.

Or for sixty-five cents we will broil to your order two wonderfully big lamb chops, with bacon and a liberal portion of peas. You won't be able to understand how we are able to do it in the face of what you pay for chops when you serve them at home. The answer is that our tremendous volume of business does it.

We bake all our own pies and pastries and our pastry cooks have orders in baking pies to "cram 'em full." For instance: In every cherry pie we use two full quarts of big luscious pitted cherries. No filler of any kind is used—we don't even use the juice, but instead use plenty of pure cane sugar and rich creamery butter. Our pies are baked in the biggest pans we can get. And we cut them into fifths—not mere sixths, which is the size usually served in restaurants and hotels. So our pies not only "bulge with goodness" but the size of each portion is larger than the average.

These are only a few of the best things to eat which you can always get at the North American at low prices. So is it any wonder that the North American today feeds more people than any other restaurant or hotel in Chicago?

And remember: our portions are big—usually ample for two, and the "kiddies" are welcome

SOLDIERS BEG CHANCE TO FLEE 'NO GOOD' RUSSIA

Mr. Rue here details some other of his experiences on his remarkable trip from the Caucasus to Moscow through the heart of Russia without bolshevik permission or supervision.

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

REVAL, Oct. 15.—While on a train en route to Tiflis some soldiers invited me into their compartment to have a glass of wine. I passed around some cigarets and tea biscuits, which precipitated political discussion as to why Georgia did not have good cigarets or tea biscuits any more. Two of the six men, after drinking considerable wine, became maudlin on the subject of communism, and, despite the efforts of the other four on my behalf, forced me to commit myself in favor of the "brotherhood of man." The other four were not so enthusiastic.

Later, after I had returned to my seat, the four followed me and asked if I could not get them out of the "no good" country.

Cheka Most Feared.

The most feared institution in Russia is the Cheka, which, independent of all other departments, works like a thief in the night, arresting and executing so quietly that the disappearance of its victims is the only sign of its activity. The Cheka quarters are carefully guarded, and a special ticket is necessary for admittance. At Tiflis I had an appointment with the president of the organization there, and while waiting for him in the entrance I passed cigarets to the guards, which broke the ice.

A German with me acted as interpreter. Before the guards had finished praising the quality of the cigarets they had secured all the information they wanted regarding both of us. A woman employé passed out of the building with a loaf of bread under her arm. One of the soldiers noticed it, and, attracting my attention, said the government had no business giving bread to women when the soldiers needed it. The soldiers are getting dissatisfied with the government, which they say, feeds every one but them. These men were supposedly selected and trustworthy guards.

Bit of Stage Stuff.

At a famine benefit in a garden in the old Georgian club there was a little sketch by four comedians, in which an old régime gendarme was chased by some Reds. The comedy was of the slapstick variety and ended with a dismal song. There was little applause.

"Did you notice that not a single person laughed?" I was asked by one of my entertainers. "Well, you can be sure that 95 per cent of the audience wished that those boys they were making fun of were back again."

Everywhere I went—Baku, Astrakhan, and Tsaritzan—the workers were discontented.

SAVANT WARNS WIDE WORLD OF 35 ARID YEARS

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Oct. 15.—The world must prepare for a thirty-five year dry period. This statement from Prof. Michelson, Russia's leading scientist, which was received by the soviet bureau here, has nothing to do with booze, but refers to the weather. The professor has completed studies and researches based on the noted scientist Brueckner's theories, which prove that the world was due for a spell of hot weather, bad harvests, and famine some time between 1920 and 1924.

According to Prof. Michelson the period began sooner than Brueckner calculated. The professor advises the farmers of the world to stimulate their crops during the coming years to prevent a famine such as Russia is experiencing from afflicting other lands.

Russia has prepared to make a strong bid for a share of the world's petroleum trade, according to reports received by the soviet bureau here. The commisar for foreign trade has completed plans for a government monopoly of the naphtha products of the Baku district and is engaging in negotiations with Britsh and other large interests. Russia is preparing to ship its oil products through Riga.

FIND BODIES OF 400 MASSACRED SPANISH TROOPS

MADRID, Oct. 15.—The Spanish troops in Morocco lost only six wounded in the operations which resulted in the occupation of Zeluan yesterday, according to messages from war correspondents at Melilla, received here today. The correspondents assert that most of the bodies of the 400 Spanish soldiers who were massacred last August, following a defeat of the Spanish, showed signs of torture and mutilation. The cavalry corps was so enraged that it charged the Moroccans without awaiting artillery preparations and engaged in hand to hand fighting.

Sales Organizer Sought

One of our clients has asked us to find a man for him who can show a successful record as a Sales Manager for agricultural implements, farm water systems, lighting systems or similar goods, selling to farmers through dealers and jobbers or distributors.

A wide acquaintance among farm implement dealers and salesmen calling on this class of trade would be helpful but not necessarily essential.

A record for picking and managing a successful sales crew, however, would be indispensable.

Only men of proven ability will be considered. No experiments will be tried.

To the man who has the actual record proving that he has been over the merchandising road our client is traveling, a very attractive opportunity awaits.

The main office and factory of our client is located in a thrifty western city. During the first year or so considerable traveling would be necessary, organizing the selling crew and making arrangements with distributors and dealers.

The goods rank high in their class, the prices are right and the men who own and manage the business are not only successful but very congenial to do business with.

Applicants for the position will please give full particulars in first letter. Give references, state age, nationality, family, salary required and send recent photograph. All will be held in strict confidence and an appointment for a conference arranged with those favorably considered. Write, "Sales Manager."

WOOING FRANCE COSTS GERMANY UPPER SILESIA

Estranged London, Say Foes of Wirth.

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Oct. 15.—Germany's present crisis is now blamed by the opponents of the government coalition upon the bankruptcy of the policy which sought a rapprochement with France, instead of England.

It is now known that there are two factions in the cabinet itself, one being led by Foreign Minister Rosen, which favored a closer contact with Great Britain and a reliance upon British fairness in future decisions on reparations and other important questions affecting Germany's future.

Deals with France.

The other faction, led by Reconstruction Minister Rathenau, who held several conferences with M. Loucheur, French minister of the devastated regions, stood for a policy which the whole world applauded, of trying to make friends with France.

The Rathenau-Loucheur conferences, according to political circles, were hostile to the coalition, and they succeeded only in bringing about the alienation of Great Britain. Today, when the results of the Upper Silesian partition have upset the whole German political and industrial balance, a cry had gone up against France for continuing its policy of ruining Germany economically and building up Poland, and also against Great Britain for not preserving Upper Silesian unity.

Strikes Spread in Germany.

One party says Dr. Rathenau failed to obtain the good will of France, while another claims that the British good will was lost through political mistakes in orienting Germany's policies in the wrong direction.

Accentuated by reports on the Silesian partition, the crisis in Germany continues to grow more serious each hour. German marks dropped today to 150 for $1, and with this new crash came reports of strikes in various parts of Germany. A newspaper strike hit Berlin, causing the Tageblatt to suspend.

Increased cost of food, due to almost worthless money, is the chief cause of the strikes—workmen finding it impossible to feed their families on their present wages.

Without the brush, suction does not pull the dirt through

With the Beating brush it is vibrated out See this demonstration

Attachments that clean with 219 cubic feet of air a minute!

Good news! You no longer have to forego the marvelous cleaning convenience of big-suction attachments, just because you realize and want the carpet sweeping efficiency of the motor-driven beating brush. Here is the reason. Before this, cleaners with a beating brush have woefully lacked suction. But we have finally achieved the long sought cleaning combination: Beating brush plus Super-suction.

Now everything in the house can be cleaned with the Hamilton Beach Attachments. And it's a fascinating way to clean, in place of the old wearisome dusting. A few magic strokes, and 219 cubic feet of air at a mile-a-minute speed, thoroughly cleans and aerates draperies, mouldings, bookcases, mattresses, upholstered furniture, radiators, registers, and all sorts of hard-to-get-at places and corners.

Besides, you will marvel when you see the absolute thoroughness of this great air rush and the beating brush in cleaning carpets and rugs. Every speck of dust and dirt, every thread and hair, including that destructive embedded grit that only a beating brush can remove, is swooped up into the bag. It is this all-round cleaning ability that appeals so strongly to those who have known only lesser machines.

The only cleaner that combines Beating brush and Super-suction

See it before deciding!

Most Value for the Money

Here you have in one Vacuum Sweeper every cleaner virtue. And at its remarkably low price of $55.00, it offers unrivalled value, and may be obtained on terms as easy as any.

When you see it, note its solid construction, its looks, its fineness of finish, its extra-strength parts. And listen to it! No nerve-racking whining and screeching. It is as silent and quiet as it is tireless and long-lasting. Dealers will gladly demonstrate in your home free. Or see it in the stores. Ask us, if your dealer's machines haven't arrived. We'll see that you are shown the famous 3-Point Demonstration.

LINCOLN
MOTOR CARS

The impression held by so many LINCOLN owners that they are peculiarly favored in having a special car, is true only in the sense that every LINCOLN is a special car; special because each is the object of infinite care that every LINCOLN shall uphold the LINCOLN'S high repute.

The impression that they have a special car is a natural conclusion which comes from the fact that the LINCOLN handles so much more easily, runs so much more smoothly, is so much more comfortable, is so much more capable; and because nimbleness, and vim, and go, are so much more in evidence than in anything to which motordom had hitherto been accustomed.

Some are types of quiet, conservative mein while others are of more imposing aspect, yet all reflect the air of elegance and true refinement.

CHIPS FLY FAST AS CARPENTERS' RANKS ARE SPLIT

Landis Decision Starts a Free for All Fight.

Fifteen fist fights and a near riot punctuated the weekly meeting of the carpenters' district council at 503 South State street last night.

The argument arose when one faction accused the other of conforming to the Landis wage award and working for $1 an hour. Then some one hit some one else on the nose.

Tumble to the Street.

Three men fell down the stairs leading to the street. The other 150 in the hall crowded after them. On the sidewalk one man caled another a thief; a third cried: "Liar!"

Some 2,000 people formed a cheering ring for the contestants. Street car traffic was blocked. One spectator suggested turning in a fire alarm.

Police Restore Order.

Three policemen then charged into the fray. Combatant members met them with glee and more dust arose. Finally some one turned in a riot call and the wagon from Harrison street responded. It took half an hour to bring peace.

None of the names of the contestants was learned. There were no serious casualties.

Quake, 2,865 Miles Distant, Recorded by Seismograph

An earthquake of moderate intensity, but lasting two and a half hours, was recorded in the seismograph at the United States government weather bureau early this morning. The center of the disturbance was 2,865 miles southwest of Chicago, probably in the Pacific ocean, according to the bureau.

The first tremor was recorded at 12:27 a. m., the maximum strength at 12:54 a. m., and the final tremor at 3 a. m.

DIES UNDER OWN AUTO.

STATE REALTORS WANT TAX LIFTED ON "INCREMENT"

Deters Sales and Hurts Building.

Peoria, Ill., Oct. 15.—[Special.]—J. B. Whitehead of Rockford was elected president of the Illinois Real Estate association at the closing session of the fifth annual convention here this afternoon. Mr. Whitehead succeeds Joseph K. Brittain of Chicago. Arthur C. Kussman of Chicago was elected secretary.

Directors for two year term are Valentine H. Surghnor, Chicago; W. L. Runyan, Danville; George H. Taylor, Chicago, and R. V. Field, Galesburg.

Decatur was selected as next year convention city, Springfield being the other rival.

Sales Tax Favored.

The convention adopted a resolution urging amendment to revenue laws to lift the tax on the increment of real estate, which it is claimed has been stifling the sale of real estate to the detriment of the building and housing situation, and declaring that there should be no discrimination in the exemption of securities of any kind and that all forms of bonds and kindred investments be taxed as are real estate bonds or mortgages.

The convention also indorsed the sales tax now pending in congress. The national board already has favored this measure.

Other resolutions called on the legislature to enact remedial legislation for the creation of a proper tax commission that will ferret out all property subject to taxation, thus providing for an equity in taxation "that must and will reboun" to the benefit of real estate. It was claimed the burden on real estate by taxation was increasing annually and that "it is well known that personal property subject in the state to taxation if properly listed and assessed would reduce the tax on real estate to a great extent."

"Housing Bill" Is Offered.

Following on the heels of the zoning bill, passed by the legislature to go into effect Jan. 1, 1922, a housing bill was presented to the convention this afternoon by Charles M. Nichols of Chicago, chairman of the zoning committee. It is framed with the idea to do away with crowded tenements.

A resolution was adopted changing the name of the organization from the Illinois Real Estate association to Illinois Realtors' association.

STAGE STARS TO GIVE BENEFIT FOR EX-SERVICE MEN

[Edgewater Beach Studio Photo.]

Free clinics for all world war veterans is one of the aims of the Chicago Osteopathic hospital, whose members and friends are seeking to raise several thousand dollars this afternoon at a benefit performance at the Garrick theater. The funds realized will be used for the continuation and increase of free treatment to ex-service men at the Chicago Osteopathic hospital, 5250 Ellis avenue.

"We are already giving treatment to many ex-service men," said Dr. Oliver C. Foreman, "and there is great need for a place where cases especially amenable to asteopathic attention can be given proper care."

MEDILL SCHOOL HEAD TO SPEAK ON LITERATURE

The lads that write news stories so notable that, as Col. Ingersoll used to say, they are as good literature as Joseph Addison and the other classicists ever write, will get their credit mark this afternoon at the new Journalistic club, 53 East Superior street. At 3 o'clock Prof. Harry Franklin Harrington, director of the Medill School of Journalism of Northwestern university, will open the "literary series" of discourses which the club has planned for the winter with a talk on "News Stories That Live." From some of them he will read. He will also lead a discussion on opportunities in journalism for women. Another feature of the afternoon at the clubhouse will be an exhibition of works of Elmore J. Brown, a painter of the Catskills.

IOWA MAN TO SPEAK ON CREDITS.

"Essential Points in National Credits" will be the subject of an address by E. G. Dunn of Mason City, Ia., at the meeting of the Chicago Association of Credit men in Hotel La Salle Tuesday evening. Mr. Dunn was a member of the Chicago board of trade for years.

The First Record

the song of the sea

"Hold the shell to your ear and you'll hear the sea singing."

WHEN the Sun first hid his face from the Sea, She became very angry. She roared, moaned and wept into the pink-lined shells nestling in the green-blue depths. In her fury, she shook the waves until they dashed the frightened shells ashore——The Sun shone. The sea smiled. The waves rippled and gurgled into the dainty pink shell-ears.

Thus the first Record was made—the Song of the Sea.

And so children, almost since the world began have been told: "Hold the shell to your ear, and you'll hear the Sea singing."

But not for thousands of years did man discover that sound waves which travel almost exactly like waves of water could be recorded—that the sound waves carrying the songs of the human voice and the playing of the world's great musicians could be written on wax by a jeweled finger—a finger of flawless blue sapphire—and the wax impression transferred to a lasting record.

Why the Vocalion Red Record excels

The mechanics of making music records vary but little. The difference which you notice instantly in Vocalion Records comes from skill and infinite care in recording and also from the perfect reproduction of the delicate wax impression into a permanent record.

A musician, with ear so delicate that no note however subtle can escape him, directs the making of Vocalion records—and not until the delicate mica disc—the ear of the phonograph—records the music as faithfully in tone and color as does the director's ear, will a record be allowed to pass.

Vocalion Records play on any Phonograph

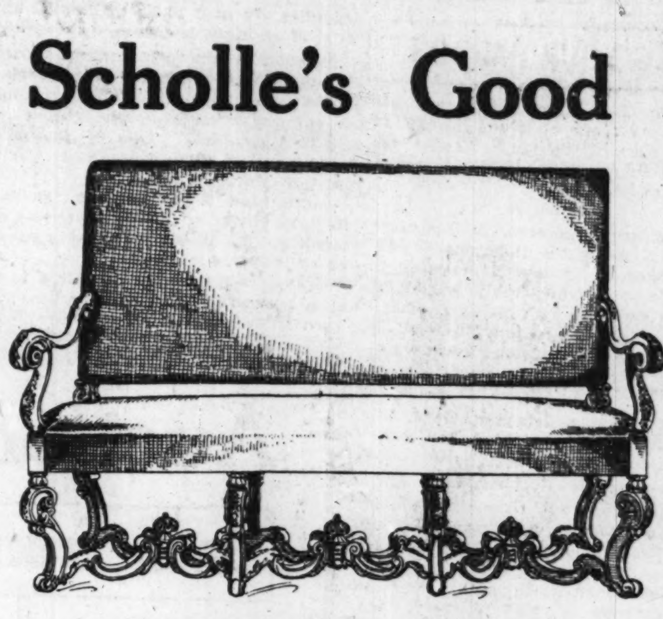
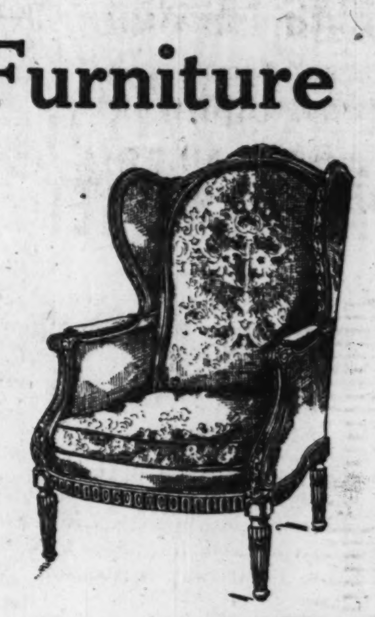
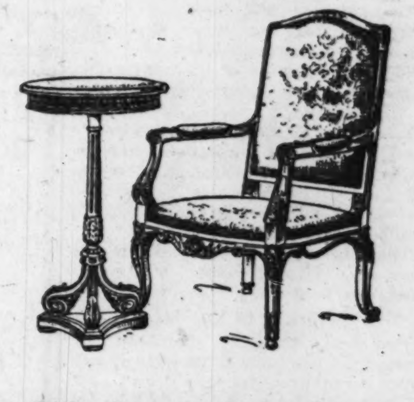
Scholle's Good Furniture







A new importation of Italian Hand Carved furniture in Louis XIV., Louis XV. and Louis XVI. periods.

Seasoned, assembled and upholstered in our own shops and comprising a large selection of Sofas, Chairs, Chaise Longues, Tables, Benches and Stools.

Prices ranging from $12.00 for hand carved Crickets to $1,600.00 for elaborate marble top Drawing Room Table.

YOU'LL not need to be told that the furniture shown in this illustration is something out of the ordinary; and when you see the furniture itself, the quality in material and workmanship will be apparent everywhere.

This furniture is imported by us from Italy; there are sofas, chairs, tables, benches, stools, chaise longues, etc.; all of them of a quality that justifies their importation by a house like ours.

As to prices, you would not expect prices on such merchandise to be "low," and yet, comparatively, they are low, very low. This is due to the time and terms of our buying. We doubt if you will ever see a repetition of such prices on such furniture.

Better come and see it, no matter if you have no intention of buying. Such furniture isn't seen very often.

MEXICO TO SNUB ARMS PARLEY; PAY UP? NOT YET

Obregon Says He'll Quell Puebla Riots.

Mexico City, Oct. 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—President Obregon, in a conference with American newspaper correspondents today, made four important declarations, substantially as follows:

That Mexico will have no official representatives at the impending Washington conference;

That the question of the recognition of Mexico by the United States remains in "status quo";

That the Mexican federal government will support the Puebla state authorities, even with troops, if necessary, to maintain order which has been threatened as a result of protests against tax laws in that state;

That negotiations relative to the payment of Mexico's foreign debt are in a preliminary stage.

Hungry in Puebla.

President Obregon discussed for more than an hour a variety of subjects pertaining, for the most part, to internal affairs. In alluding to the Puebla situation, he asserted it possessed no elements of danger other than the ordinary appeal of hungry people who are suffering discomforts due to a commercial paralysis in that city.

Gen. Maycotte, federal military commander at Puebla, who has been in Mexico City conferring with President Obregon regarding the situation there, was to leave here tonight. But, according to President Obregon, he has received "hands off" orders unless stern necessity should demand otherwise. The president intimated, however, that unless demonstrations cease and business reopens the federal forces will be employed to restore tranquility.

Near Revolution Stage.

Mexico City, Oct. 15.—[By the Associated Press.]—A desperate situation, which already has cost two lives from violence, is reported today at Puebla, where demonstrations against the state government's alleged excessive tax law continue. A majority of the stores have been closed, the bread and milk supplies are said to be exhausted and food of all kinds is scarce.

Street cars are not running, according to reports, which add that incensed leaders are exhorting shouting throngs to take aggressive action against the state government. One of the most prominent of these leaders is said to be José Maria Sanchez.

More than 30,000 persons are said to have staged a parade yesterday afternoon. The line of march was guarded by soldiers in trucks.

Travelers assert the situation is almost anarchial, and that the police frequently are called upon to use their clubs and pistols. Other towns in the state of Puebla are becoming infected with the spirit of revolt, they declare, and numerous raids on markets and grocery stores are recorded.

PAY GRAFT LAID TO PLUMBERS AT ARMY HOSPITAL

Work Installed, Torn Out, Reinstalled, Is Charge.

As a result of information that thousands of dollars had been wasted in the construction of the Speedway hospital by plumbers who carried on a systematic form of adding to the cost of the structure by putting in sets of plumbing, the next day tearing out the work and again installing it, leaders of the plumbers' union were called before the Dailey commission yesterday. Each of the witnesses denied he had any knowledge of such conditions existing at the hospital or returned evasive answers.

"You must know what happened there; you were there yourself," Joseph B. Fleming, attorney for the commission demanded of Christ L. Ivers, 356 West 19th street, a member of the plumbers union.

Thought It Was Orders.

"Well, yes, I guess they did take some of the plumbing out, but I thought it was the architects' orders, I didn't know anything about it."

"We are going to the bottom of this matter," said Senator Dailey, chairman of the commission. "We have been told the plumbers working at the Speedway hospital deliberately tore out sets of plumbing time and again, just to make the plumbing contract cost more. We mean to find out whether the men deliberately did it themselves or whether the contractors ordered it."

Ivers was then questioned in regard to labor sluggings at recent meetings of the union, and admitted he had been slugged himself at an election to nominate the business agent of the union in May, 1920. He said he had headed an opposition ticket and that he was attacked and beaten at the entrance to the hall in which the election was held.

Surprise for City Employé.

Charles R. Mulcahey, 7748 Constance avenue, was given a surprise while listening as a spectator at the hearing when he was called to explain why he was always in attendance at each meeting of the commission and also frequently was seen at the labor wage arbitration hearings before Federal Judge Landis.

Mulcahey admitted he was in the employ of the city as inspector in the water pipe extension department and collected full pay from the city while he spent his time in various courtrooms where hearings relative to the plumbers' union were in progress. He said he had been in the employ of the city for seventeen years and a journeyman plumber for four years. He has attended every meeting of the union since then, he said.

"Then you know that the union voted to strike against the wage award of 95 cents an hour given by Judge Landis?" Attorney Fleming asked.

"No, the union did not vote, but there was a meeting last Saturday night," he said, "and the men just decided they would not work for 95 cents an hour. That was all."

Urge Landis Award Support.

Resolutions indorsing the award of Judge Landis in the building wage controversy and asking support for it by builders, home owners, architects, contractors, engineers, real estate men, bankers, and all others identified with construction work, have been adopted by the Chicago Association of Commerce. The resolutions also appeal to contractors not to violate the conditions of the award.

a fascinating NEW JORDAN with exclusive NEW MOTOR at a new and Lower Price

A NEW bright star has risen. And a lucky one.

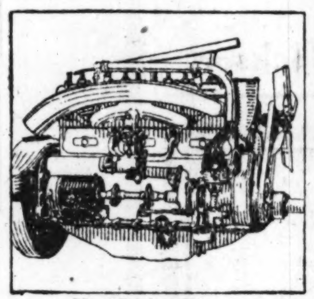
A wonderful new motor car is here.

It's a Jordan.

Built and priced to lead the field of fine quality light cars, it is distinguished by a new and exclusive Jordan motor.

A thrilling dynamic bundle of fascinating power is the heart of this—the best automobile ever built in America to sell around $2000. That's value.

You have never ridden in a motor car just like this.



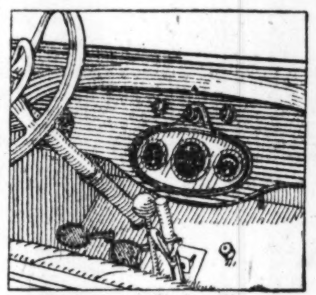
New Jordan Motor

No man will be able to judge it's exceptional personality until he has known this rare experience. No man will be able to classify it as merely a remarkable six. There's a nimble, electrifying something in that burly motor, which small boys call a "wallop."

Pep—Punch—Performance

Call it Pep—Punch—Performance. It makes the old driver turn and grin.

Prove it? Just come and drive it yourself. Scores of people we never hope to sell are invited to do this daily.



Instruments Under Glass

The motor is chain driven of course—as all modern motors must be. Gears never remain silent. Four bearings to defeat vibration. Economy? Yes, twenty miles to the gallon. Above all—it's exclusively Jordan. That's distinction

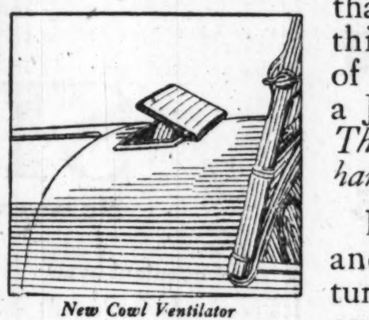
Women Who Know

Women who know how ancient appears the gown of days gone by can explain the charm of Jordan appearance.

Jordan has always dared to lead in body styles. It was Jordan who made the old-fashioned beveled edge body look as antique as grandmother's hoopskirt That's style.

In this new fashion car all instruments are under glass, lighted from without. Protected in washing and from rain. A concentrated beauty spot—taken in at a glance.

A Little Touch of Charm



New Cowl Ventilator

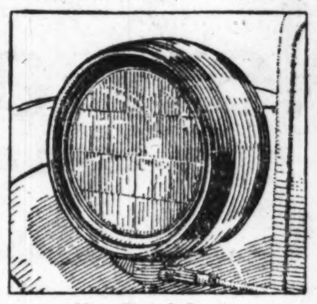
Women who first learned to drive old-fashioned heavy cars quickly sense that subtle something—the feel of the wheel of a Jordan car. That's ease in handling.

Drive all day and you'll return happy and exhilarated—mentally and physically—unconscious of the city speed laws—enthralled by many easy miles per hour on country roads. That's comfort.

Rare comfort is yours, however warm the day. The new cowl ventilator keeps the fore compartment cool. Operated with a twist of the wrist from the driver's seat.

The ventilator adds a little touch of charm—a little bit of something that every good car eventually must have.

Imagine yourself approaching this trim, graceful car—low hung, with lines inspiring speed.



New Barrel Lamp

The colors are as interesting as all Jordan ideas. You have your choice of the most enduring bright finish or the new opaque velvet finish. If you choose the latter, drive your car a month—turn on the hose and it's clean. No polishing—no scratches will show.

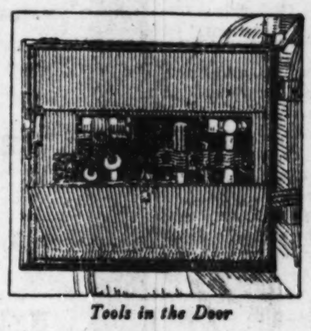
Women as usual are demanding it first, because it has a custom appearance and because it is dust-proof.

Drive The Car Yourself

Step into the Jordan. You know you step—you never climb into a Jordan. Experience only, not words, will reveal the feeling when you take the wheel. You are more a part of this car than any you ever sat in. It has a solid, sturdy feeling. You know that the car is all one piece. It stays put.

Balanced better than any car built, this nimble Jordan hugs the road, moving constantly forward—never sideways. No wiggling, wabbling or twisting. No tail wagging behind.

A new lubricating system insures the long life of this Jordan. Alamite throughout. But that's not enough for Jordan—a new independent system reaches inaccessible places under the car—no more crawling under.



Tools in the Door

A new transmission and a positive lock saves insurance—protects against theft annoyance.

A new type of clutch, instantly responsive, long control lever reaching into your very hand.

It is a rustless car. Every nickel-plated part on a foundation of brass.

There's a new swanky Jordan barrel lamp—custom style with broad band of nickel on non-rusting brass.

No more unloading passengers to find a dirty tool roll, usually empty. Tools in padded locked compartment in left front door.

Jordan Has The Courage

Success — Vision — and the lucky Jordan star made possible this timely announcement.

Success enabled Jordan to avoid the deadly struggle to cut quality to quickly attain a lower price. It gave him courage to build a vastly better car instead.

Old Jordan owners knew that Jordan would do just that thing.

Vision enabled Jordan to know that Service defines Value and motor cars will henceforth compete not alone in price but in service.

So Jordan has built a vastly better car. An enduring car. Cut his own profits. Staked his all on the positive belief that 10,000 men will buy this car when they realize that it will run 200,000 miles with reasonable care and last ten years, if the owner treats it fairly. That's endurance.

O'CONNOR DENIED NEW TRIAL; SAYS HE IS INNOCENT

Sentenced to Be Hanged on Dec. 15.

'TOMMY' O'CONNOR [TRIBUNE Photo.]

"Tommy" O'Connor, super-gunman and slayer of Detective Sergeant Patrick O'Neill, was yesterday denied a new trial by Chief Justice Kickham Scanlan and sentenced to be hanged Dec. 15 between sunrise and sunset.

In pronouncing sentence Judge Scanlan declared himself satisfied with the verdict of the jurors. "Your own flesh and blood testified in regard to vital facts," he said to O'Connor. "I am satisfied you are guilty."

"O'Connor vehemently protested his innocence. Asked if he had anything to say before sentence was pronounced, he jumped to his feet.

"We have all got to die some time, your honor," he said, "and for my part I would rather be dead than live in the same world with the people who prosecuted me. I am innocent. If I were standing before God this minute I would swear I was innocent."

O'Connor, carefully barbered and dressed in a blue suit and brown shoes, then stepped back with arms folded while the sentence was read. In reading the sentence the first time the judge made a mistake in the date, so the sentence was read twice.

Attorney James C. O'Brien obtained sixty days in which to file a bill of exceptions. He declared he would appeal the case to the Supreme court. Assistant State's Attorney Lloyd Heth then made a motion that all the original exhibits in the case be sent to the Supreme court.

O'Connor will be hanged on a Thursday instead of Friday, the usual day fixed for hangings at the county jail. Judge Scanlan said he set the date to comply with certain technicalities of the law.

EXPERTS ADVISE AGAINST USING CORN AS FUEL

Has Less Heat Value and Costs More.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Press reports from the northwestern corn belt indicate that many tons of corn instead of coal will be burned in farm homes this winter. That may be advisable in Nebraska, South Dakota, and Minnesota, but farmers in this part of the corn belt would consider it economically wasteful to use corn as fuel.

"I do not think many Illinois farmers will use corn as fuel this winter, even though the price of corn is quite out of line with the price the farmer has to pay for his fuel and other necessities," said D. O. Thompson, secretary of the Illinois Agricultural association.

"What Nebraska or South Dakota farmers will do, I can't say. But Illinois farmers are closer to market, and just on the basis of cold figures I don't believe it would pay them to burn corn.

"The mere idea of burning the crop they have worked so hard to produce would be repugnant to most farmers, I think, even though the crop will not bring much on the market."

Frown on Corn as Fuel.

A few weeks ago, when farmers began filling their coal sheds with their winter's supply of fuel, they began to ask the question, Is corn cheap fuel, and would it be cheaper to burn corn instead of coal? Scientific investigators said no in answering this question.

Recently the question was answered by investigators at the Iowa State college when the price of corn was lower than it is now. Basing their answer on scientific facts, these investigators said that coal would have to go much higher or corn would have to become almost valueless before it would pay to burn corn.

Relative Heat Values.

Iowa engineers found that coal which generally sells at $10 a ton would have to sell at $20 a ton before it would pay to burn corn worth 47 cents for a 75 pound bushel. Tests showed that corn with 10 per cent moisture, the winter average, gives off only 7,540 British thermal units of heat per pound as against 12,000 units from Iowa coal. At this rate, the investigators claim, corn could become very cheap and still be expensive fuel.

Besides, corn is found to be a poor burner. It acts like green cord wood and requires a great deal of attention in firing.

"All You Can Eat for a Dollar"

It Is Here Today
See It—Ride In It

Think of a light, economical, moderate priced car that does these things.

That is so fleet and smooth in its response to your will you are never conscious that it is a piece of machinery.

That is so easily operated you can guide it for hours through crowded city traffic or send it across country for a whole day's run without the usual fatigue to driver or passenger.

That is so reliable that attention with an oil can virtually constitutes its sole service requirement.

Such was the aim and such is the achievement—

the New and Improved ESSEX

Get a New and Joyous Thrill in Motoring

Old Essex drivers sense the difference as soon as they take the wheel.

Its speed and acceleration and endurance are known to them. Others may not be so familiar with these Essex qualities. Their surprise and delight will be all the greater.

But old owners who know the Essex will be charmed at the smoother way the New Improved Essex does the things that give them pride in their cars.

More Economy Than Ever

From the first Essex appealed to men because it does what costlier and larger cars do and at small car cost in fuel, oil and tires.

The New Improved Essex adds gasoline mileage. Oil economy is greater, although old Essex cars averaged around 300 miles to the quart. Its tires often gave 10,000 to 15,000 miles of service. Now cord tires are standard equipment and greatly increase tire mileage.

Old Essex owners hardly understand how reliability could be increased. Many—hundreds in fact—report upwards of 30,000 and 40,000 miles of service, with incredibly small repair bills as judged by the usual requirements of motor car operation.

But the new improved Essex lengthens the period of that service. Simple and inexpensive ways to replace parts as they wear are provided. Thus the tight, squeak-free and rattle-free qualities and lively performance of the Essex when new may be retained through the life of the car. And how long an Essex may be relied upon to serve needs more years for proof than opportunity has yet provided.

A Better Car for Less Money

All the advantages of the original Essex are retained. The pride of ownership is greater. You can turn it in narrow streets. It finds room in small parking spaces. It is small and light and yet commodious, safe and comfortable.

The New Improved Essex expresses the new day meaning of refinement—of reduced weight—freedom from unnecessary bulk, and the finest mark of motoring luxury.

When Essex is considered, size and price do not mark the standard of car quality or value.

We want you to know that—a ride will prove it.

"Dear Mother—

I love you. I never knew how much until today. It has been months since I wrote. I am ashamed.

Today a miracle happened. At a moving picture, before I knew how or why, the years rolled back and I was a boy again. I felt your hands on the covers at bedtime, your lips on my hurt fingers, your breast under my cheek, your songs in my ears.

For two hours at this theatre I have had all the thrills of schoolhouse fun, of street fights, of "love-at-seventeen" again. This miracle picture taught me at last what your love meant.

I love you. Today I know why.

YOUR SON.

P. S. The picture's name is 'Over the Hill'."

CONGRESS MAKES "FREE FOR ALL" OF ILLINOIS POLITICS

Failure to Increase Size of House Upsets Plans.

Refusal of the house of representatives at Washington Friday night to increase its membership from 435 to 460 produces a marked effect upon the Illinois primary campaign, that will open now at high speed.

If the higher figure had been chosen, Illinois would have gained an additional seat and three congressmen at large would have been nominated in April and elected in November. With the size of the house remaining unchanged, Illinois continues to choose two members at large.

Republican politicians have been banking upon the basis of confidential information from Washington upon the additional place, and all of the early maneuvering in preparing for the 1922 state campaign have been on that supposition.

Free for All Champion Likely.

It is now highly probable that neither of the fighting factions will attempt to make a state primary slate and that the campaign will be a free for all for the nominations for state treasurer, state superintetndent of public instruction, and the two places for congressmen at large.

That there will be an insistent demand from northern Illinois particularly and from Cook county that the legislature of 1923 perform its constitutional duty and reapportion the state congressionally, is a foregone conclusion. There has been no redistricting of the state since 1901 and nearly all of the heavy Republican districts in the city and north and west of Springfield now have populations respectively twice the size of the rural territory in central and southern Illinois.

Cook county, on the population figures, is entitled to at least one of the two "at large" seats.

Booms Doomed to Die.

That Senator Richard J. Barr of Joliet would have been a candidate for congressman at large, in the event of three being the state's allotment, has been known for some time. It is now understood that he will seek reëlection to the state senate. Several other tentative booms will be allowed to pass away.

Former Gov. Richard Yates has opened his campaign for reëlection as one of the members at large. Henry R. Rathbone, who was a candidate when Gov. Yates and "Billy" Mason were nominated two years ago, has been campaigning for months. These two are credited with a strong personal following in both of the main factional camps. John J. Brown of Vandalia expects to enter the race and Stephen A. Day of Evanston has announced his candidacy. Part of the city hall crowd in Chicago is backing the daughter of the late Representative Mason for his succession.

No fight is in sight over state superintendent of public instruction, for which Supt. Blain expects again to be a candidate. Neither of the factions seems to care a whoop as to who is nominated for state treasurer under existing circumstances. Indications are that there will be no move made as to treasurer until the Small trial is out of the way, if it does get out of the way before primary time.

The first definite moves toward actual coalition on the Cook county ticket between the anti-Lundin Republicans and the Democrats probably will be taken this week. The perfection of the anti-Lundin Republican organization is practically complete and the important conferences that will handle coalition are due to start before the week-end

FARMER-LABOR PARTY TO NAME FULL TICKETS

Complete state and county tickets will be placed in the field for the 1922 elections in Illinois, according to the decision reached yesterday at the state convention of the new Farmer-Labor party that started a two-day session at Aurora.

By reason of the vote polled in 1920, the party is entitled to have a primary election in April and its own column on the ballot at the November election.

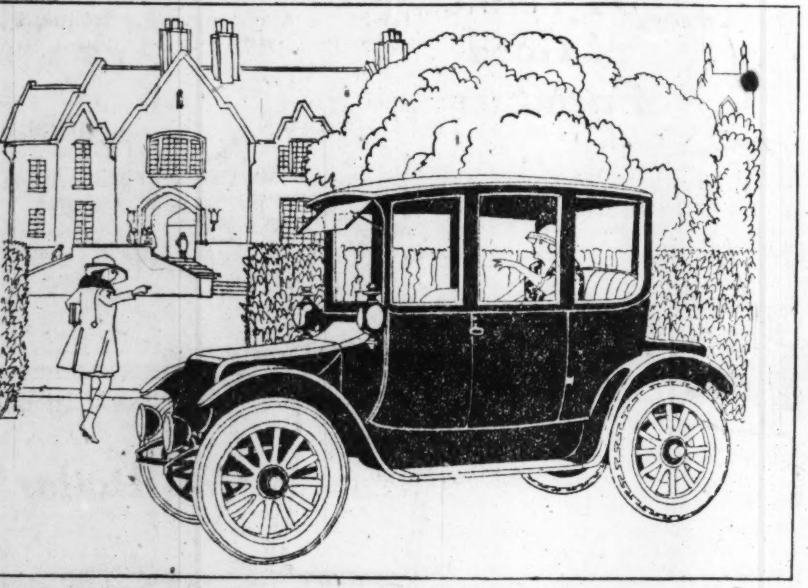
YOU CAN NOT KNOW THE JOY OF PERFECT MOTORING UNTIL YOU HAVE DRIVEN A RAUCH & LANG ELECTRIC AUTOMOBILE

The Challenge of the ELECTRIC Automobile



THE RAUCH & LANG ELECTRIC AUTOMOBILE—THE CAR FOR ALL THE FAMILY—EASILY OPERATED, ECONOMICAL AND DEPENDABLE

ELECTRICITY to-day dominates the world as the perfect driving power. You see its application everywhere. Enlisted to drive giant battleships, chosen to drive great railway trains, called on the job where there is any big work to do, it obviously is the practical power to drive automobiles. That is why motor car owners of full experience are to-day turning to the Rauch & Lang Electric Automobile.

They are fast discovering that for their actual needs—the use which makes their automobile worth having and worth maintaining—the Rauch & Lang Electric is scientifically and practically right.

Check Up Your Real Use of Your Car

The instant the automobile finds its true place in your life and your mind, the Rauch & Lang Electric will appeal to you as the logical car. Eliminate sport from the automobile of your dreams and it stands revealed to you a car to take you from one spot to another—a car of usefulness. When you realize this, you too, with other men of insight and women of common sense, will turn to the Rauch & Lang Electric, as a matter of course.

Check up on your actual use of your car—where you really go and how. Eliminate the trips you dream of taking some day, but perhaps never take. Do this, and you will be amused, or shocked to see how little the excessive speed and long distance radius which you thought so important when you bought your car, actually serve you.

Tell yourself truthfully the number of times you have driven your car sixty miles from home; how many times have you driven more than thirty miles an hour. How often have you been where the law allows you to drive more than twenty?

Isn't this essentially what an automobile means to you: a conveyance to take you to and from work—to the club—to the theatre—to the homes of friends—to church, or for a short spin in the country. No need of high speed, and seldom a chance to use it.

In short, your real use for an automobile is the kind of use which the Rauch & Lang Electric Automobile gives best of all types of cars. It is best because it is more pleasant, more reliable and more economical to you.

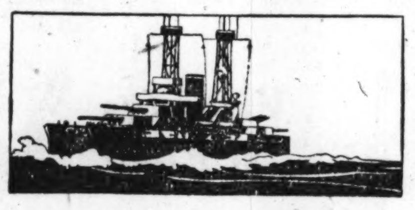
What the Rauch & Lang Electric Automobile gives you is the service you need day in and day out—the perfection of service in driving in crowded traffic, over streets rough or smooth—quick starting—quick stopping,—and above all, economy of operation and maintenance.

Practical Realization of Scientific Ideal

Built around electricity—the driving power which scientists and engineers alike agree is ideal—the Rauch & Lang Electric Automobile delights the scientific mind and practical hand. It possesses now what automobile engineers are all striving for, no matter what type of car they build—even, continuous torque without gaps of power, impacts and impulses, noise and vibration. Added to perfection of power, it has simplicity of construction. Battery—control—brakes, each simple as the figure "1".

Because it is simple in structure—because it is driven by the simple yet greatest force in nature—the Rauch & Lang Electric Automobile is the practical realization of a scientific ideal. It is powerful yet noiseless and free from vibration. It is sturdy with few parts to get out of order, and friction reduced to a minimum. It is clean, roomy, comfortable—the ideal family car.

As the Rauch & Lang Electric sets the high mark of convenience and service, it sets the low mark of economy. The battery is re-charged at night when the car is not in use—as simple as connecting an electric iron. Power costs you on an average of $5.00 to $10.00 per month. And here is the supreme economy—the owner of the Rauch & Lang Electric Automobile needs no chauffeur.



ELECTRICITY—THE POWER SELECTED TO DRIVE THE BATTLESHIP—IS THE DRIVING POWER FOR THE AUTOMOBILE

A Common Sense Joy Ride

To drive a Rauch & Lang Electric Automobile is a joy. You start the car as easily as you press a light button. Controlled by a touch it answers your hand promptly, almost to your thought. You guide it as easily as you walk—stop it as readily as you halt your step. And all noiseless as the night.

Yet it is an automobile for a driver who wants to get there—for red blooded men and women. Rugged and powerful it glides down the avenue ahead of cars of other types. It climbs hills with an ease unmatched by many cars and climbs them without splutter, jolt and jar.

You cannot know perfect motoring until you have driven in a Rauch & Lang Electric Automobile. Just call on the Rauch & Lang dealer in your city, or telephone and he will arrange to take you for a drive. If there is no dealer in your city, write us.

Every automobile owner should write anyhow for our interesting booklet "Is Your Car Fooling You?" It will tell you something you need to know.

BLUENOSE SAILS TO VICTORY IN SCHOONER RACE

Takes First Trial Event for Fishermen's Cup.

Halifax, N. S., Oct. 15.—Lunenburg's schooner Bluenose, from a lumbering start in a light breeze, today romped home in a stiffening wind like a galloping filly, showing her heels to seven other two-stickers at the end of a forty mile elimination trial.

Its official time of 5 hours and 36 minutes and 18 seconds gave it a first lien on honors as Nova Scotia's challenger to race the Gloucester schooner Elsie off Halifax next week for the international fishermen's trophy.

Loses Early Lead.

The Bluenose took the lead at the start, but fell back early to fourth place in softening air. Skillful jockeying by Capt. Angus Walters brought it to the front again at the third mark and from then on it led, steadily increasing its advantage on a long reach to the finish.

The Canadia, Capt. Joe Conrad's fleet hand liner, finished with the Alcala, Capt. Rolly Knickles' fast knockabout, third.

The Delawana, defeated in last year's international races with the Esperanto, finished fourth. Delawana, skippered by Capt. Bachman, made a poor start, being the last to cross the line, but made a good showing when it came on the wind after passing the second mark of the forty mile course.

Sail Again Monday.

On Monday the schooners will race again, the challenger to be picked on a point basis. The standing and times at the finish in today's race follows:

Schooner.	Points.	Time.
Bluenose	8	4:06:18
Canadia	6	4:10:26

MELLOR RUNS TO MARK IN A. A. U. TEN MILE EVENT

Running true to predictions, and with weather to his liking, "Chuck" Mellor of Logan Square A. C. won the annual ten mile Central A. A. U. distance running championship, with a new record time of 56:55. He won by 150 yards, with W. J. Watson second. The event was held over the five-eighths mile course about Palmer square yesterday and was sponsored by the Logan Square club.

Five Logan Square runners placed among the first ten. The course had been specially surveyed, and officials expressed little doubt as to the award of a new Central A. A. U. record to Mellor. RUTH MAY DARE BAN OF LANDIS IN GAME TODAY

New York, Oct. 15.—[United Press.]—Babe Ruth and Bob Meusel of the Yankees face suspension as a result of their determination to participate in an exhibition game at Buffalo tomorrow despite National Commissioner Landis' announcement that such action would be a violation of baseball law.

Landis was asked to rule specifically on the proposed playing of the two Yankee stars and was quoted as saying they would not be permitted to play. Following this Ruth and Meusel declared they would play anyway.

CORNELL SWATS RESERVES, 110 TO 0

Ithaca, N. Y., Oct. 15.—The Cornell football team scored almost two points a minute today against the Western Reserve university eleven, defeating the Ohioans, 110 to 0. It was the largest score made by a Cornell team on the local gridiron since 1898, when the Red and White defeated the University of Rochester, 128 to 0. Cornell scored 21 in the first period, 34 in the second, 21 in the third, and 34 in the fourth.

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

COLLEGE DEPARTMENT.

DEAR WAKE: Apropos your comment on sportsmanship in college football, it strikes me a word of commendation concerning Negro athletes might not come amiss.

The colored football player has controlled himself well—in difficult situations I should imagine at times—and this self-control and gentlemanly attitude deserves a tribute. I have never heard charges of muckerism against these college colored men and there has been quite a line of them:

Lewis, Matthews, and Gourdin of Harvard, Pollard of Brown, Ransom of Beloit, Slater of Iowa, Turner of Northwestern, Dismond of Chicago, Marshall of Minnesota, Taylor of Penn, Robeson of Rutgers, Butler of Dubuque, Drew of Drake, and others.

E. H. B. J.

Negro Given Square Deal.

In the middle west with whose sport The Wake is more familiar, we seldom have noted any marked unfairness toward Negro athletes on the field of play. There have been occasional lapses from the stands, but that is just the appeal The Wake made in a previous article—against muckerism and offensive partisanship on the part of spectators [although at the time we had not Negro athletes in mind].

In the list quoted by our Helper, Pollard and Robeson were All-American football selections while several others were on the last Olympic team.

A Negro's Viewpoint.

We have discussed the subject with only one Negro—Alexander Jackson, who was track man and class orator at Harvard and is now in New York engaged in work looking toward the betterment of his race.

Jackson said that in his prep school days when playing football, he frequently heard side-line cries of "Kill the nigger." I asked what effect that had on him. He replied that it stung because of its unfairness and prejudice but made him fight all the harder.

The Wake has never thought it advisable to insist on the playing of Negroes against teams whose members hold a deep-seated prejudice. Our view is that it is unfair to colored players to subject them to the taunts or possible intentional injury of those in whom this prejudice is hereditary or beyond the reach of reason.

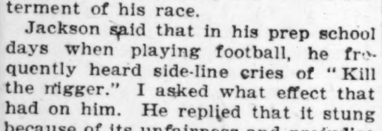
Then four bits more to purchase a pack
Of cards with advertisements on the back.



Far be it from Ed to hazard a cent

Fire Anniversary Aftermath

There appears almost an equal division among the Helpers, as judged by the many communications, whether Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked over the lamp which started the Chicago fire, or whether the fire was caused by a party of beer drinkers in the O'Leary barn.

Therefore we think the controversy may be settled by accepting the compromise of C. H. W. that in either instance it was the "kick" which caused it.

Dear Wake: Following the fire, the old courthouse bell was melted up and made into thousands of tiny bells. We girls of the West Division High school attached them to our garters, and in class the tinkles caused much bewilderment to dear old Prof. Delafontaine, Dr. Willard, and others.

H. A. H.

Dear Sir: On the north side, a small cottage [now 2121 Hudson ave.] was saved by its owner, Capt. Bellinger, with pails of water from the Ten Mile Ditch which ran through in back of Clark St.

For several days before relief could be secured, Capt. Bellinger and his wife kindly harbored twenty-one homeless persons, including myself. In the entire burned district of the Chicago fire, it is about the only residence that is still standing.

Wisconsin's cardinal clad gridiron warriors, surpassing in both offense and defense, defeated Northwestern, 27 to 0, on Evanston field yesterday before a "home coming" crowd of 15,000 persons, who cheered throughout the plucky but futile efforts of the Purple to cope with its more formidable opponents.

Northwestern played hard, and at times tackled desperately, but that was about all it could do against Richards' aggregation. The Badgers showed a driving attack, clever short passing, and a line which, while called green and inexperienced from a Big Ten standard, still outcharged the Purple forward wall and sifted through to hurry the kicker on punts or meet the Purple backs beyond the line of scrimmage in those brief periods when McDevitt's men had the ball.

Defense Holds Down Score.

Considering that Northwestern did not register a single first down in the whole hour of combat, and that only one forward pass for a trifling gain was completed, the Evanstonians deserve credit for not being snowed under by a larger count. It was the tenacity of their defense, which did not let up even in the hopeless fight, that gave what cheer could be derived from a one sided contest to the Purple partisans.

Wisconsin scored one touchdown in each quarter. At the finish the Badger lineup was composed mostly of second string men. In the first half the Cardinal earned eleven first downs, four of which came directly from forward passes, and in the second half six first downs. Richards' men essayed eighteen forward passes, of which half were successful.

Badger Backfield Powerful.

As Northwestern early was seen to be out of it, the college crowd present began to size up the Badgers for the big games to come. They saw a formidable driving backfield combination in Williams, Elliott, Gibson, who seems to have answered the quarter back problem, and Sundt. Williams in particular picked his openings well and looks like one of the best backs seen in the Big Ten. As an interferer for Elliott, he performed brilliantly, in addition to his own ground gaining.

It was this combination that showed the prettiest play of the game in the fourth quarter. With the ball on the Badger 45 yard line, Gibson began a run, tossed the ball to Elliott for a short completed pass, and the latter, with nearly half the visiting team as interferers, started down the field around Northwestern's left end, with Williams in their van.

Knock Off Purple Tacklers.

As Blumenthal came up to tackle, Elliott deliberately slowed up for his intereferers to take off Blumenthal, and shifted his direction. Two more Purple tacklers were brushed away as Elliott waited for his interference. Then, in a Damon and Pythias rôle, Williams and Elliott set sail for the goal with a clear field. At the 15 yard line a Purple jersey shot through the air from behind and brought down the Badger, who had traveled forty yards. It was Taylor, Northwestern's colored end, who had succeeded Bud Turner, who wore himself out in his usual hard tackling and bitter defense.

Wisconsin at the start played mostly from a punt formation, giving triple threat of punt, pass or run. The runs began in a wide circling of the end with the man carrying the ball several paces behind loose interference. With the defensive tackle and end brushed out of the way, he usually cut back through tackle for good gains

Short Pass Game Successful.

Wisconsin's short forward pass game, over the line of scrimmage for five and ten yard gains, tactics which defeated Illinois last year, was in good working order.

Bunge played a great game at center for the Madison outfit, and Gould, shifted from a half back position to end, broke into more than his share of plays. Wisconsin has material for an effective line. There seemed room for improvement in charging, but criticism

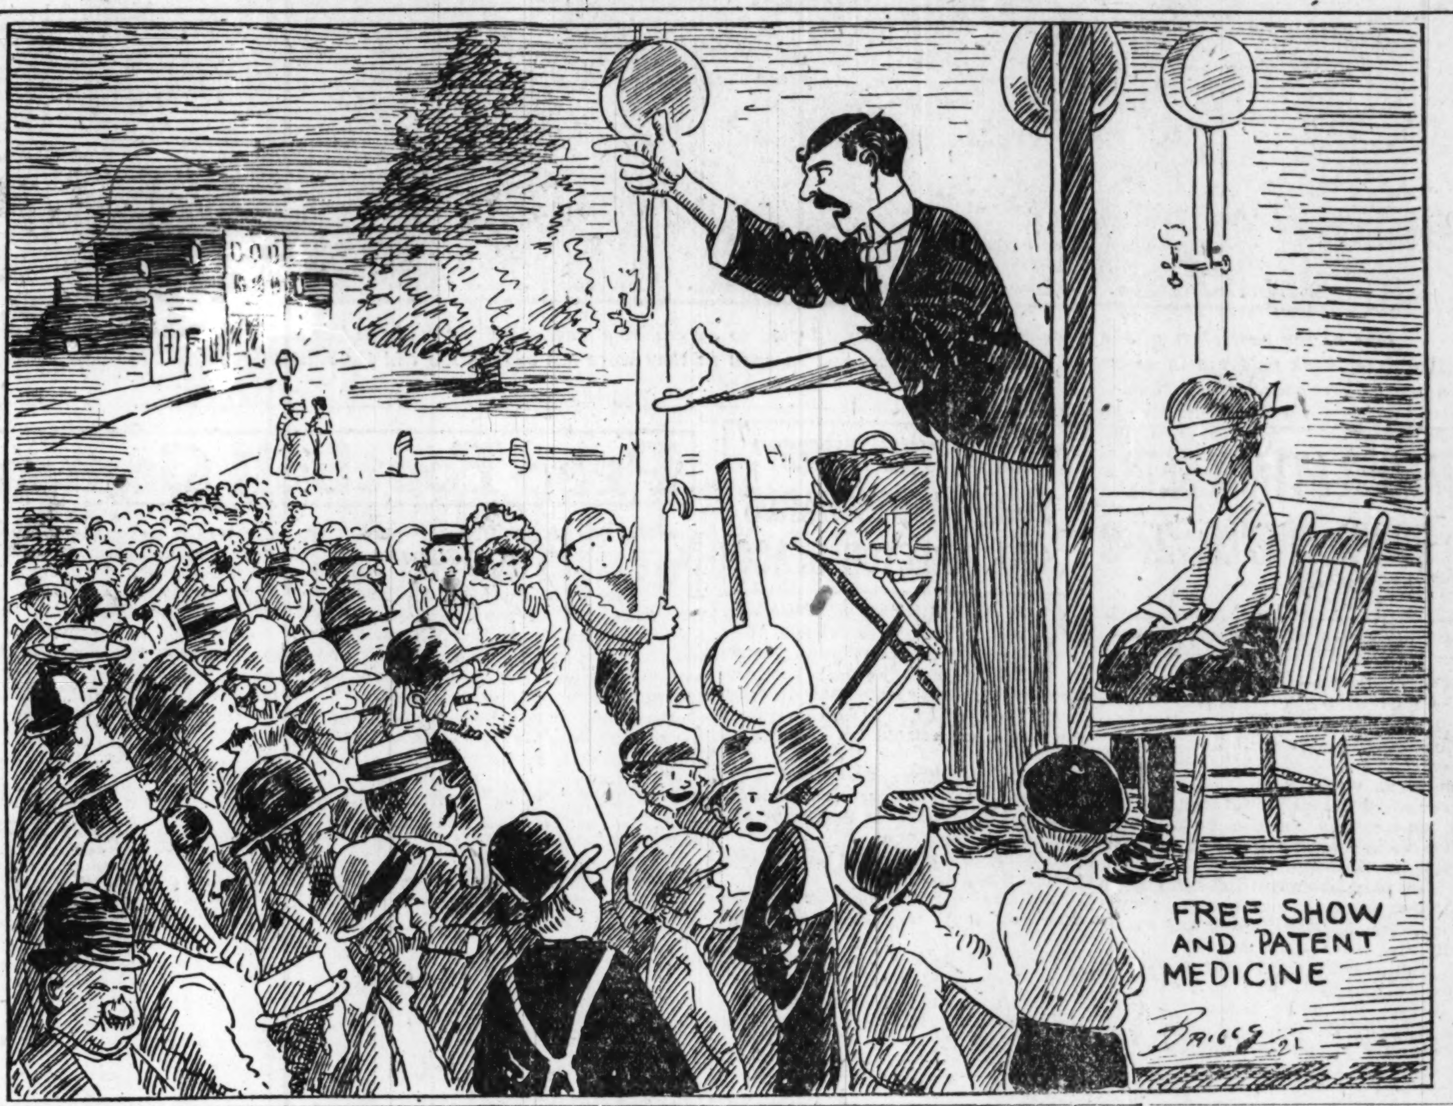
THE DAYS OF REAL SPORT



The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

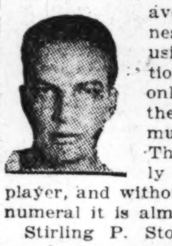
The Question.

What do you think of Minnesota's stratagem in numbering players so the public cannot distinguish the men?

Where Asked.

University of Chicago campus.

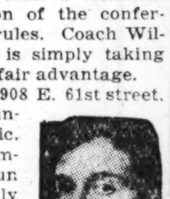
The Answers.



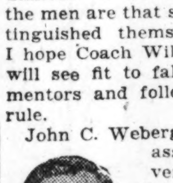
William W. Ford, 5541 Woodlawn avenue, student—Minnesota's stratagem in using freak combinations to fool "spotters" only served to confuse the fans and cause much adverse criticism. The spectators naturally like to know each player, and without the distinguishing numeral it is almost impossible.

Stirling P. Stockhouse, 5102 Kenwood avenue, student—Minnesota's stratagem in the puzzling arrangement of figures is contrary to sporting ethics. The fans who support the game and pay the coach's salary are entitled to that much consideration.

Lilian L. Eubank, 5460 Greenwood avenue, student—I think that such action is unsportsmanlike and amounts to nothing more than a technical evasion of the conference rules. Coach Williams is simply taking an unfair advantage.



Natalie Eisenberg, 908 E. 61st street, stenographer—It is unfair to the public. When a pass is completed or a clever run made, we are naturally anxious to know who the men are that so distinguished themselves. I hope Coach Williams will see fit to fall in line with other mentors and follow the spirit of the rule.



John C. Weberg, 327 E. 60th street, assistant trainer, University of Chicago—Minnesota's stratagem in using four numerals in a puzzling array of combinations, is a poor example of conference sportsmanship. "Scouts" from other schools can easily distinguish the players, and it only serves to confuse the spectators.

ST. JOSEPH OPEN GOLF MEET WON BY CRUIKSHANK

St. Joseph, Mo., Oct. 15.—Robert Cruikshank, pro., at the Essex Country club, New York, won the first annual St. Joseph open golf tournament today when he defeated Jock Hutchison, British open champion, and Jim Barnes, United States open champion, in a nine hole extra round after the three had finished in a tie for seventy-two holes at 298 strokes each.

Cruikshank was seven strokes behind the leader, Jim Barnes, Friday night at the end of the first thirty-six holes. He shot an ordinary 77 this morning, but in the afternoon his last eighteen holes were negotiated in 69 strokes, 6 under par.

Tom Stevens of Minneapolis finished fifth with 305, and Harry Robb and Frank Adams of Chicago tied for sixth with 306.

CUE TITLE GOES TO KIECKHEFER; DEFEATS LAYTON

AUGIE KIECKHEFER.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 15.—The national three cushion championship title passed from the hands of John Layton, Sedalia, Mo., tonight into those of August Kieckhefer, Chicago, who defeated the former champion, 50 to 38, in 46 innings. Kieckhefer ran 6 and Layton 5.

The only other match during the day was between Pierre Maupome, Mexico, and Alfredo De Oro, Cuba. The latter won from the Mexican, 50 to 44, in 48 innings.

Layton played in his usual cautious style and made some great shots, but the brilliancy of his opponent in making round the table shots was too much for the Missourian.

A 5 in the thirty-eighth inning gave Augie a lead which he maintained to the finish.

The final standing of the contestants after two weeks' play for the championship follows:

	W.	L.	Pct.		W.	L.	Pct.
Kieckhefer	7	2	.778	Weston	4	5	.444
Layton	6	3	.667	Heal	4	5	.444
De Oro	6	3	.667	Cannefax	3	6	.333
Maupome	5	4	.556	Denton	3	6	.333
McCourt	5	4	.556	Otis	2	7	.222

CHIQUI MARVEL OF FRENCH RING! WE SHALL SEE!!

New York, Oct. 15.—[Special.]—Chiqui is France's new fighting marvel, and, according to his manager, M. Huron Leon, who arrived today on the liner Leopoldina from Havre, the Gallic king of punch, as he is called there, will sail for this country within a month. He wants to meet Johnny Kilbane for the featherweight boxing title. Efforts to find out whether Chiqui had a first name were unsuccessful. Chiqui's chief asset, it would appear from his manager, is the absense of a chin. According to Leon, the chin was badly dented by a two and a half ton shell from a German Big Bertha, which had the featherweight groggy for several seconds. The blow also removed all his teeth.

As a consequence he has no targe for rival punchers to aim at and Manager Leon seems to think this will make him an impossible man to knock out.

GIBBONS-O'DOWD GO UP TO COURT

Wichita, Kas., Oct. 15.—Whether the Gibbons-O'Dowd boxing match, a fifteen round exhibition, scheduled to be held here Tuesday, will be held will be decided Monday by the Sedgwick county district court, when the matter will be presented to the court by James Conley, county attorney, and Attorney John Madden Jr., counsel for the Southwestern Athletic association. Attorney General Hopkins has held the bout would violate the state law.

LINE ONSLAUGHT OF NOTRE DAME CRUSHES PURDUE

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Lafayette, Ind., Oct. 15.—[Special.]—Using a slashing attack through the line and off the tackles, Notre Dame made partial amends for its defeat by Iowa a week ago by crushing Purdue today, 33 to 0.

Coach Rockne's eleven was master of the situation at all stages. The backs drove with so much power that they tore the Boilermaker line to shreds at times, while the off tackle hammering of Johnny Mohardt was one of the features. This sterling little player could have made more substantial gains had he cut back through the line instead of trying to circle the ends.

Leaf Through Second Half.

Notre Dame rolled up thirty points in the first two periods and in the second half was content to play on the defensive. Practically every time the South Benders got possession of the oval they punted on first down. In this department of the game Castner had a decided advantage and gained as much as twenty-five yards on the exchanges.

In the second period Coach Rockne employed a number of second string players, with the result the Notre Dame offense did not work as smoothly. In the final periods Purdue took a new lease on life and twice advanced the ball to within place kick distance, but both attempts to register by the field goal route failed.

Fumbles Aid Catholics.

Notre Dame received severe penalties for its back field being in motion before the ball was snapped. Purdue fumbled at critical times and three of these mistakes placed Notre Dame within scoring distance and the Hoosiers converted the opportunities into touchdowns. Despite the feeling which exists between the two institutions, the game was clean, but won by the best team. Lineup:

HEYDLER CLINGS TO 9 GAME PLAN

New York, Oct. 15.—President John Heydler of the National league differs with Judge K. M. Landis, commissioner of baseball, on the advisability of returning to a seven game world series. Judge Landis said at the end of the recent series, that he would recommend the change at the joint session of the major leagues next winter.

"As a member of the advisory council, I don't care to take issue with Commissioner Landis," Mr. Heydler said. "Yet I cannot help recalling clearly, the unsatisfactory nature of a seven game series and that it was chiefly almost entirely, in response to public sentiment in the matter, that we were constrained, nearly three years ago, to extend the series to nine. It was for the sake of the game itself that the action was taken, it having become evident that the all-around strength and class of a team sometimes failed to be brought out, and to tell its story in a seven game series."

Iowa City, Ia., Oct. 15.—[Special.]—Iowa downed Illinois on the gridiron today in a manner most convincing and decisive, and no one need try to argue with any of the cornfed boys of this state that the Hawkeye eleven of this year isn't the best in the west.

The score was 14 to 2, with Iowa always the class of the show, the Illini never being even close to a score until the fourth quarter, when a bad pass got away from Capt. Aubrey Devine on his own two yard line and rolled over the goal. He was downed back of the line for a safety which gave the Illini a harmless pair of points.

Locke a Battering Ram.

Last night Coach Howard Jones of the Hawkeyes said he would start Gordon Locke, his human battering ram, at full back regardless of the fact Locke hadn't recovered from the bumps given him by Notre Dame. Locke started and finished and did just about three-fourths of all the damage done to Bob Zuppke's team from Urbana.

Locke was such a tremendous star that people forgot all about Crangle, the all-western full back of last year, being on the same field. Crangle was there, struggling for the Illini, but never once made an impression.

Rips Line Into Shreds.

This Mr. Locke ripped the Illinois line into shreds and remnants and left men scattered about in helpless confusion as he charged to their goal with the ball. It was a bum plunge if he made only seven or eight yards. He hit the enemy so hard at times that individuals were on their backs, feet in the air. He literally doubled them up and sometimes Crangle was among those doubled. Possibly Locke wasn't in shape to do much today. One feels pity for an opponent that must meet him when he is well.

Only a few times in dozens of charges was Locke stopped. He seemed to hit right in the middle sometimes and other times a bit to one side or the other.

Slater Makes Holes.

"Duke" Slater, the powerful colored tackle, undoubtedly opened up a gate for Locke on numerous occasions, for the dusky lineman hurled himself against Zuppke's line when the play was on his side and then held that section of the wall or spilled it while Locke tore on through.

Even Capt. Aubrey Devine, who undoubtedly is the spectacular back field man of the conference, was a bit out of the spotlight because of the wonderful playing of his full back. But Aubrey proved himself a smart leader by continually calling upon his mate. Aubrey and Locke alternated in carrying the ball. The captain was generally good for 4 yards or so on the first play, then Locke would add anywhere from 6 to 16, and once he went right through the middle of the line for 40

Peden Gains by Passes.

Against this superior and powerful attack the Illini were quite helpless. The line couldn't hold. Only once did Zuppke's men show a spurt that made one think of the Illini of recent years. That was in the third quarter, just after Iowa had scored its second touchdown and had a commanding lead. Half Back Peden, by means of a double pass and a punt formation, did some spectacular running around the ends and mixed it with a forward pass or two until the ball was down on Iowa's 25 yard line, when the quarter ended.

Iowa braced and Illinois tried desperately to score by forward passes, but lost the ball on Iowa's 14 yard line. This spurt, however, saved the team from a shutout, for Iowa, after advancing about 15 yards, was penalized 15 for holding and this was followed by the safety when Capt. Devine dropped back for a punt.

Illinois Passes Fail.

On numerous occasions Illinois with its supposedly strong passing combination on the field failed to accomplish anything by the aerial route. Long shots were attempted. Aubrey Devine intercepted one and once Locke plucked one. Many others went amiss.

Right at the start Iowa showed its superiority and might have scored in a hurry except for a heavy penalty. Illinois kicked off over the Iowa goal line and from the 20 yard line, the Hawkeyes rushed the ball down the field to Illinois' 35 yard line, the plunges of Locke and A. Devine doing the business with the help of one neat pass, Devine to Belding. A penalty of fifteen yards stopped the onrush and after three plays, Capt. Devine tried a drop kick from the 45 yard line but the ball passed under the bar. The rest of the quarter was more or less of a kicking duel with A. Devine having a bit the better of Mohr.

The second quarter raged back and forth in midfield with punts and passes until Illinois finally got into Iowa's territory for a first down on the 45 yard line. Here Crangle tried a plunge and stopped as if he hit a wall and then Mohr attempted a long pass. Aubrey Devine intercepted it and ran it back to midfield. From there the Hawkeyes smashed their way to the goal line, the plunges of Locke being tremendous. He went over for the touchdown in two crushing drives after getting a first down on the 7 yard line.

In the third quarter Mohr kicked off low to Locke who returned to Iowa's 39 yard line. On the very first play Locke broke through the line and dashed and dodged forty yards to Illinois 25 yard line. Aubrey Devine made five and Locke added ten to Illinois' 10 yard line for a first down.

Iowa Goes Over Again.

Devine made four and then Locke failed to gain. Devine made four more and the ball was on the 2 yard line and it was fourth down. Locke was given the ball and he went over, leaving two or three opponents doubled up.

Illinois was well into Iowa's territory when the third period ended, and at the start of the fourth gained its two points on the safety as previously recorded. When the game ended Iowa had been held for downs on the Illinois 4 yard line.

YOST SEES OHIO SLAM GOPHERS IN 27-0 COMBAT

Columbus, O., Oct. 15.—[Special.]—Ohio State sprung a surprise today in the football world, defeating the powerful and much heavier Minnesota team, 27 to 0. Offensive tactics that have never been displayed by a Buckeye team were shown in the play today. Coach Yost of Michigan, who was watching the contest, described the Ohio State team as the best offensive machine he has ever seen.

The playing of Trott was what met with Yost's approval, the Wolverine mentor claiming that this Buckeye guard played football as he liked to see it played. Lineup:

SOCCER TEAMS OPEN NATIONAL CUP PLAY TODAY

First local matches in the National Cup Soccer tournament, which this year has an entry of 116 teams, are carded for this afternoon. Illinois and Wisconsin are in the same section, but today's games are between local clubs.

All three games today should be close, although Harvey is conceded a shade over the Alverno team, and while the Thistles are clever, the Norwegian-American players are a hustling combination which has lots of stamina. The games which start at 3 o'clock are:

Harvey and Alvernos at Harvey.

Thistles and Norwegian-Americans at 19th street and 47th avenue.

Sparta Union and Gary at Gary field.

CHICAGO SOCCER LEAGUE.

Rangers and Olympias at 35th street and Wentworth avenue at 3 o'clock.

Swedish-Americans and Pullman at Riverview park at 3 o'clock.

The Bricklayers, who have a bye in the Chicago league, will play the St. Georges of the Chicago and District league at 1:30 at Bricklayers' field. The Young Men's Hebrew association will play Roseland at 110th street and Indiana avenue.

Schaefer and McAndless Start Cue Play Tomorrow

Much interest will center in the appearance of Young Jake Schaefer this week at Mussey's Madison street room where he will meet Dave McAndless in a handicap match, playing 4,800 points to 3,000 points at 18.2 by the local player. Jake recently made a run of 341 points in Philadelphia and has been playing the same fast billiards as last season, when he averaged a world's record of 57 for a week's play against Ed Horemans.

Schaefer and McAndless will start play tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, the night session starting at 8 o'clock.

CRANE, 34; LOCKPORT, 6.

Lockport, Ill., Oct. 15.—[Special.]—The Crane Tech High school heavyweight football team of Chicago today defeated Lockport High, 34 to 6. Rigali featured for Crane with three touchdowns.

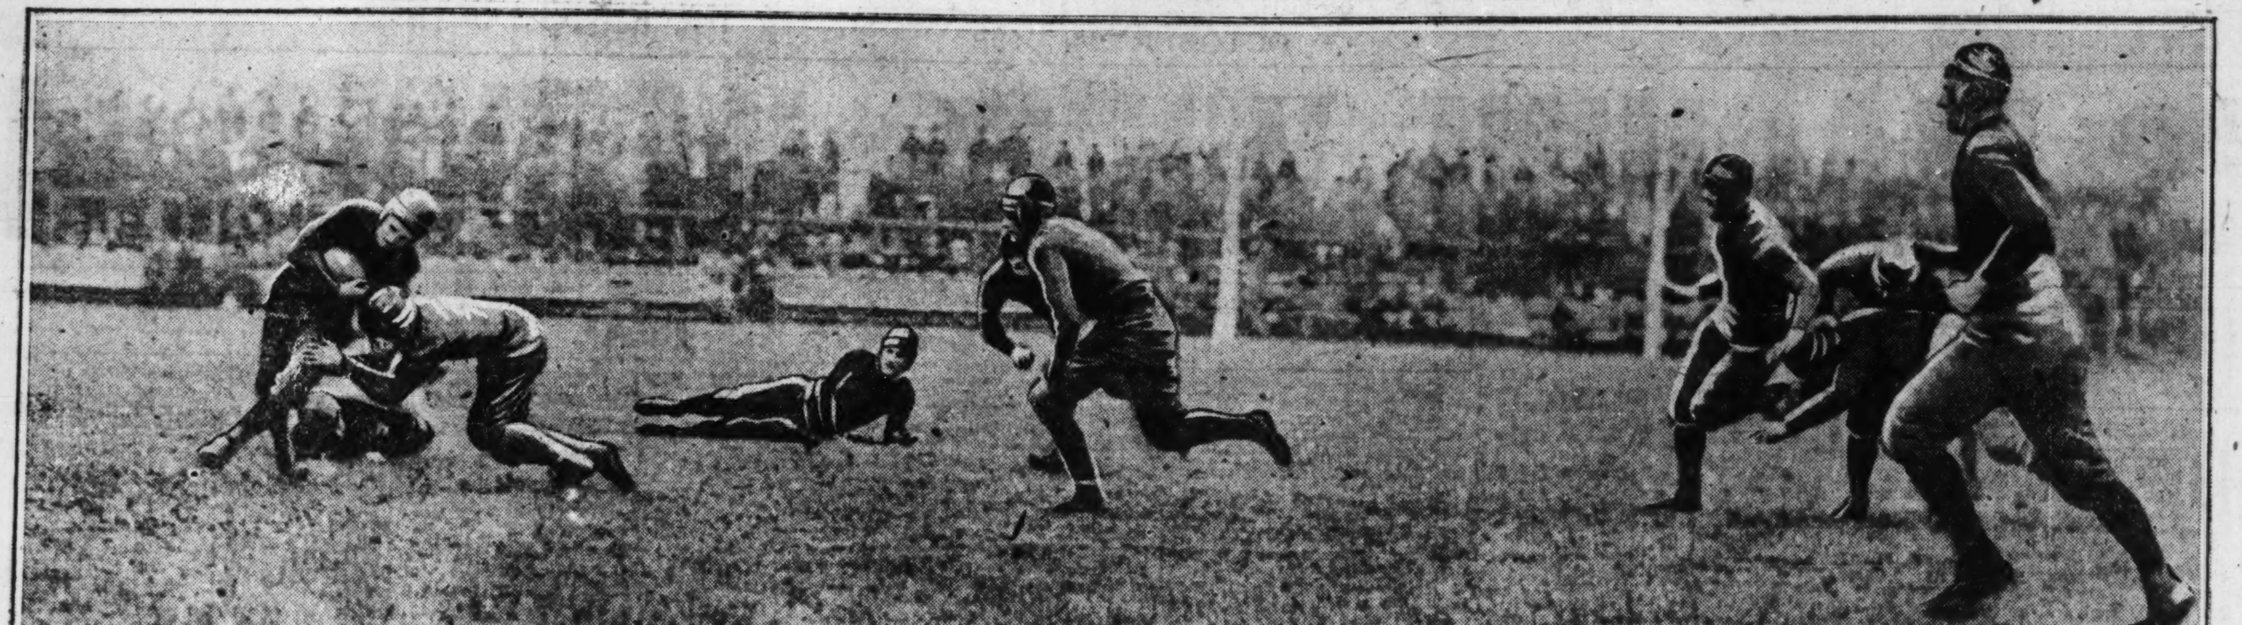
ST. MEL, 0; ST. CYRIL, 0.

St. Mel and St. Cyril lightweight elevens played a scoreless tie in a Catholic league game at St. Cyril field yesterday. McInerney and Zimmerman featured for St. Mel, while Daley was St. Cyril's star.

BELLE PLAINES PLAY MURLEYS.

The Belle Plaines, champions of the Inter-State league and winners of the Cullerton trophy, will play their final game of the season today against the Murleys, at Murley park, Kedzie and Elston avenues, at 3 p. m.

BADGERS TRY FOR A SCORE WITH A FORWARD PASS



One of the best plays of the Badgers was a lob forward pass to an end or a leading half back in the interference. Swinging wide from a punt formation, Elliott, Gibson, or Sundt would start for the side lines. The other back field ran in advance, faking interference, and as soon as they were out beyond the end the runner lobbed a little pass to the Badger advance agent. Williams is seen in the open just after he had pulled down a short toss from Gibson.

BADGER ATTACK SETS DOWN PURPLE, 27-0

of this nature is difficult when linemen are able to break through anyway.

Neither Sundt, Paterson nor McElwain was brilliant in his punting, taken on the average. Several Purple kicks were so short as to be of marked advantage to the Badgers, but it usually was because Badger linemen were charging through and hurrying the kickers.

For Northwestern, Palmer played the best defensive game he has shown this year. Putman, Turner and Paterson also dove hard into their men. The improvement in this respect since the Chicago game was marked.

Before the game began, an army tank circled the field, preceding thirty floats and decorated automobiles of fraternities and sororities. The first float was an immense cake on which were eleven big Purple candles, signifying the eleventh "homecoming" anniversary.

Between halves, Wisconsin and Northwestern exchanged cheer leaders for complimentary rahs, and the Wisconsin mascot, a live badger called "Gov. Blaine," was paraded before the Northwestern stands.

Gould Makes First Score.

Wisconsin kicked off to start the game and it soon was seen Northwestern could not make any headway against the Badger defense. After several exchanges, Gibson received McElwain's punt and returned 30 yards through the entire Purple team to the Purple 33 yard line. Gains by Elliott and Williams gave first down on the Purple 10 yard line. With four yards to go on the fourth down, Sundt tossed to Gould behind the line for the first touchdown. Tebell missed goal. Wisconsin, 6; Northwestern, 0.

Wisconsin did not score again until well into the second quarter, although a fumble by Sundt on the 3 yard line near the end of the first quarter delayed the inevitable. The way was paved by Elliott's twisting run of 25 yards, which shook off several tacklers after a pass from Gibson. With the ball on the Purple 6 yard line, Elliott went over on the third down, Sundt kicked goal. Wisconsin, 13; Northwestern, 0.

Touchdown Follows Fumble.

The third touchdown in the third quarter followed a fumbled punt by Blumenthal, which Hohefeld recovered on Northwestern's 16 yard line. Two line smashes yielded a first down. On the third down the pass hardly reached Elliott's hands, but dribbled the remaining yard over the line, and Elliott recovered it for a touchdown. Sundt kicked goal. Wisconsin, 20; Northwestern, 0.

The final touchdown followed Elliott's long run from a pass in which Williams interfered, previously described. With the ball on the Purple 16 yard line, several short gains gave a first down on the Purple 3 yard line. On the third down Elliott went over. Sundt kicked goal. Wisconsin, 27, Northwestern, 0.

"TRADE YOU LINES?" SURE, SAYS RICHARDS TO DIRECTOR STAGG

As Coach Richards of Wisconsin was talking with friends after the Northwestern game yesterday while awaiting for the Badgers to emerge from their dressing room, Director Stagg of Chicago joined the circle and offered his congratulations.

Richards in return assured Stagg the Badgers were pulling for Chicago against Princeton next Saturday and wished him good luck.

"I'd like to borrow your line for that game," Stagg answered.

"I'll trade our line for your line any time you say," was Richards' comeback.

"Well, the deal is closed right now, then," laughed Stagg.

Won't Princeton be surprised to see the Badger linemen playing before the Maroon backs?

LINDBLOM HANDS JOLT TO ENGLEWOOD, 14-7

Englewood High school's football team suffered its second defeat in the Chicago High school league yesterday when the sturdy Lindblom eleven scored a 14 to 7 victory over Coach Barradell's team at White City park.

Englewood counted its touchdown in the second quarter, Vickers going over after a long forward pass, Folz to Conklin, had placed the ball on Lindblom's one yard line. In the third quarter Lindblom started a steady march down the field, Francis scoring near the end of the period. Straight football scored again in the fourth period, Graves going through center from the three yard mark.

YALE AERIAL ATTACK BEATS WILLIAMS, 23-0

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 15.—Yale defeated Williams today, 23 to 0, in a game featured by a brilliant aerial attack on both sides. Aldrich, Becket, Jordan, Speiden, O'Hearn, Neidlinger, and Wight furnished the spectacular work for Yale, while Mallon, Pease, and Monjoe starred for the visitors.

Yale scored in the first period after Hidden recovered a Williams' fumble. Jordan hit the Williams line for several gains, and Becket went over for the touchdown.

Aldrich scored in the second period after several end runs. Williams advanced the ball on several forward passes, reaching the Yale 10 yard line and losing the ball on downs.

Aldrich booted a field goal from the 28 yard line in the third period. In the fourth period Speiden made a touchdown after taking a forward pass from O'Hearn. Lineup:

GEORGIA'S FIGHT HOLDS HARVARD TO 10-7 SCORE

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 15.—Harvard again beat back a football invader from another section today, winning from the University of Georgia by 10 to 7. The bulldogs of the south, however, accomplished against the Crimson what Yale, bulldogs of the north, have not been able to do in years—they scored a touchdown. The Harvard goal was crossed by a pretty forward pass in the last period, with Dick Hartley raising the rebel yell among southern supporters with his catch and run of 13 yards.

EDDIE KANE [Photo: Und. & Und.]

The situations that developed scores, both for Harvard and Georgia, grew out of errors. The Georgia line caved a few minutes after play started, allowing the Harvard forward line to break through and block Randall's punt. Fitts recovered for Harvard and ran 30 yards for a touchdown. Buell kicked goal.

Sub Boots a Field Goal.

Again in the second period it was a Georgia fumble, recovered by Capt. Kane for Harvard, that led up to the Crimson field goal kicked by Pfaffman, a substitute.

The Georgian touchdown was made possible by Harvard's failure to recover a Georgian punt from the southerners' 40 yard line, partly blocked by a Crimson player. Capt. Reynolds recovered for Georgia on Harvard's 20 yard line, and a moment later Hartley took a forward pass and crossed the goal.

The bulldog play of the Georgians checked the Crimson's straight rushing. After they had been put to disadvantage by Fitts' touchdown and the loss of Quarterback Randall through injury at the start, the Georgians stiffened and fought back. Harvard rushed through them for 30 yards and was a foot from the goal on fourth down. The southerners braced and Harvard was hurled back.

Harvard Wall Is Strong.

Georgia was able to make little rushing progress against Harvard, being held once for downs in the third period, and at other times being forced to kick.

The Crimson were off form in handling the ball. They lost forward passes to Georgia three times, lost the ball on fumbles three times and had a punt blocked. Lineup:

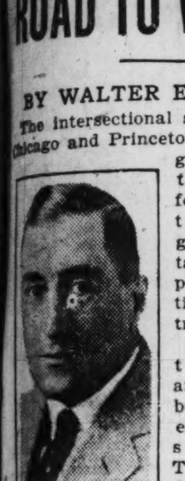
TIGERS MAY PICK MAROON LINE AS ROAD TO VICTORY

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

The intersectional struggle between Chicago and Princeton on the latter's gridiron will feature Saturday's football games, although other games of importance will be played in all sections of the country.



WALTER H. ECKERSALL.

Indications are that Princeton and Chicago will be representative elevens of their sections. The Tigers are being developed slowly but safely by Coach Roper, while the Maroons have shown to good advantage in their two games with Northwestern and Purdue. Chicago did not play yesterday, while Princeton engaged in a gruelling battle with the Navy. The physical condition of the two teams will depend largely upon how the Tigers came out of the game with the Midshipmen, and whether any of the Maroons will be injured in scrimmage during the week.

Tigers Stronger than Last Year.

Eastern football authorities claim Princeton will be stronger than last year, when it defeated Yale and held Harvard to a tie. These critics assert Coach Roper will not uncover his strength until pressed, but when the time arrives to spring new formations Princeton will not be caught napping.

Indications are that Princeton will play a line smashing game, with occasional drives off the tackles. This attack may be varied occasionally by end runs and forward passes. One thing is certain, and that is Princeton will play a safe game and no chances will be taken.

Chicago will enter the struggle prepared to play an open game, with end running and forward passing the principal weapons. Coach Stagg undoubtedly realizes it will be useless to try to make consistent headway through the Tiger line, which should be one of the strongest in the east this year.

Stagg Works with Forwards.

The Midway mentor realizes his line must stand the brunt of Princeton's concentrated line attack. For this reason he has given the forwards his personal attention each day since the opening of the practice season. Every method of blocking and charging has been taught, with the result Chicago will go into battle with one of the best drilled forward walls of Chicago teams in recent years.

Punting will be an important factor. Both teams will resort to kicking whenever in doubt of making the required yardage for a first down. Don Lourie, the Tigers' All-America quarter back, will boot the oval for his team, while Cole and Romney will perform in this capacity for Chicago. The trio can average forty yards or more, but the actual distance of their attempts will be determined by the returns.

Break May Win Game.

Both teams have been taught to follow the ball. The "break" may decide the issue, and the team which takes advantage of opportunities may win. Princeton will rule favorite because of its veteran team. Chicago will be hopeful, but Coach Stagg and his men believe they have a chance if they play aggressive football from start to finish.

While this battle is waging in the east, a number of contests in the middle west will command attention. Michigan and Ohio State are scheduled to meet at Ann Arbor in one of the most important games of the day. It will be the first conference game for the Wolverines, and with elemination of the loser from championship consideration, a great contest should result.

Ohio State defeated Michigan in 1919 and 1920, but it is doubtful if the Buckeyes can repeat. Their defeat by Oberlin, 7 to 6, shows the team is not one of the Buckeyes' former great strength. On the other hand Michigan will be much stronger than last year, when it succumbed, 14 to 7. The new stadium will be dedicated at Ann Arbor, and Maize and Blue enthusiasts who attend the ceremony may have cause for rejoicing.

Other Battles on Grid.

Another great battle should result when Wisconsin and Illinois clash at Urbana. The Badgers played Northwestern yesterday, while the Orange and Blue met Iowa in an extremely hard game.

Indiana and Minnesota will meet in another game, which will have a serious bearing on the conference championship. The game will be played in Minneapolis, and the Gophers will attempt to make amends for their defeat by the Hoosiers last year. Minnesota met Ohio State yesterday, while the Hoosiers spent the day in practice.

Notre Dame and Nebraska will engage in their annual struggle on the former's gridiron. The Hoosiers' defeat by Iowa recently, combined with the Cornhuskers' strong showing in early games, should make this contest one of the best played between teams of the two institutions in recent years.

Army Plays at Yale.

In the east, the Army will leave West Point to play Yale at New Haven, while Hugo Bezdek will lead his Penn State warriors to Cambridge to meet Harvard. Syracuse will meet Pittsburgh in the Smoky City, and Columbia will clash with Dartmouth at Hanover in other games of interest.

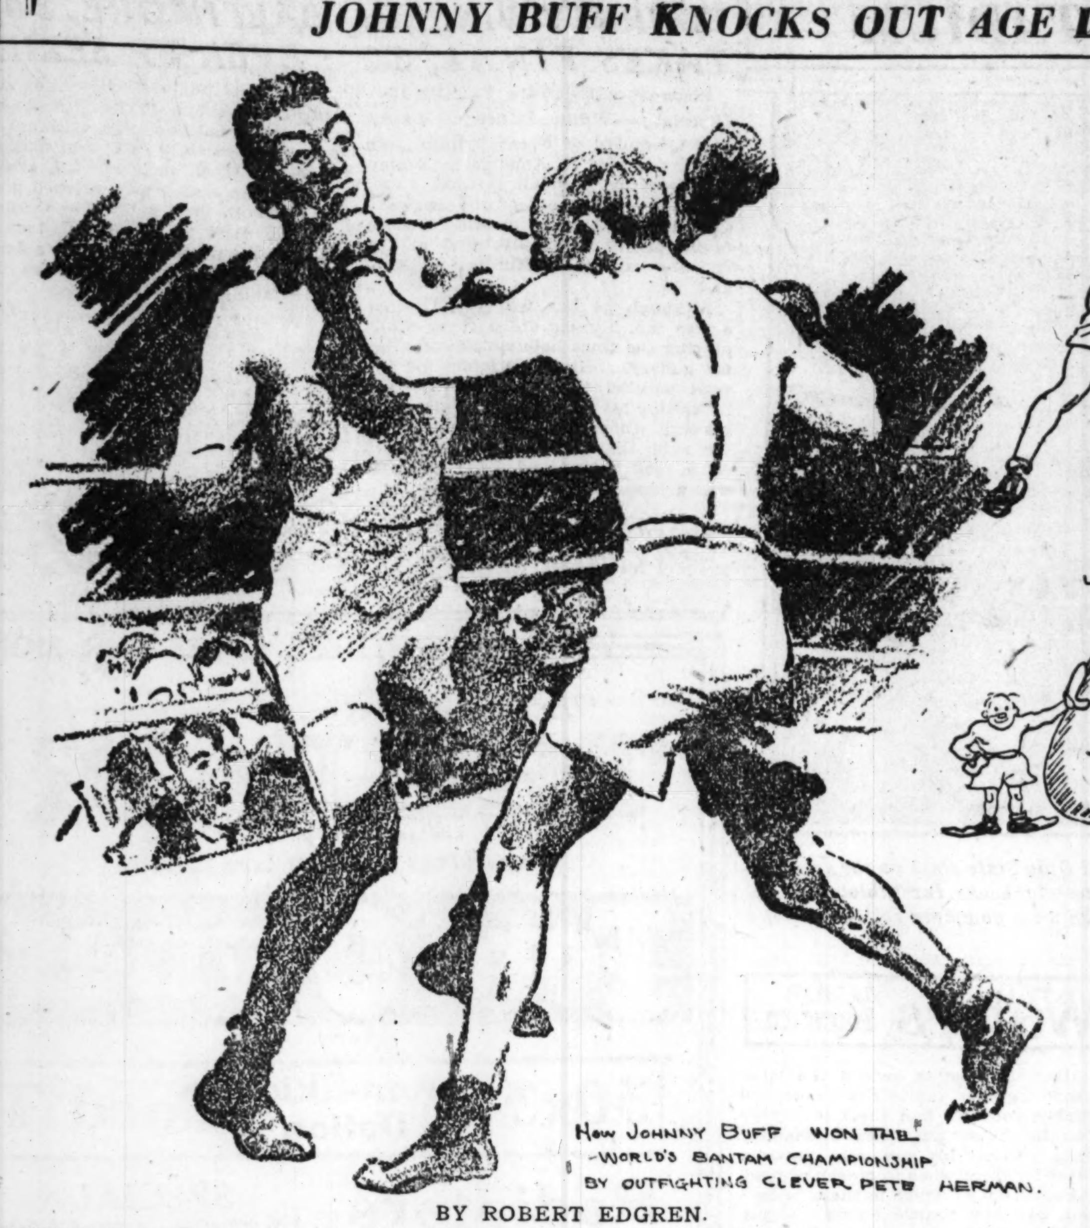
Culver Cadets Run Over Crane College Team, 51-0

Culver, Ind., Oct. 15.—[Special.]—Culver Military academy overwhelmed Crane Junior college today, 51 to 0. The cadets' play lacked aggressiveness in the first half, but they charged savagely in the closing periods. The runs of Fultz, Hand and Roberts and the tackling and interference of Combs and Bush featured Culver's play. For Crane, Buck, Brush and Buedel made some good runs.

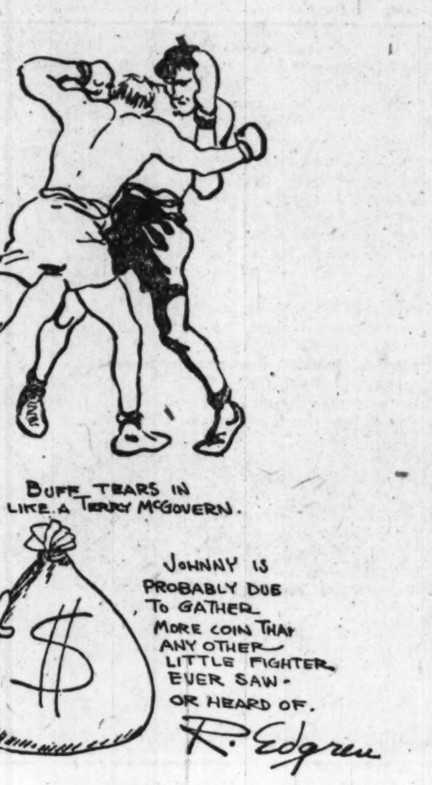
Thorn-Tornadoes Tackle Gary Elks This Afternoon

The Thorn-Tornadoes grid team will clash with the Gary Elks today at Gary, Ind. The Thorns have added a number of new players for the game and will start their strongest lineup. A special train over the South Shore Interurban line will leave the Kensington station at 12:32 p. m.

JOHNNY BUFF KNOCKS OUT AGE LIMIT



HOW JOHNNY BUFF WON THE WORLD'S BANTAM CHAMPIONSHIP BY OUTFIGHTING CLEVER PETE HERMAN.



BUFF TEARS IN LIKE A TERRY McGOVERN.
JOHNNY IS PROBABLY DUE TO GATHER MORE COIN THAN ANY OTHER LITTLE FIGHTER EVER SAW - OR HEARD OF.
R. Edgren

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

JOHNNY BUFF, the little fighting streak from New Jersey, has done something that hasn't been accomplished by any other small man in the ring since Terry McGovern's time. He has captured and he holds two championships. Only one of these is a world's championship, the other being a championship of America.

As flyweight champion of America, Buff fought himself out of a job in his class. When there was no more good matches in sight, he went after the champion of the class above, Pete Herman of the bantams, and whipped him in fifteen rounds. The decision was "unsatisfactory" to Herman's backers. But that doesn't alter the fact that the New York boxing commission judges decided that Buff beat Herman, and the title goes with the decision of the officials.

Upsets the Dope.

Twice-Champion Johnny Buff is an oddity among champions. His case will give a lot of encouragement in these times when it is supposed that youth is the one great element in success, and when boxing commissions are gravely determining "age limits" after which no boxer will be allowed to compete on the theory that his usefulness is over and it's time to turn him out to pasture like a broken down horse. Buff is 32 years old.

Buff is married, has one child, and his fad is living at home and raking the garden at his place in New Jersey. His hair is thin on top. He looks like a middleaged man fighting a bunch of boys. But he is bristling with aggressiveness, chuck full of confidence, iron in endurance, fast as they make 'em, versatile and quick thinking, and has a wallop like a middleweight.

Gains Fame in a Year.

Buff started at an age when boxers are usually all through and looking for a job. He has become famous only within a year.

Moral: You can't take fame away from a fellow who has a convincing clout in either hand and who wins decisively every time out.

Buff has knocked out a number of little fellows. He won the flyweight championship of America when he whipped Frankie Mason last April. Among the many local boys he put down for the ten seconds count in and near New York was Abe Attel Goldstein, who looked good until he met Buff. Johnny finished Abe in three rounds.

Is Real Champion.

His fight with Herman proved that he is a real champion. Johnny went after Herman as if Pete was just another victim. Herman didn't take the little fellow seriously for a couple of rounds, and by that time he was receiving the pasting of his life. When Herman made spurts later in the fight, hoping to win a losing battle by slipping over a knockout, he found Buff slugging with him and getting the better of it. Once he knocked Buff down, but Johnny bounced up without waiting to hear the referee count.

Of the former champions who held two titles, George Dixon was one. Little Chocolate held the bantam championship and let it go when he became featherweight titleholder. Terry McGovern was bantam champion, and won the featherweight crown from Dixon. Abe Attel had two or three tries at the lightweight title, but couldn't get it. Kid Williams, bantam champion, was beaten by Kilbane.

Others Try, but Fail.

Johnny Kilbane tried to get the lightweight title from Leonard, and was knocked out. Of the lightweights Frank Erne went after the welter championship, and was knocked out by Rube Ferns. Joe Gans, lightweight champion, tried to take the welter title from Joe Walcott, and the best he could get was a draw. Nelson, Wolgast, Ritchie, and Welch stayed in their own class, but Benny Leonard has tried unsuccessfuly to take the welter championship from Jack Britton. Stanley Ketchel tried to add the heavyweight crown to the middleweight in his collection, and lost to Johnson. The only middleweight who ever won the heavyweight title was Bob Fitzsimmons, who knocked out Jack Dempsey, the original, for the middleweight title, and was still a middleweight when he knocked out Corbett at Carson in 1897.

Holding two titles in the ring is uncommon enough to bring a boxer quite a little added reputation, and Johnny Buff, with his willingness to fight, will furnish a contrast to other champions who stall, call off matches, avoid dangerous rivals, want the earth for contests, and then insist upon a no decision bout.

Princeton Coach Figures Stagg Will Try to Defeat the Tigers With Shift Plays

BY W. W. (BILL) ROPER.

[Head Princeton Coach.]

In certain sections, Harvard, Princeton, and Yale have been charged with a sort of athletic exclusiveness because they did not welcome to their schedule every team which geographically or because of its football quality might possibly have a claim to a meeting. Perhaps in the past a certain amount of discretion has occasionally excluded a formidable rival, but these conditions, if they did exist, have certainly changed.

BILL ROPER.

Personally, I am delighted to see the football schedules of many of our eastern elevens contain the names of strong teams from other sections.

Maroons vs. Tigers.

The great intersectional game between the University of Chicago and Princeton at the Palmer stadium next Saturday is creating probably more interest than any other game of its kind this fall. Every one in the east is interested in the play of the Chicago team. I believe Chicago has one of the best teams in its history and it is certainly as far advanced as any one of the conference elevens.

I believe the Princeton game has really stimulated interest in football at Chicago, as well as at Princeton. There is no team in the west that stands higher in public estimation than Chicago. The reason for this feeling about Chicago is due in a large extent to the sentiment toward its coach. I was talking to a Princeton alumnus the other day about this game.

I saw Chicago play way back in 1905, when Eckersall and Bezdek were burning up the gridiron with their sensational play. I saw the great game between Chicago and Michigan, which Chicago won by the narrow margin of a safety. At that time I formed a pretty definite idea in my own mind about the strength of Stagg's attack.

Forward Passes a Feature.

If there is one particularly strong feature about the Chicago team it is the forward passing attack.

In the west they have recognized that the forward pass is not a shoestring play, heavily loaded with danger for the user. They believe that, even moderately well executed, it is among the safest plays available. Any one who seriously considers its possibilities must admit this is a fact.

Any analysis of the play of the Chicago team will show that twice as many of its passes are completed than are intercepted. In fact, I would say the percentage is even much greater.

The real secret in the success of Chicago's forward passing consists in the way the ball is thrown and the manner in which it is received. The ball is thrown hard and fast. Both the passer and receiver are in motion when making the pass, and the receiver is coached to jump in the air if necessary and catch the ball. No matter what the position on the field, the Chicago team is dangerous because of the effective manner in which they use the pass.

Maroons' Defense Clever.

The Chicago defense against forward passing is well planned and cleverly executed. I would say the Chicago backs and ends have the edge on the rest of the line, though from this I do not mean to infer that the line is by any means weak, for it is not. They have been alternating with two sets of backs.

I do not think the shift as a base offense is as strong as some other kind of attack. In the first place, the shift limits strategy on the field. The attack is dependent on the degree to which it can be adjusted to the weakness and peculiarities of the defense. In short a good quarter back must persuade the other fellow to help him play the game. There are twenty-two men on the field and too many attacks have been built on the theory that there are only eleven.

If these is any weakness in the Chicago attack it would seem to be in its continuous use of the shift. The team is a powerful one and even at that may get away with it. Chicago also uses an open formation with considerable success. The entire line is strung out across the field. The back in the kicker's position plays about fifteen yards behind the line. From this formation it is possible to run, kick, or pass.

CARDINALS TAKE ON ROCK ISLAND AT NORMAL PARK

Led by Paddy Driscoll, who is playing with the same brilliancy as when a member of the Northwestern university of Great Lakes elevens, the Chicago Cardinals will clash with the Rock Island team today at Normal park, 61st street and South Racine avenue.

The invading team is one of the strongest in the American Professional Football association. Last Monday, Rock Island played the Staleys to a virtual standstill, the Decatur eleven finally winning, 14 to 10. The team was not in the best of shape and missed signals spoiled a number of chances to score.

NAVY ELEVEN BEATS PRINCETON BY 13 TO 0

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 15.—The Annapolis midshipmen avenged last year's defeat by Princeton by taking the measure of the Tigers in a fiercely fought game on Farragut field today, 13 to 0. The middies scored a touchdown and goal in the second period, the touchdown being the result of a blocked kick.

In the fourth period King's right toe counted for the other six points. He kicked two placements from the 25 yard line, after the Princeton players had braced and checked the heavy Navy onslaught.

Navy Leads Battle.

Navy forced the fighting in the first period and kept the ball almost entirely in Princeton's territory. There were three exchanges of punts during the period.

Two minutes before the end of the period Navy, after recovering a Princeton fumble inside of Princeton 20 yard line, advanced the ball by line bucks to the 5 yard line.

When play was resumed in the second period Princeton rose valiantly in the shadow of the goal post and recovered the ball on downs. On the first lineup, however, Vanderbig dropped behind the goal line to punt. Carney, Navy's left guard, broke through, blocked the kick, and fell on the ball for a touchdown. King kicked goal. When time was called, Navy had the ball in midfield.

Navy's Plunges Win.

The third period opened with King kicking off for the Navy. Princeton, failing to gain, punted. There followed several exchanges of punts, and while Navy's offense was stronger than Princeton's, especially in off-tackle plays, the Middies could not make a steady advance. Neither team seriously threatened the other's goal during the period. Princeton made several substitutions which strengthened its defense.

Navy completely outplayed Princeton in the final period, four times rushing the ball inside of the Tigers' 20 yard line. However, at these stages, Princeton braced, and King, Navy's right tackle, succeeded in two of his three attempts at goals from placement. Princeton at no time had a chance to score. Lineup:

ARMY DEFEATS WABASH, 21 TO 0, IN 4TH QUARTER

West Point, N. Y., Oct. 15.—[Special.]—For the first half of today's game, Army and Wabash fought an even battle. The Wabash defense, which was strong for the first half, wavered before Army's drive at the opening of the second half and cracked. A penalty put the ball on Wabash's 40 yard line when the big push began. Smythe tore off thirty-five yards to Wabash's 1 yard line, and Army scored a moment later. An intercepted pass, followed by a thirty yard run, gave the cadets their second score, and when Mulligan for the second time during the game blocked a punt, it was Army's ball on the Hoosier's 10 yard line. A forward pass, Wilhide to Wood, took it over. All three goals were kicked.

Milstead was a bulwark in Wabash's line. Lineup:

Delafield, Wis., Oct. 15.—St. Johns Military academy today proved too powerful for the Wisconsin School of Mines eleven, winning by 28 to 0. Wolverton and Goggin made the touchdowns, and the cadet team made fine gains both on forward passes and bucks. Wolverton blocked a punt behind the goal for one score.

PENN PASS NEAR CLOSE OF CLASH TIES SCORE, 7-7

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 15.—A desperate spurt in the final minutes of play saved the University of Pennsylvania from defeat at the hands of Swarthmore today, the game ending in a tie, 7 to 7.

Swarthmore, receiving the initial kickoff, carried the ball down the field steadily by end runs and effective forward passes and Asplundh smashed through the Red and Blue line for the Garnets' touchdown. Yarnell kicked goal.

Twice in the succeeding periods Swarthmore held Pennsylvania for downs when it seemed a few healthy line plunges would mean a score. As the final period drew to a close Capt. Wray shot a long forward pass to Sullivan, Penn. right end, who trotted across Swarthmore's line and Miller kicked goal.

EVANS BAGS BAG IN GOLF FROLIC AT FLOSSMOOR

BY JOE DAVIS.

Scores of 76 and 73, added to his lugubrious round of 83 made on Friday, gave Chick Evans low gross score of 232 in the first Autumn Frolic of the Flossmoor club, which finished yesterday when the shades of night were falling fast.

CHICK EVANS. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

There was a leather traveling bag prize for low net for thirty-six holes, and Chick, who was on the plus 2 mark, won this with a total of 153. He elected to take this award, and the prize for low gross for fifty-four holes reverted to J. Augustine Mudd of Beverly, who had rounds of 83, 84, and 82 for a total of 249.

Plays Perfect Round.

Chick's card of 73 in the afternoon was made up of a perfect long game, and had he been able to negotiate the fast greens he might have cut under 70.

The rest of the field could not hold the pace of the gross leaders, E. T. Franklin of La Grange being next with 262, while A. Shiverick of Westmoreland, F. H. Warren, and Dr. A. F. Henning each had 263.

There were five prizes for low net for fifty-four holes, A. Shiverick topping the field with 76, 77, and 80 for a total of 233. His handicap was 10. C. R. Nicolls was second with 237, J. P. Westcott third with 242, C. M. Smalley fourth with 243, while Harry Moir, Leonard Hicks, and W. B. Hart tied for fifth prize.

Low Net to Daniels.

Ray E. Daniels, who had a net of 237, won the low net prize for thirty-six holes with rounds of 77 and 77 for a total of 154. His handicap was 11.

The Frolic was a big success, except that a few foursomes had to finish in the dark, and President C. O. Goss announced it would be held earlier next year.

Winners in the sweepstakes were C. Evans, R. E. Daniels, and A. Shiverick, while C. Nicolls and Melvin A. Traylor tied for last place. The winner of the foursome event will be announced today.

BEVERLY.

Informal golf was interspersed with the voting of the members at the annual election. The yearly meeting last night was followed by a beefsteak dinner, for which everybody, including Martin Walsh and Miss Irene Thompson, qualified. The ticket elected was as follow:

President, Victor H. Munnecke; vice president, J. T. Brown; secretary-treasurer, Schuyler C. Schollenberger; directors, three years, J. T. Brown, H. B. Barnard, W. L. Beckley, Harry Cory, W. Gibbons Uffendell, Charles R. Walgreen.

MIDLOTHIAN.

Midlothian members turned out en masse yesterday, a ball sweepstakes event drawing the younger generation, while the annual tournament of the Royal and Ancient Golfers of the club was the magnet for those having reached or passed the half century milestone.

In the sweepstakes D. R. McKay 90—18—72; R. D. Weary, 92—20—72, and L. H. Crawford, 92—20—72, tied for first prize. Other winners were W. Buss, 93—18—75; D. B. Colbert, 88—13—75, and George Hackl Jr., 82—6—76.

The royal and ancient competition had a record field. The patriarch of the day was Lloyd Washington, 74 years of age, who won in the seniors' class, with 108—38—70. In the junior division, open to those 60 to 65, Charles Antoine won with 99—28—71.

SOUTH SHORE.

Winners in the ball sweepstakes event follow: H. J. Wanner, 92—27—65; W. G. Clark, 88—22—66; E. W. Sedgwick, 101—31—70; J. P. Dunn, 85—14—71; A. R. Camp, 83—12—71. Balloting on the new ticket for 1922 proceeded throughout the afternoon. The new officers were elected without opposition, as follows:

President, F. B. Stone; vice president, Lieut. Col. E. M. Hadley; secretary, W. Homer Hart, treasurer, R. J. Graf.

Governors, three year terms—John G. Campbell, Wilbur F. McWhinney, James D. Pauley, E. W. Parsons, E. F. Weary, W. M. Wilson. Two years—Wilson W. Lampert.

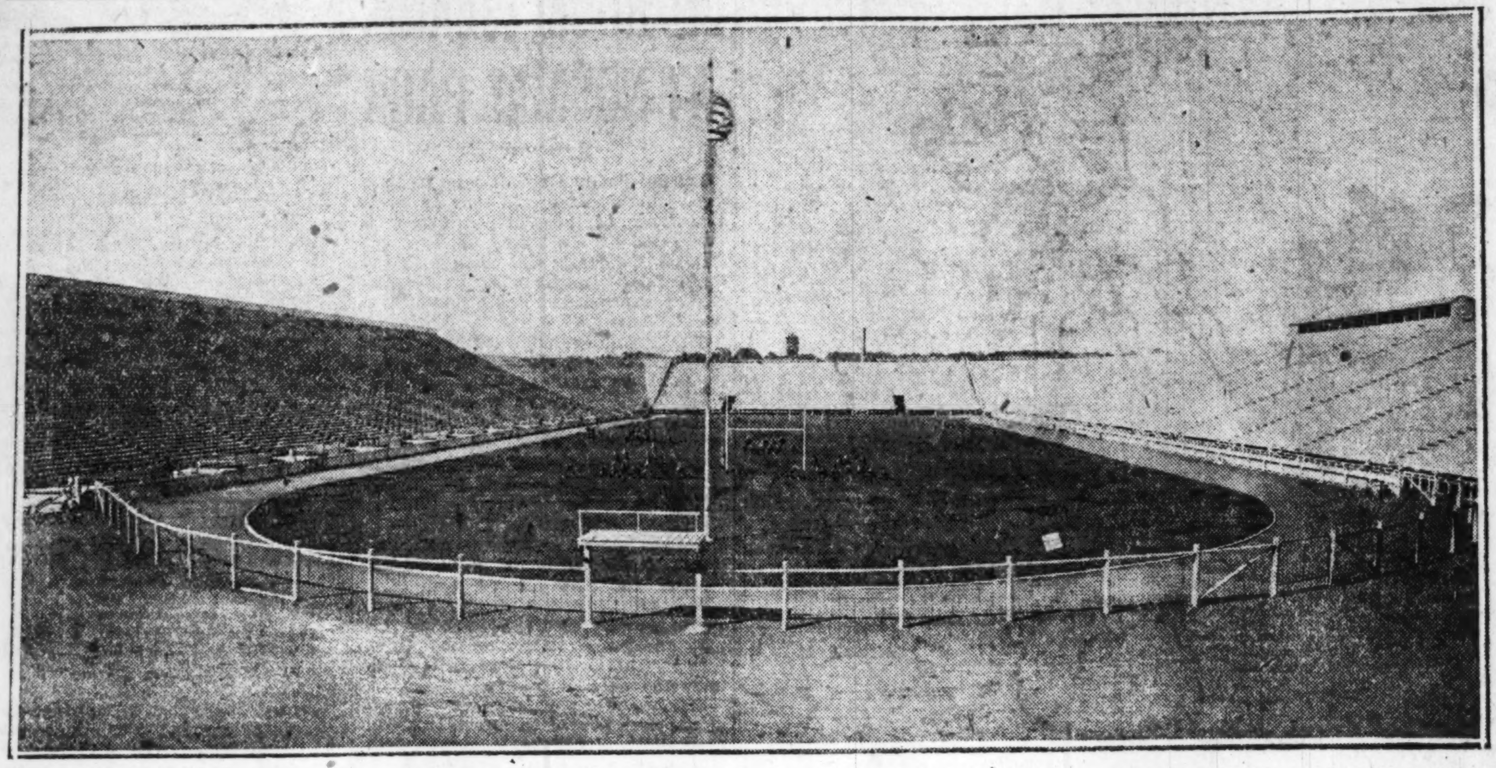
NEW UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN STADIUM



Formal opening of Michigan's new stadium is scheduled at Ann Arbor next Saturday, when the Wolverines and Ohio State clash on the gridiron. The seating capacity of the stadium is 42,000, and it is located on what is known as Ferry field. There is a fine clubhouse for athletes of all teams, several football and baseball practice fields, running tracks, and tennis courts. It is considered one of the most complete college athletic plants in the country.

LOCAL GOLF

HENRY A. GARDNER was successful yesterday in his third attempt to gain the title of club champion when he defeated E. M. Cummins, 2 and 1, in the final thirty-six hole match at Indian Hill. Gardner had four 3s and five 4s on his first eighteen holes, which he shot in 79.

In the eighteen hole medal play handicap event M. B. McIlvaine topped the field and took first prize with 96—21—75. F. R. Green with 98—22—76, O. M. Burton, 100—24—76, and E. J. Holderidge, 93—17—76, tied for second.

Lynch, 3 and 1, for the D class title. W. B. Beveridge won the prize for members who had not won an event during the season with a gross 83.

GLEN OAK.

Dr. H. K. Nicoll beat John H. Victor, 2 and 1, in the final match yesterday for the club championship. In the eighteen hole medal play handicap Dr. H. K. Nicoll had low gross of 83, first low net going to J. J. Green, 88—13—75, and second net to J. H. Stackhouse, 94—18—76. Winners in the ball sweepstakes were M. D. Cummings, L. R. Hackett, E. L. Wendt, R. H. Salter, William McGuire, J. S. Barrett, Dr. H. K. Nicoll, H. T. Walker, J. F. Burns, H. Smith, J. McDermott, E. Murphy, J. Hackett, and T. J. Hyman.

HINSDALE.

C. Maxwell won the Directors' trophy, defeating C. M. Olson, 3 and 2. Winners in the ball sweepstakes in classes A, B, C, and D were J. M. Wright, E. C. Martin, J. F. Maguire, and L. D. Emmert. The same players won in the club sweepstakes.

ELMHURST.

Jack Pentecost Jr. won the club title after a close contest against E. F. Seney. The final margin was 2 up and 1 to play. The Harvest Home dinner and dance last night ended the season's formal social events.

EDGEWATER.

G. Malcolm McConnell retained the club title, but not until he had passed through one of the hardest matches of his career. The contest terminated at the thirty-seventh green, and Hiram D. Fargo Jr. was the vanquished. Mr. Fargo found solace by winning the autumn tournament trophy in class A, 2 and 1, over C. P. Myers. In class B, T. A. Lamont defeated A. V. Dillon, 3 and 2.

The prize in class C lodged with F. H. Farnsworth, who triumphed, 2 and 1, over H. Larson. President Paul C. Loeber presented the season's prizes at the Harvest Home dinner

RIVERSIDE.

A card of 94—23—71 gave W. H. Govenlock first prize in the sweepstakes event. H. K. Allen won the second portion with 79—5—74.

OAK PARK.

Finishing with a margin of 6 and 5, S. J. Templeton won the club championship against E. L. Hartig. Mr. Templeton had duplicated rounds of 38—38—76, which also gave him the prize for low gross on the first nine holes in the club handicap competition. A player was limited to one prize in this event, so the low gross prize on the second nine lodged with F. M. Pebbles, who had 41. The respective low net winners were W. G. Oliver, 42—11—31, and S. W. Miller, 42—7—35.

Gus Nyland's raceabout, Springtime, which has won a lot of races here in the last two years, made the best showing in the final regatta of the Chicago Yacht club yesterday over the nine mile crib course. Woods and Waters by BOB BECKER

PRAIRIE CHICKENS.

A BRACING, snappy autumn day, a pair of dogs weaving across a field with machinelike precision, prairie chickens zooming into the air with a roar—there are three reasons why Illinois hunters are looking forward to Oct. 20, opening day of the prairie chicken season. In spite of the fact that a gunner is allowed to kill but three birds a day, chicken hunting is still mighty popular with the scatter gun fans, and hundreds of them are waiting with impatience for the bell to ring on the 20th.

The pinnated grouse, as the prairie chicken is sometimes called, is one of our handsomest game birds. It is smart, good looking, a strong flyer, and, last but not least, delicious eating. The males in the courting season are especially attractive. To see one of these dandies spread his beautiful tail, inflate the bare, salmon yellow air sacs on the sides of his neck, and then bow and strut before the lady of his choice, is a sight not soon forgotten. During this dance the bird booms a love song that can be heard for a considerable distance.

After the nesting season the birds gather together and in September and October you will find them in coveys gleaning the oat and wheat stubble for grain. Cornfields are also favorite places for them when in search of food. The sport they furnish in these fields—well, ask any prairie chicken enthusiast. He will tell you that a pair of dogs making a point on a covey of chickens is a picture that cannot be surpassed in any sport.

Another attraction about chicken shooting is the fact that it is essentially a game of action. There is no sitting around waiting for birds to fly past you, which is a hard job for a nervous man. In chicken shooting the hunter is roaming through fields and meadows, and this rambling around on a perfect autumn day, with a smart dog in front of you, is in itself a pleasure.

The twelve gauge is a popular gun among chicken hunters. Most gunners use No. 6 shot for these birds, although some fellows prefer 5s. No. 7½ chilled shot is also used considerably, and we have seen many a bird brought down by hunters shooting this size shot. Whatever the size, by all means use chilled shot. It does not mash up like the ordinary soft shot, and as a result your birds will be in better shape for eating.

Practically all the states in the middle west have a small bag limit on prairie chickens. In Indiana you can kill five a day from Oct. 15 to Nov. 1, while Illinois limits the hunter to three a day. Michigan has no open season this year.

What Columbus Discovered for You

Columbus stands today renowned
For proving that the earth is round,
But Fame gave him an extra smile
For finding Porto Rico's isle,
Which yields to smoking men each year
The fragrant leaf that brings them cheer.
Columbus little guessed what prize
Lay waiting under tropic skies—
A richer prize since "ninety-eight,"
When Uncle Sam won this estate,
And with the skill for which he's known
Made this the best tobacco grown.
If you would know real smoking joy,
Get wise to this MILD leaf, my boy,
And smoke "PORTINAS"—they have shown
To smokers
Joys before unknown.

WILLIE HUNTER TOURNEY WINNER; TAKES FINAL, 3-2

Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., Oct. 15.—[Special.]—Willie Hunter, amateur golf champion of Great Britain, won his tournament in America by defeating Percy W. Kendall of Deal, 3 and 2, in the final round of the Shawnee Country club autumn meeting. Both found plenty of trouble and at the end the card read: Hunter, 79; Kendall, 85.

Although he has played golf since a wee lad, Hunter did a thing while playing the third hole which surprised the gallery. His drive landed on the road parallel with the fairway, and in making his second shot he grounded his club, which cost him the hole. Hunter said that he had never played off a road before and didn't know it was a hazard.

Both Tincup and Groves pitched good ball and both were wild. The Orioles, however, were unable to produce a bingle at the right time. Kirke's drive into the right field bleachers in the eighth inning featured. Score:

INDIANA "LEAK" ON GRAIN REPORT STIRS UP TRADERS

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Grain traders were unduly excited over figures given out by the Indiana state agent of the department of agriculture before Washington issued them. They were construed as bearish at one time and bullish at another. It was the only news of consequence in the market and created a great deal of comment.

The "leak" was due to misinterpretation of a code telegram from Washington, according to George C. Bryant, agricultural statistician for Indiana of the federal department of agriculture. In a statement given out in Indianapolis last night he said:

"The figures published in my official report for farm reserves of wheat in the United States were an error. I misinterpreted a code message sent to me Oct. 8 by the department of agriculture at Washington."

Prices Decline, Then Rally.

Prices had a good decline and a rally with the close on wheat practically the same as Friday, while corn was ⅛c higher to ⅛c lower, oats up ⅛c to ¼c and rye ¼c to ½c lower. The government report is expected tomorrow, but should have no decided influence as conservative members see it.

Wheat prices in the face of receipts of over 9,000 cars at Winnipeg for the week and of other depressing influences closed 6¼@6½c higher than a week ago. Corn prices are unchanged despite the big run and the poor shipping demand, while oats have gained ⅞@1⅛c and rye is up 4⅛@5c and barley 1½c, as compared with a week ago. The markets were well liquidated early in the week, when the lowest prices were made. The provision trade was light, with lard 5&30c lower than a week ago, October leading the decline, while short ribs closed 10c lower to 2½c higher, October being the weakest.

Wheat Market Mixed.

The wheat market was a mixed affair and showed the effects of recent absorption of the surplus on the breaks of the last few days. There was moderate hedging pressure and selling by commission houses that were active on the buying side of the two previous days. There was selling and a break of 2c early on bearish construction of the government report, which was said to show almost 419,000,000 bu on the farms Oct. 1.

Later there was a covering movement led by local traders and shorts and December moved up and closed 1⅞c above the lowest of the day. May at the top was $1.21 or 2½c above the low, with the close 1@1⅜c under the high point.

Cash prices in the southwest were strong to 1c higher. Winnipeg futures were strong a good part of the day. There were export clearances of 1,152,000 bu wheat and flour for the day.

Corn and oats received liberal attention. There was selling of over 250,000 bu of corn against cash purchases in the sample market here and scattered buying of both grains. Price actions were influenced largely by that of wheat. Corn at the top was up ⅝c over the previous day's close and oats ¼@⅜c, with the finish of corn only ¼@⅜c above the inside, and oats closed at almost the outside.

Trading in rye consisted largely of changing between wheat and rye and from December to May. There was an evening up between the old and new December, the former being ⅜c premium.

Provision Prices Advance.

A limited business was on in provisions, yet prices advanced and closed around the top with lard 7½@10c higher and short ribs 2½c lower to 5c higher. There was some spreading between cottonseed oil and lard, the holders of lard being at a disadvantage owing to the continued liberal make and to reports of large stocks abroad. Packing here since March 1 aggregates 3,580,000 hogs, or 288,000 over last year.

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

No export sales of wheat or corn were reported at the seaboard yesterday, although it was regarded as probable that considerable grain was taken to cover previous sales. Around 5,000 brls flour have been sold in the last few days, presumably to the Russian relief.

Domestic shipping sales of cash wheat at Chicago were 25,000 bu, corn 90,000 bu, and oats 85,000 bu. Charters were made for 350,000 bu oats for winter storage.

No. 1 hard winter wheat on track at Chicago was a trifle firmer at 1⅛@1⅜ over the December. Offerings were small. Receipts 29 cars.

St. Louis and Kansas City cash wheat prices were unchanged and Omaha 2@4c higher. Minneapolis premiums showed little change while Winnipeg was a shade firmer as compared with the October.

Demand for cash corn was fair with the basis unchanged at ⅞@1c under December for No. 1 and No. 2 yellow and 1¼c under for white. Sample values were practically unchanged for the bulk of sales. Receipts 364 cars. Outside markets were unchanged to 1c higher.

Cash oats prices were unchanged with No. 2 white ⅜c under to ½c over December and No. 3 white 1½@3c under the future. Receipts 108 cars.

·WORLD'S·GRAIN·MARKET·NEWS·

The government report on farm reserves was issued by George C. Bryant, department of agriculture statistician for Indiana, in the regular report of the government, co-operating with the Indiana state bureau. It says the amount of wheat remaining on the farms is 418,879,000 bu, with seed requirements at approximately 85,000,000 bu. Were the latter deducted there would be 333,879,000 bu remaining on the farms Oct. 1. The winter wheat seeding, however, is nearly finished and has been taken out of the farm reserves, or should be.

The grain trade was greatly excited over the issuance of the report on farm reserves and it took several hours before it fully realized where the figures came from. The government statistician at Washington neither confirmed nor denied the Indiana figures, saying that the report would not be released until Monday. Last year farm reserves as given by the government bureau of markets was 477,000,000 bu. On the basis of 741,000,000 bu of this year's crop and a carry over of 54,000,000 bu from the previous crop the report indicates that 47.3 per cent of the total supplies have left the farms during the first three months of the present crop year, compared with 36.6 per cent last year and 49.7 per cent two years ago, when the reserves were 514,800,000 bu. Farm reserves this year, with accumulations at the leading markets, as given by Bradstreet's on Oct. 1, aggregated 478,000,000 bu, as compared with 508,000,000 bu last year.

A local statistician gives the movement of wheat from the farm for three months this year at 307,000,000 bu. On the basis of the crop of 741,000,000 bu this year, there would be 434,000,000 bu remaining on the farms. Another local statistician says should the estimate be put out as official, it would be difficult to reconcile the 376,000,000 bu which it shows as having left the farms with a consumption, export and increased visible supply since July 1 amounting to more than 300,000,000 bu, and to which also must be added the accumulation of interior and elevator stocks during the last three months.

The Daily Trade Bulletin estimates the farm reserves of wheat at 430,000,000 bu, compared with 500,000,000 bu last year. The supply in second hands is 35,000,000 bu larger than last year, and the quantity required for spring seeding 28,000,000 bu.

Grain loadings on leading western railroads show a decided falling off in the last few days and on a few lines they are under last year's. Last year the grain movement did not get fully under way until about this season, while this year cars have been plentiful and railroads have handled business with unusual rapidity, so that the bulk of the small grains and a large percentage of old corn have left the farms. Reports from central Illinois and northwestern Iowa say that old corn is practically all marketed.

"We believe that the situation warrants higher prices, conservatively so," said William C. Wiegand, with the J. Rosenbaum Grain company. "Present day markets reflect the unsettled conditions. They will remain until the world accepts the great truth that work, not wages, is the panacea of all ills. We are now headed toward the stability of pre-war days. There will be many ups and downs, but the day of war inflation is over and extremists will be forced to accept this."

"December wheat broke from $1.37 to $1.07¾ in discounting the run of Canadian grain," said J. T. McLaughlin & Co. "The movement is on now and export buyers and shorts with good judgment are buying the wheat."

Australia shipped 2,136,000 bu wheat the last week, including 920,000 bu to Indian ports, presumably representing part of the 1,500,000 bu sold to that country a short while ago.

The Oct. 1 report of the Southeastern Millers' association, comprising sixty-five mills, gives wheat stocks on hand at 10,000,000 bu, or 5,000,000 bu more than last year.

RAILROAD NOTES

Efforts of the Union Pacific to reduce rates on coal between Wyoming mines and Utah cities to the level maintained prior to the general rate increase of 1920 were nullified by the interstate commerce commission in the issuance of an order suspending the effective date of the schedule until Feb. 12, 1922. The rates were filed by the road to become effective Oct. 15.

Seven hundred men will return to work after a long layoff when the Chicago Great Western shops at Oelwein, Ia., resume tomorrow morning. It is announced by officials that operation after two weeks will depend on acceptance of the company's wage and hour schedule by the men.

The Rock Island railroad has ordered from the American Locomotive works fourteen locomotives for freight service, to be delivered during December, 1921, and January, 1922. The road also has ordered from the General American Car company 200 composite coal cars, which will be delivered during December.

Officials of railroads operating east from Chicago and St. Louis report little change in conditions the last week. General merchandise movement compares favorably with that of a year ago, and there is a little increase in the coal shipments. Southern roads report a continued shortage in the coal movement compared to a year ago, due to the restricted industrial operations.

FINANCIAL NOTES

Sears-Roebuck & Co. yesterday paid off $12,000,000 of its notes, the balance of a total of $16,500,000 maturing this date. The other $4,500,000 of the notes had previously been purchased by the company in the open market. A H. Loeb, vice president of the company, said the payment was made out of cash resources without any additional permanent financing. Part of the funds was obtained through bank loans

The Baldwin Locomotive works and the American Locomotive company have been put in funds through the sale to the banks and bankers previously associated with Belgian government financing of between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000 of Belgian government treasury five year 6 per cent notes due at the end of December, 1925, and taken by the companies as part payment for locomotives shipped to Belgium.

The Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad has closed a contract whereby it will get 25 per cent of the telegraph receipts of the Western Union Telegraph company for messages passing over the lines of the road.

Reports circulated in Homestead, Pa., are to the effect that forty-eight open hearth furnaces of the Homestead steel works of the United States Steel corporation would be placed in operation this week. This would be the largest number in operation since the business depression following the war, about 90 per cent of capacity.

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

Trading in the local unlisted securities market was generally quiet, the outstanding feature being the sensational advance of the Cities Service issues, the common advancing approximately 40 points for the week, and closing at 180 bid, 182 asked. The preferred reflected a 3 point advance in closing at 56½@57, while the bankers shares at 21½@22 were up 6 points. Standard Gas and Electric company common stock again became active, sales being made between 8 and 8¼ on the common, while the preferred was also stronger at 33½ bid, 34 asked. Appalachian Power common gained a minor fraction at 5@5½ and the preferred was up a full point at 39½@41. The bid price of Northern States Power common improved to 46, but offerings continued light at 48. American Light and Traction common and preferred were unchanged, the former at 89@91 and the latter at 79½@80½.

In the miscellaneous group, Butler Brothers improved fractionally, the last sales at 32¼, ex-dividend ⅝ of a point. Kellogg Switchboard was firm at 39@40 and Northwestern Yeast continued in demand at 294, with no stock offered around current quotations. Avery preferred was in demand at 47, with offerings at 52, but the common continued quiet at 20@24. Wahl preferred was unchanged at 81, with small offerings at 84. Consumers preferred was traded in between 61 and 63, while the common was neglected at 5¾. Moline Plow first preferred improved to sales at 9, but at the close stock was offered at 9¼, with best bids at 8.

The motor issues were generally easier, Packard selling at 4¾, while Paige Detroit declined to sales at 12. Stearns was an exception, being steady at 23½@24½.

The feature of the local unlisted bond market was the Wilson 6s, which advanced from 83½ to sales at 85¼. With active trading, the 1st 6s also showed strength, advancing 2 points from 89½ to sales at 91⅝ at the close. Libby, McNeill & Libby 7s were also stronger, sales being made at 97. The Armour and Swift 7s were both unchanged, the majority of trading being consummated around 100 with lowest quotations at 99⅞@100⅛. National Leather 8s were easier and declined from previous sales at 98½ to a close of 97¼ bid, 98 asked. Among the local utilities Chicago Railways 5s showed strength, gaining a full point to 66 bid 66½ asked. The Chicago City rails, however, were unchanged at 66½@67. The South Side Elevated 4½s were in demand; the bid price improved to 72 with few bonds offered around current quotations. Peoples Gas 5s were fractionally higher, sales being made at 78. The remainder of the utility group, namely, Commonwealth Edison 5s, 6s and 7s and the Public Service of Northern Illinois, were all unchanged. Investigate—Then Invest.

The wise investor is a careful investigator. The old adage "look before you leap" is an admonition peculiarly applicable to the investor. Men will devote years of careful study and close application in learning their own business, get the best equipment and employ expert assistance, and then, when they are ready to invest their earnings in other enterprises they will often throw caution to the winds and act as if they had lost all judgment and discretion.

A couple of months ago a small group of men here in Chicago opened an office and started in selling "remarkable special investments." Their clients claim to have been promised fabulous returns on their money, payable within from one to six months. Men handed over their savings without even an attempt to investigate the "company" and induced their friends to "invest." Last week some of the interest became due and investors called to receive their money. The office was closed and the "company" had disappeared. Such things are happening all the time. The lure of promised big returns robs many a man of reason. Men who would not buy an automobile or business equipment or any article without careful investigation will too often buy a worthless piece of paper—stock or bond or contract—without any inquiry whatsoever.

Do not invest in haste and repent at leisure. Investigate before you invest.

Iowa Light, Heat and Power.

J. A. E., Kiron, Ia.—The Iowa Light, Heat, and Power company supplies electricity without competition to fifty-one communities in the state of Iowa. It is an Iowa corporation. Lindsey Hooper is president and C. A. Olson of Boston is secretary and treasurer. The executive offices are at 35 Congress street, Boston, Mass. The company is controlled by the Federal Power and Light company, which owns the entire common and $100,000 of the preferred stocks. Gross earnings in 1920 were $770,157, compared with $612,047 in 1919; net earnings were $127,770, against $100,961 in 1919, and surplus after charges was $84,411, against $54,961.

GERMAN FOOD BUYER TELLS OF NATION'S CROPS

Hugo Meyer, during the first years of the war organizer of the Imperial German Grain Administration, now president of the Getreide Commission, Ltd., Dusseldorf, one of the biggest German grain importing concerns, also financially interested in several of the largest German mills, of which he is a member of the board of directors, who was in Chicago yesterday, says:

"Europe, especially Germany, harvested a bigger crop of wheat and rye in 1921 than in 1920, which means that Germany does not have to import on such a large scale as last year. It has an ample stock of wheat and rye for at least six months' need, and our German mills will not buy now or in the future large quantities at any one time in order to put in reserve stock. On the contrary, our mills will buy only from hand to mouth.

"It is impossible for any miller to keep large stocks, owing to the deflation of the German mark. In pre-war times one ton of American wheat cost about 150 marks, c. i. f. Hamburg; today our miller has to pay at least 6,000 marks, c. i. f. Hamburg. Taking into consideration that Argentina and Australia have good crop prospects, Germany is not anxious to buy at the present time; with her own crop safely stored away Germany takes the stand of 'watchful waiting.'

"Regarding corn and other feeding stuffs, Germany can use good quantities, as cattle and hogs are increasing in numbers. Everything, however, depends on the further development of German currency. If the German mark declines further, the more money Germany has to pay for its foreign grain, and naturally if prices are going too high Germany will buy only such quantities of grain as are absolutely necessary to keep the population from starving."

Last year Germany bought 111,000,000 bu of grain, while this year it will buy between 50,000,000 and 75,000,000 bu for the season.

The New York Times.

New York, Oct. 15.—[Special.]—Practically all Wall street's attention was again directed today to the foreign exchange market. A further rise of more than 2 cents brought sterling to the highest figure reached since the end of May, less than two weeks after the rate had crossed the $4 mark.

The persistence and violence of last week's advance indicates some special cause, which may, however, be nothing more just now than the excited repurchases by speculators for the decline who had long overstayed their market. Such speculators would have had more excuse than usual for their misjudgment; the London market itself has been positive sterling would have to go lower when the large exports of American grain and cotton were going out to Europe.

Reflects Course in Europe.

The recovery, however, means more than a temporary balancing of international debits and credits. Every large swing of exchange in London has faithfully reflected the course of economic conditions in western Europe.

The German mark, however, resumed its course of depreciation. Today its price reached sixty-six one-hundredths of 1 cent. For those who like to reckon in terms of the old fashioned gold premium it may be observed that this week's decline of the mark in fractions of a cent would mean a "rise in the price of gold" from 2911 to 3606.

Small Changes in Stocks.

Changes in stock market prices were unimportant. Fractional declines predominated, but there were more net advances than on previous days of the present week, and the movement as a whole suggested merely uncertainty. Railway shares were lower, with Northern Pacific and Great Northern declining more than 2 points, but in most cases the day's decline was unimportant.

The weekly statement of the associated banks gave one reason for Thursday's lower reserve ratio at the New York Federal bank. They report an increase of $21,600,000 in their reserve credits at that institution. This follows an increase of $36,100,000 in the preceding week and indicates preparation for the active autumn demand for trade.

An increase of $11,094,210 in the surplus reserve brings the total to $39,058,490. There was likewise a gain of $4,632,000 in loans and discounts and of $84,748,000 in deposits. The statement of actual condition, with comparison with last week's figures, follows:

If this business ever stops being human—treating its customers like human beings in a human way—

we're going to get out of it!

There's a couple of hunches we've never outgrown. For instance, we're amazingly behind the times in our manner of meeting the public. We still stick to the old idea of knowing our customers personally and treating them like friends. The new technique of looking pained and bored is 'way over our heads.

With coast-to-coast stores — 300,000 customers —$10,000,000 sales, maybe we ought to change our ways. But we don't intend to.

We're stand-patters on that one point. It's the big idea that built this business, that carried it up and on and forward irresistibly—and it's good enough for us now.

That big idea says, "Don't merely sell a man clothes." Sell him the big DIFFERENCE between this business and others —sell him its character and personality. Make interest, courtesy, enthusiasm your big aim in life. Sell a man the ideals and the methods of this business—he'll see for himself why Foreman & Clark VALUES and SAVINGS are inevitable.

He'll see why we offer a man $10, $15 or $20 MORE in clothing value than any other business, whether it be tailor, pseudo-tailor, wholesaler, retailer, or anyone else who sells clothes.

We believe in rendering that saving, not as a machine that grinds out economies, but as a big, healthy, human sort of business that deals with its customers as intelligent people.

Dumfounded advertising men ask us, "Does this sort of copy sell clothes?" That depends on what they mean —we'd rather kick over the traces—say what we honestly feel—sell a man on this business first—and let our clothes sell themselves.
(Which .. they .. do)

Foreman & Clark

Trade Upstairs and Save at least $10

When you buy a suit of clothes or an overcoat in this Foreman & Clark upstairs store—you're buying it from ALL our UPSTAIRS stores from coast to coast.

When you step into this LOCAL salesfloor—you step into our NATIONAL organization.

We mean—

Without coast-to-coast methods we couldn't give you such values, we couldn't save you $10, $15 or $20, we couldn't back your purchase with our signed and written guarantee of satisfaction.

We conduct this business in a way that the average merchant never dreams of.

Only your bank and your insurance company do the same—operate on a percentage basis strictly.

Not "how much will this bring?" but "how little can we sell this for?" is the keynote of our values!

ROAD CLOSED : DETOUR

By William Hamilton Osborne

Twenty-five Thousand Dollars, a Hero and Four Swooping Hawks

AT three o'clock on a certain Saturday afternoon—a balmy day in early spring—a young man of the name of Elmer Quayle stood bareheaded on the topmost step of the city hall in River City. His general appearance was that of a man who had been thoroughly through the mill. One arm was bound across his breast. He had no eyebrows. His hair had been cropped very close, revealing to the public gaze a white, well shapen poll. He was about twenty-eight years old, of medium height and weight. Save for his broad shoulders, he was slender. He weighed, stripped, not more, perhaps, than a hundred and fifty pounds. It was a necessary part of his profession, for he had one, that he be of athletic tendency and build. Weeks before he had been a passably good looking chap. Weeks later he would once more come into his own.

He stood erect and straight, but painfully embarrassed, upon the topmost step. In front of him there stretched a knock-down speakers' platform—a small affair, with a floor surface ten by ten. Elmer Quayle was not the whole show here by any means. There was something else that made this particular occasion remarkably unique and curious. There was a mysterious, mis-shapen object resting in the middle of this platform—an object hidden and concealed. Over this object an American flag had been thrown. Small boys in the secret knew well what was there, perhaps. But they couldn't see what was there. And most of the people didn't know.

The Honorable Sam Oliver, River County's genial, popular, and eloquent prosecutor of the pleas, delivered the presentation speech. He was never tiresome. In this case he was brief and to the point. With a final toss of his lanky hair Sam Oliver reached his peroration—he thundered out his climax. Dramatically he motioned to a dozen little boys and girls. The crowd surged forward to catch the better glimpse of what lay there revealed.

The Honorable Sam Oliver turned to the bandaged youth beside him.

"To you, young Elmer Quayle," he cried, "this hard-earned heap of coin."

It was a heap of coin—a heap of bills and coin. Pennies, nickels, dimes, quarters, halves, silver dollars, dollar bills, twos, fives, tens, and so on up to fifties. Clean money, soiled money, thrown into a heap. Much money—twenty-five thousand dollars by actual count. Twenty-five thousand dollars in good American currency. And all for Elmer Quayle.

The silence was intense. Then, as in a flash, three diminutive cheer leaders sprang to the platform, raised their voices in sharp, metallic treble, and swung and swayed, and flung their bodies to the four corners of the wind. Shrill voices responded—young voices. Young voices were in the majority, young eyes glistened, young bodies—thousands of them—palpitated and pulsated in that crowd. For the gift was the gift of the school-children of River City to Elmer Quayle, the forlorn young hero standing there on the top step of the city hall.

It was the idea of the school children, this gift—an idea born and nurtured in their schools. In secret they had made their preparations for a tribute to their hero—for more than a month they had busied themselves about the great drive of their young lives. It was their own personal drive for their own personal idol. They had pestered the life out of River City business men—but with grave cautions to their contributors not to tell Elmer Quayle, nor any of his family, nor any of his friends about it. Elmer Quayle was not to know.

They had, indeed, intended great things. At the start they had thought of buying Elmer Quayle a twenty-five thousand dollar house to live in. They had thought of having built for him a twenty-five thousand dollar automobile. They had considered fitting up for him a twenty-five thousand dollar sporting goods store, where they could all rush in and spend much money all the time. Many of them had thought of many meritorious things. The inevitable result was clamor, internecine strife. And then from the very midst of these warring elements there rose a great genius, a spendthrift, a very human spendthrift. He opined that if he were Elmer Quayle he'd rather have the money. His chance remark was recognized as a flash of inspiration. Every youthful donor, every collector and dispenser of small coin, searched his own conscience and found there the naked truth. He would rather have the money, too. And then a young High School idealist—her soul attune with poesy—undertook to ennoble this idea. She capped the climax.

"The money—just as it comes in," she said.

And there it was. It lay in front of Elmer Quayle, warm with the pressure of their youthful hands.

Elmer Quayle glanced nervously about him. The crowd was not all composed of children. There were adults a-plenty. His own friends were there; others. Idlers, enthusiasts, hero-worshipers. School teachers of course. There was one school teacher in particular in whose direction Elmer Quayle glanced from time to time—glanced as a man in deep trouble glances toward his friend. A wisp of a girl, this, younger than he—a girl with wistful, winsome eyes. She was a marked figure, too. For all about her, clinging to her, clutching at her skirts, using her slender figure as a pleasing prop and comfortable support, were many kids—just kids.

This girl returned Elmer Quayle's glance with interest; she was flushed and worried just as he was flushed and worried. She wanted to help him if she could. In the midst of the hubbub Elmer Quayle tore his glance from hers and looked the other way. Elmer Quayle knew just where to look.

Leaning gracefully against a column, warm, rich furs about her neck, stood Zelda Lindquist. She was a woman, a grown woman, fair and young and supple, with the creamy complexion of the white peach, and with hair as fair as any Viking's daughter. Mayhap she was a Viking's daughter—at any rate, she looked the part. She was unusually self-possessed, serene, untroubled. She was there to see and to be seen. And she was seen; it was in her to attract attention. Once she had stepped out from behind that column, the male spectators of adult—or even adolescent—age shifted their glances from Elmer Quayle; shifted their glances from that pile of money on the platform. They looked at her. Boys from the high school looked at her. Prosecutor Sam Oliver, slumping into his platform seat, fixed his steady, curious, appraising eyes upon her; the fact that he didn't know her and had never seen her at any time before lent zest and spice to his curious regard.

This Zelda Lindquist had come to see. She saw. She held her glance fixed upon one thing and one thing only—twenty-five thousand dollars' worth of good American money that was piled upon the little platform. As Sam Oliver watched her, he saw that she was not alone. She had a male companion with her—a big man, stupid looking. This man was no Viking, but he might well qualify as the vassal of a Viking. This man's eyes were small, furtive. Greed shone from them. He, too, kept his eyes upon the money.

Zelda Lindquist looked up at this companion.

"Twenty-five thousand dollars," Sam Oliver heard her say to her companion, "it doesn't look like much."

"It's money," chuckled her companion. He did something more than chuckle. Playfully he flipped her chin with a huge forefinger—did it with an air of intimacy that the woman seemed to resent. She reddened angrily. Then, conscious, mayhap, that she was a center of attraction, she glanced upward once again, with a saucy smile upon her lips. Tired of resting her fine shoulders against the stone pillar, she leaned openly, gracefully against this man. The men watched her—the women watched her, too. Sam Oliver, a grim smile upon his lips, watched the people that were watching her—the reflex influence of a woman of this type was, to him, more interesting than the woman was herself.

Then, as he looked about him, for the first time that afternoon Prosecutor Sam Oliver caught sight of Rossiter F. Jones. Rossiter F. Jones was one of the handsomest, and, in the estimation of Sam Oliver, one of the most dangerous gentlemen in town. Just why he was dangerous will soon appear. He, too, was a big man—bigger and far finer than the woman's escort. He was well dressed, well groomed, was Rossiter F. Jones. One of the remarkable characteristics of this man was that he looked like a million dollars at all times. He, too, was standing near a column, but at the moment he was not looking at the woman. Sam Oliver, however, saw her twice cast a woman's glance at Rossiter F. Jones. But for the moment Sam Oliver lost interest in the woman and her by-play. He concentrated, willingly and eagerly, upon this Rossiter F. Jones. And he perceived, as in a flash, that of all the people in that crowd Rossiter F. Jones was eying that luscious pile of currency with more genuine affection and regard, giving it more intensive thought and considerate meditation, than was anybody else.

Prosecutor Sam Oliver began to sniff the air.

Silence was finally restored. The crowd gazed with expectation at their young hero, Elmer Quayle.

He spoke. "From now on," stammered Elmer Quayle, as though talking to himself, or, perhaps, as though taking into his confidence the souls of those youngsters round about, "from now on—to do the right thing—at any cost. The right thing—and nothing else."

His chin quivered. His eyes filled. Then, suddenly he broke down and cried; cried like a little child; perhaps more like a woman.

"Gee," broke out a boyish voice, "that's just the way he blubbered when he brought 'em down."

The crowd, relieved, took up the cry. That was the way that Elmer Quayle had blubbered when he brought 'em down. Those who hadn't seen and heard him blubber when he brought 'em down, had read about it in the newspapers. For Elmer Quayle had earned this heap of money lying on the platform; by his singed hair and eyebrows, by his dislocated shoulder, by his broken ribs he had earned it. In the sight of hundreds of River City school children he had earned it. He had earned it in a fire.

There were many witnesses to Elmer Quayle's heroic act. Elmer Quayle was physical training instructor in the River City schools. On the day in question, Elmer Quayle was drilling classes on the top floor of the High School. This school backed up against the Iroquois Apartments on the street behind. The Iroquois Apartments formed a rectangular U whose base fronted on the other street, whose uprights thrust themselves out toward the High School in the rear. The fire broke out on lower floors, seemingly in many places all at once. Smoke enveloped the apartment house.

Elmer Quayle was a regular human being. He suspended drill—his pupils massed themselves against the rear windows of the big room. They watched in interested silence. The half-shriek of a girl pupil broke this silence. Above the heavy pall of smoke, across the intervening space, she had caught sight of women at an upper window, signaling frantically for assistance.

Elmer Quayle followed this girl's glance—he, too, saw the women. They were clustered in a fourth floor window situate at the deepest portion of the U. Nobody, of course, could see them from the street—owing to the heavy smoke, nobody could have seen them from the ground. Elmer Quayle noted the wisps of white vapor that curled from that window. He saw that one of the women was about to jump. He caught up a gymnasium shirt that wasn't working—he seized a megaphone. Across two hundred feet he called to them; called to those frantic women not to jump. They saw his signal—they heard his reassuring voice.

Elmer Quayle left the megaphone in the hands of a student—directed him to keep up the spirits of the women. Then he darted down the stairs. Reaching the apartment house, he found a fire escape that wasn't working. Through the smoke that enveloped it he wriggled his way upwards to the roof. He made his way upon the roof to a point above the women. He leaned far out over the edge—spoke to the women, told them all was well.

They lifted scared faces to him—stretched out beseeching arms. Thin wisps of smoke curled up about those faces and those arms. These women were two floors below the roof. Elmer Quayle had brought no rope. From his position on the roof he could offer them no help. Scurrying about, he discovered a trapdoor and wrenched it open. From it he lowered himself into an unfinished, low-ceilinged attic. He made his way to a convenient window and found that he had called the turn. This window was just above the window where the women clustered. The distance between the bottom of his window and the top of theirs was short. His window sash he opened from the bottom—he directed the women to lower their window sashes from the top.

Then, while the high school megaphone cheered him on, he lowered himself into the room where they were gathered. He found five women there, of assorted sizes. He found them more than frightened—he found them desperate. And with good cause. His swift investigation proved to him that they were trapped. There was but one solution to the problem—the thing was up to him. He picked out the smallest woman of the bunch; gave her and the others brief directions. Then, with some difficulty, he swung himself back to his vantage point at the attic window up above. Once inside the attic, he leaned out of that window and stretched down his arms. The four women lifted the fifth until her finger tips touched Elmer Quayle's. Elmer grasped her firmly by the wrists and slowly drew her upward—a moment later she lay quivering beside him on the floor. But not for long, for Elmer Quayle had work for her to do.

"Hang onto my legs," commanded Elmer Quayle. And showed her how. She hung on, adding her weight and her insignificant strength to his. But she furnished leverage, at any rate, and that was what he needed. He fished another woman through the window—stopped for a moment's rest. Then, under his direction, both women hung to his legs—one leg to each. He fished a third—a fourth. Then came the tug of war—he knew it for the thing it was. Elmer Quayle weighed, stripped, one hundred and fifty pounds. The last despairing soul remaining on the floor below weighed two hundred if she weighed an ounce. Fortunately, this woman was a scrub woman of the place; her muscles were trained muscles; she was as brawny as she was big. And she nad a pair of powerful hands and wrists. Obeying Elmer Quayle's instructions, this woman climbed, somehow, to the window sill of the room of which, now, she was sole occupant, half seated herself upon the lowered window sashes, and stretched her long arms toward Elmer Quayle. Inside the attic four women hung, in desperation, to the legs of Elmer Quayle—two women to a leg.

"You hang to me," commanded Elmer Quayle. The woman hung. She was fully as much interested in the matter as was Elmer. She gripped him tight. Using his reserve strength, his second wind, using every trick and artifice known to the trained athlete, Elmer Quayle fought his way backward into the attic with that dead weight clinging to him. By hook and crook he got that woman in. By hook and crook he got his five women through the trapdoor to the roof. By hook and crook he got them down the fire escape—safely down the fire escape. Safely, all save himself.

On his last trip down flames burst from the third story windows in the rear and robbed him of his hair and, temporarily, of his good looks, as well. He dropped into the midst of the five women he had rescued—blubbering, undone.

Five minutes after Elmer Quayle had snaked those women out flames burst from the window where they had crouched. Ten minutes later flames burst through the attic and the roof. The fire escape down which the women clambered became impassable the instant they were safely down. Three-quarters of an hour later the walls of the Iroquois fell in. The High School was unsinged—the wind had blown the other way.

Elmer Quayle had accomplished the impossible—he had saved five human lives.

And here he was, only half mended so far; and there lay his reward. He still was sobbing.

Nobody seemed to know just what to do. Then a thirteen year old girl did it.

"A long life and a happy one, Professor Elmer Quayle!" she cried, starting from her place in the depths of the crowd. She was a song leader and her time had come. With a catch in her fine young voice she started in on one of the sentimental ditties of the day. She knew her business. In another instant she had swung into the melody in full, rich tones. With a long line of singing boys and girls behind her she skirted the multitude, wound her graceful way to the place where the physical instructor sat—and kissed him.

The spell was broken. All was well.

A few days afterward Zelda Lindquist was ushered into the private office of Eleazer Grindstone, one of the well known professional men of River City. With Zelda Lindquist was her huge escort of the city hall steps. If you wanted to accomplish the impossible and were not particular as to the means to be employed, you went to Grindstone. He accomplished it. He did it legally and got twice as much—if not for you, then for himself.

"I am Miss Zelda Lindquist,' said Grindstone's new client.

Eleazer Grindstone looked her over carefully. He nodded toward the damaged gentleman. "And you——?" he queried.

"He is my brother—he is Joe Lindquist," said the lady swiftly. She leaned forward. "Counselor," she went on, "I have work for you to do."

The old lawyer nodded. "A breach of promise case," he smiled.

Zelda Lindquist gasped—she stared at him. "How did you know?" she demanded.

Grindstone smiled quizzically. "You have not lost much time, my fair young friend," he said.

She kept on staring. "How do you mean—much time?" she echoed.

Grindstone looked her in the eye.

"It was but a day or so ago they handed him the money," he reminded her. "Since then you have made the rounds of all the lawyers in the town——"

"How can you know that?" demanded the woman.

"Only to be turned down," smiled Grindstone; "only to find out that our smug members of the bar declined to enforce a woman's rights against our local hero. And then you came to me."

"You are a wizard," breathed the girl.

"It is my business to be a wizard," nodded Grindstone. He leaned back in his chair and placed finger tips against finger tips. "What have you got?" he queried..

"Much," responded Zelda Lindquist. "I have been engaged to Elmer Quayle for upwards of a year. Now he has turned me down."

"Engaged," mused Grindstone. "How many witnesses have you got to back you up? What kind of evidence can you present?"

Zelda Lindquist shrugged her supple shoulders.

"I do not need much evidence," she said; "I have this ring." She took it off—that ring—and handed it to Grindstone. The lawyer lifted from his desk drawer a magnifying glass, glanced at the inscription first, then at the diamond.

"Four hundred and twenty-five dollars as it stands," said Grindstone. Saying it, he slipped the ring into his waistcoat pocket.

"But why?" protested the lady.

"I shall retain it," smiled Grindstone; "as evidence, to be used upon the trial."

"Oh, but you are slick," cried Zelda Lindquist.

"That's why you are here," said Grindstone. "Now, tell me this—what does this ring prove, save that you bought it and had an inscription cut on the inside rim—what else?"

Zelda Lindquist was ready for that question. She produced a packet of letters, tied with a highly scented pink ribbon. "These else," she returned. She passed them over.

Grindstone read them over.

"Well," he grinned, "looks like he loves you and wants to marry you. Why don't you marry him?"

"Because of—this!" exclaimed the girl defiantly. She produced another letter. Grindstone read it once, twice, thrice.

"Well," he said at length, "these couldn't have been better if you'd had 'em all forged for the purpose of your breach of promise suit. I'm obliged to tell you that your case is clear. You win. The gentleman has twenty-five thousand dollars in the bank—good American money. It'll split up quite conveniently, it seems to me."

So much for Grindstone and his new client, Zelda Lindquist. A week after their presumably satisfactory interview, two people entered the office of Sam Oliver, prosecutor of the pleas. Sam Oliver had finished for the day. He was lying back in his swivel chair, one foot cocked up, his hat drawn rakishly over his left eyebrow. He was ready to go home, but he lolled there, dreaming, gazing from his vantage point on Court House Hill over the first class city that was his especial pride and care. That city was co-extensive with the county limits. As a county officer Sam Oliver had done his best to solve that city's problems—he had done his best to keep that city clean.

The two people that came in reused him from a revery. They did more than that—they aroused his immediate attention. He saw, as in a flash, their significance, their place in the scheme of things. To him they were great people, these two. Great people because they were great lovers. One of them was the still damaged Elmer Quayle—the other was the little school teacher of the city hall steps. Lovers, clearly, but not at peace. Trouble brooded over them, rested its burden upon her youthful shoulders—one of them a dislocated shoulder in the bargain. It helped, though, that they were bearing it together.

Elmer Quayle opened negotiations forthwith. "Prosecutor Oliver," he said, "I've come to you because you seemed, somehow, really to feel the fine things you said about me just the other day. Because of that and because I don't know where else to go. This is the first time I've ever been at law."

"You are at law now?" queried Sam Oliver.

"Much," returned Elmer Quayle with a grimace. "I have been sued for breach of promise by a woman."

"Breach of promise!" echoed Sam Oliver, bending his glance upon the little school teacher. "And—you have been served with papers in the suit?"

Elmer Quayle produced them, a summons and complaint. He passed them to Sam Oliver. Sam Oliver read them through in silence. Then he shook his head.

"This complaint," he mused, "carries its sharpest sting in its tail." He placed his forefinger upon a typed name at the bottom of the paper. "Mr. Eleazer Grindstone brings this suit."

"How does that signify?" asked Elmer Quayle.

"It signifies," nodded Sam Oliver, "because Mr. Eleazer Grindstone doesn't bring a suit unless he is sure of a satisfactory settlement or sure to get a verdict. He wins. He gets results."

"He mustn't win this case," said Elmer Quayle.

"He can't win this case," cried the little school teacher. Sam Oliver smiled to himself and looked her over. "Needless to ask," he said to Elmer Quayle, "this is not the woman in the case?"

"I sholud say not," returned Elmer Quayle, drawing the girl close to himself; "she's Peggy Warner. I forgot to introduce her. She's my fiancée. We've sort of gone together all our lives. Except——"

Peggy Warner interrupted. "It was all my fault, Prosecutor Oliver!" she exclaimed contritely. "I thought a while back that Elmer was—well, sowing too many wild oats. And so I turned him off."

"Wild oats—wild oats!" echoed Sam Oliver. "An athletic instructor in our city's schools—sowing wild oats?"

"Well," pleaded Elmer Quayle, "its true—but it's all over now."

"I should have gone out and sowed wild oats with him," went on little Peggy Warner. "I should have stuck to him. Then this thing never would have happened."

Sam Oliver returned to a perusal of the papers in the case. "This Zelda Lindquist," nodded he, "says that you promised to marry her a year ago—says you have broken your promise. And she wants twenty-five thousand dollars from you for the breach."

"How did you come to meet this woman?" he demanded of Elmer Quayle.

"I met her at a public dance."

"She is—attractive?" asked Sam Oliver.

"Very," returned Elmer Quayle.

"Oh, Elmer!" cried the girl.

"I can't help it," repeated Elmer doggedly;

he said, "I told you awhile back that it would cost River county ten thousand dollars to convict you."

"Right," said Jones.

"River county," went on Sam Oliver, "is going to reward you for saving it expense." He drew forth his checkbook and scribbled in it for a moment. Jones' eyes popped from his head. Sam waved a slender piece of paper in the air to dry it. "That's the first thing," went on Sam; "the second is, that we've got a woman here who's likely to win her case. Well and good. I want that twenty-five thousand dollars snatched from her in the very instant of her triumph. Mr. Jones," he went on, "here is my individual check to your order for two thousand dollars. It is yours."

Jones gasped. "To do with as I will?" he demanded.

"Not to do with as you will," smiled Sam; "as a matter of fact, from this moment, you and the proceeds of that two thousand dollar check will be under the surveillance of my men. Not to do with as you will, but to do with as I will, Mr. Jones."

"And what do you want done with it?" demanded Jones, in tones of wonder.

Sam rose, crept to the door of the living room, and closed it.

He had something particular to say to Rossiter F. Jones. He said it. The saying of it lasted far into the night.

The Lindquist-Quayle breach of promise case was reached for trial late in November. As luck would have it, the jury impaneled in the case was a jury of young men. This was bad enough, but Sam Oliver couldn't help it. Eleazer Grindstone plunged into his own case with his customary vigor and vim, and took his jury along with him as he went. He had it all his own way until the second morning of the trial. He had a sympathetic, winsome, winning woman on the witness stand, capable of hypnotizing any twelve men all at once, either in or out of a jury box. These twelve ate her story up. She was to them as she once had been to Elmer Quayle. Eleazer Grindstone played her up for all that she was worth. Finally he took his seat.

"Cross-examine," he said to Sam Oliver. Sam Oliver arose. He smiled gently at the pathetically beautiful plaintiff.

"I want to bring out all the facts," said Sam. "Your counsel has introduced in evidence the letters that Elmer Quayle wrote you?"

"Yes," nodded the witness.

"But he has not introduced in evidence the letters that you wrote Elmer Quayle?"

"No," said the witness.

"You wrote some letters, did you not, to Elmer Quayle?"

"Oh, yes," returned the witness.

"Love letters?" queried Sam.

The witness blushed. "Love letters," she assented.

"You wrote him at least five love letters?" queried Sam.

"Oh, all of that."

Sam Oliver drew from his pocket a slender batch of letters. "I'm going to show you," he went on, "five letters that you've written."

"Let me see them," said the witness.

Sam shook his head. "I will hold these letters in my hand," he said. "I want you to identify your signature. I exhibit to you the name Zelda Lindquist signed on number one. Look merely at the signature. Is that your signature? Did you sign that letter?"

"I did," said the fair lady on the stand.

"I'll have that letter marked for identification," said Sam Oliver. It was so marked.

"Let me see that letter?" demanded Grindstone, interested. Sam Oliver shook his head and thrust the letter back into his breast pocket. "Not until I offer it in evidence," he said.

He exhibited to the witness a second letter. "Is that your signature?" he queried.

"It is," returned the witness.

Sam had that letter marked as well. He exhibited, in turn, three other signatures to the witness. She identified them all.

"So much for your love letters," smiled Sam Oliver, with the air of a man who aimed to please. "Now, for another thing. You have already testified that Elmer Quayle presented you with an engagement ring."

"It is there upon the table," nodded Zelda Lindquist.

Sam Oliver picked it up. He picked up Eleazer Grindstone's magnifying glass and examined the engagement ring with care. Then, holding the engagement ring in his left hand, he pointed his right forefinger at the witness.

"You will please remove your glove," he said.

The witness turned to the court.

"Why should I remove my glove?" she demanded. But she turned pale as she said it.

"What's the general idea?" queried the court.

"I want to determine," nodded Sam Oliver, "whether this ring really fits her finger—or whether it does not."

"Oh, well," said the court, "if you're going to deny that he bought the ring for her——"

"I have the right," Sam Oliver reminded him, "to go into every phase of the matter while the plaintiff is upon the witness stand."

"Take off your glove, madam," directed the court.

Zelda Lindquist slowlyl removed her right hand glove. Sam Oliver watched her with a curious smile upon his lips. "Very good," he said at length, "and now that you have the right one off, suppose you take the trouble to remove the left."

"No," cried the witness.

"Yes," said Sam Oliver.

"This is an outrage," cried the witness.

"Why an outrage?" queried the court. "I think, madam, you had better take it off."

The witness reluctantly removed her left hand glove. "Now," said Sam Oliver, "I shall try this engagement ring upon the third finger of your left hand." He proceeded so to do, but stopped. "But," he protested in surprise, "you have another ring upon that finger, have you not?"

"Yes," said the witness, "it is a ring I selected for myself."

"It is a beauty," cried Sam Oliver.

Grindstone, who hadn't the least idea what it was all about, fumed in his seat. "Come, let's get on," he said testily, "the witness has another ring upon her hand. She says it's hers. We'll concede she bought it. You don't claim she stole the ring?"

Sam Oliver shook his head. "The lady steals hearts, not diamonds," he returned. But he held his glance to her left hand. "This ring upon your finger," he persisted, "that belongs to you?"

"It does," returned the witness defiantly; "the ring is mine."

At this juncture there was interruption. A uniformed messenger entered the courtroom and made his way to the railing down in front. He flicked a white envelope in his hand. He whispered to a court officer. The court officer stepped up to the bench. The court listened to him, then held up its hand.

"This messenger," announced the court, "has a message for the plaintiff on the stand. I'll suspend this examination until she has had an opportunity to read the message and answer it if necessary."

The officer passed the message to the witness. She tore it open. No sooner had she done so than the color raced up into her neck—suffused her face. She flashed an angry glance toward Sam Oliver.

"You—thief!" she cried. Sam merely smiled. The messenger pressed forward. "Any answer, lady?" he inquired.

"Yes," said Zelda Lindquist. Hurriedly she scribbled an answer on the back of the message itself, replaced it in its envelope, readdressed the envelope, and passed it once more to the messenger. Then Zelda Lindquist glanced once more at Sam Oliver.

"You thief," she cried again.

The court rapped for order. "Proceed," exclaimed the court. Grindstone was upon his feet, but helpless—he hadn't the first clew as to what it all meant. But Sam Oliver, ignoring him, went on.

"I ask you now," said Sam, "to remove this ring that is now upon your finger, to permit me to place Elmer Quayle's ring where it once belonged."

"Then you concede it once belonged there," exclaimed Grindstone.

"I decline to do anything of the kind," said Zelda Lindquist.

Sam Oliver waved his hand. "So be it," he returned. "Now, one step further, if you please. What is your business, may I ask?"

"I have no business," returned the witness.

"But," persisted Sam Oliver, "you invest cash in stocks and bonds now and then, do you not? You take a flyer on the street?"

"I have no money to take a flyer on the street—to invest in stocks and bonds," returned the girl.

"But surely," pleaded Sam, "at various times you have had some dealings with a broker of the name of Rossiter F. Jones?"

"You are a devil," cried the woman.

"Now, answer my question," nodded Sam.

"I have had some dealings," conceded the witness, "with a Mr. Rossiter F. Jones."

"You told Rossiter F. Jones all about your litigation here?"

"I did."

"Told him you expected to get a verdict for the full amount demanded in your complaint?"

"I told him just what everybody knew—why not?"

Grindstone objected. "What has this got to do with Elmer Quayle?" he cried.

"Now, lady," went on Sam Oliver, "what kind of business dealings have you had with Rossiter F. Jones?"

"None of your business," angrily returned the witness.

"Who is this Rossiter F. Jones?" persisted Sam Oliver.

"He is," returned the witness, with something of triumph in her tone, "a millionaire business man in town."

The jury laughed. "A millionaire business man in town," smiled Sam Oliver; "and in the course of your dealings with him you have written him letters, have you not?"

"I may have done so," said the witness.

"Now," went on Sam, "tell me—what business relations does this Rossiter F. Jones bear toward you? I want the truth."

"He is," said Zelda Lindquist, "my confidential adviser."

"Old enough to be your father?"

"I think maybe so," returned the witness.

Sam Oliver once more thrust his hand into his breast pocket. He produced the five letters he had shown the witness at the opening of his cross-examination.

"Miss Lindquist," said Sam Oliver, "you stated a moment ago here, under oath, that the signature upon these letters was your own. You also stated, and perhaps you thought, that these five letters were love letters written by you to Elmer Quayle. You thought so, didn't you? I show them to you once again. To whom are they addressed?"

"You thief," cried the witness shrilly, "you stole them. They are addressed to Mr. Rossiter F. Jones."

"Let me see those letters," snarled Eleazer Grindstone.

"With all my heart," said Sam. He handed them in turn to Grindstone. Grindstone read them and returned them. He slumped into his chair—a hopeless, helpless man.

"Well," he conceded, "I suppose they're evidence."

"I'll have them marked, and I'll read them to the jury," said Sam Oliver.

"You will not," exclaimed the woman on the stand.

"Have it your own way," smiled Sam Oliver. "I'll let the jury read 'em for themselves." He passed the letters to the jury. The jury sniffed at their insidious perfume. The jury read them. Some of the jury even blushed at them.

"Did Mr. Rossiter F. Jones answer theso love letters?" queried Sam.

"None of your business," retorted the witness, casting discretion to the winds.

"Now," said Sam Oliver, "that ring."

Zelda Lindquist tore the ring from her finger. Sam Oliver laid it upon the open palm of his hand. "Now," he proceeded, "without looking at this ring, I feel free to assert that it is a betrothal ring presented by Mr. Rossiter F. Jones to you, the plaintiff in this case. Deny that if you can."

The witness couldn't. At least she didn't. And, as a matter of fact, it was. "Miss Lindquist," went on Sam Oliver, "I find that in these letters that you wrote to Rossiter F. Jones, you say what once you had said to Elmer Quayle. You tell Rossiter F. Jones that he, your first lover, has come into your life—has swept you off your feet. I find you loved—that you have never cared for anybody else, not even for this Elmer Quayle. I find you telling Rossiter F. Jones that he is the only man you could ever pick out to be your husband and the father of your children. I find you chiding him for his courtliness and old fashioned aloofness—you want him to pick you up and crush you in his arms. Later I find you reminding him affectionately of his promise to confer upon you a hundred thousand dollars on your wedding day. Lastly, I find you languishing, in pen and ink, for the swift coming of that wedding day. You say all these things to Rossiter F. Jones."

"What if you do?" cried the witness, defiantly; "I am free to marry, am I not?"

Sam Oliver nodded. "Miss Lindquist," he went on, "will you tell this jury something that this jury wants to know? Will you tell this jury how, if Rossiter F. Jones is the only man you ever loved—the only man you could pick to be your husband and the father of your children; how, since this Rossiter F. Jones gave you a thousand dollar engagement ring, and promises you a hundred thousand dollars for your very own; how, in view of the fact that you say Rossiter F. Jones is a very wealthy man; how, in view of the fact that you state here in your letters that you never cared for Elmer Quayle—my dear Miss Lindquist, tell this jury just how you are damaged in the case at bar?"

Zelda Lindquist didn't tell them—she couldn't tell them. So Sam Oliver rested his defense on her own testimony then and there. The case went to the jury. The jury came back with its verdict inside of fifteen minutes. The verdict was for Elmer Quayle.

Immediately upon the rendition of the verdict Zelda Lindquist stormed up to Sam Oliver and thrust her clenched hand into his face.

"You are a thief," she reiterated, "and I shall have Mr. Jones arrest you for a thief."

"I bear the woman out, Sam," nodded Grindstone darkly, "somebody stole those letters from this man. They are his property—he has the right to prosecute the thief."

"Get him and let him prosecute," smiled Sam.

He left the courtroom. From the courtroom he went direct to the S. T. & L. railway station, by machine. He reached the station five minutes before the arrival of a through train bound for the west. As he leaped out of his motor car, Rossiter F. Jones darted out of the baggage room, clutched him by the arm, and drew him into a dark corner where they would be unobserved.

"Did she get my message?" demanded Rossiter F. Jones.

"She did," said Sam Oliver—and he wondered.

"Thank God," cried Jones earnestly, "I couldn't let that girl know that I was in cahoots with you. You didn't tell her, did you?"

"I did not," said Sam Oliver, "she still thinks that I'm a thief and that I had those letters stolen from your apartment here in town."

"Thank God," said Jones again.

"Why thank God so much?" asked Sam.

"Good gosh," cried Jones enthusiastically, "the girl's a peach. She's my girl. I'm going to marry her."

"Marry her," echoed Sam Oliver, "when—where—how?"

"Tomorrow morning in Chicago," nodded Rossiter F. Jones, "the tightest knot I can get tied. By gosh, prosecutor, I'm in love."

He peered out through a dirty window. He clutched Sam Oliver feverishly by the arm. "By gosh," he whispered, "there she is now. Do me a favor, Mr. Oliver. I've kept faith with you. Do me the favor to keep well out of sight."

"Done," said Sam, "if you'll keep out of my sight forevermore."

"Double done," said Rossiter F. Jones.

The train pulled in. Sam Oliver, from a vantage point, watched Jones and Zelda Lindquist board the train. The conductor waved a signal to the engineer. The train drew slowly out. Sam Oliver, breathing a sigh of relief, emerged from his hiding place and was nearly knocked down for his pains. The man who knocked him down was Joe Lindquist, Zelda Lindquist's brother. He looked about him wildly. He grabbed Sam Oliver excitedly by the arm.

"Tell me," demanded Joe Lindquist, "have you seen Zelda anywhere?"

"Yes," roared Sam Oliver, "your sister's on that train with Rossiter F. Jones. She's going to marry him."

"With Jones," yelled Joe Lindquist, "with Jones—and going to marry him? Not on your life. Sister, nothing. That woman is my wife."

A moment later he had scrambled over the railing of the observation platform, had disappeared into the slowly moving train. Sam Oliver stood there and watched it out of sight. Then he went back to his office. One of his assistants stopped him with a wink.

"Your client Elmer Quayle has got his girl inside," he said to Sam. "I told 'em they would have to wait. They shut the door on me."

"Let 'em wait," smiled Sam. He rubbed his hands and chuckled. "Well," he commented to himself, "we killed several birds with one stone. The undesirables are on their way. We went across lots after 'em and got 'em. Gee whiz, but it's good to be back on the main road once more."

"she's attractive—she attracted me."

"Tell me about her," demanded the prosecutor. Elmer Quayle started in to describe the Zelda Lindquist that he knew. In the midst of his description Sam Oliver held up his hand.

"I know now—I have seen the woman," nodded Sam Oliver; "she was on the steps of the city hall that day."

"Yes," said Elmer Quayle.

The prosecutor tapped the papers with the back of his hand. "I take it," he proceeded, "that you stand ready to deny everything she sets forth in her complaint."

"Not so you can notice it," said Elmer Quayle.

"You asked her to marry you?"

"I did, and in a letter," nodded Elmer Quayle.

"Why—in a letter?" queried the prosecutor.

"I met her at dances several times," went on Elmer Quayle. "She asked me my address—she wrote me a letter asking me to come and see her. She wrote me letters frequently—love letters. I can see now that she wrote them for one purpose—one only. She wanted me to answer them—wanted me to commit myself in writing. She wanted letters to dream on, she told me.

"It came to a point where, it seemed to me, both of us were of one mind. She kept away from me for a week or so. I had to write her. And I wrote. I promised to marry her and gave her a ring," went on the young athlete.

"And then——" persisted the prosecutor.

"Then, for the first time, I told her the truth about my circumstances—told her that I had spent all my money on her. Told her that I had nothing but my salary as athletic instructor in the schools. I wanted her to marry me on that."

"With what result?" asked the prosecutor hopefully.

"None, save that she lost all interest in me and exhibited indifference toward me. You were quite right, sir. I see it now. She had made herself attractive to me until she had me. She still held me, though. She did not release me. We just drifted on—I still spent money on her. She still wore my ring. At times I gave her money. Then, somehow or other, I woke up. I came to my senses. I thought—the more I thought the more I didn't like it. I can't get this over to you just the way I want to get it—but I couldn't see this woman as the mother of a lot of children. I don't know just what she was made for, but it wasn't for a home. I told her so. I broke with her myself."

"By word of mouth?" queried Sam Oliver.

"I did it in a letter," said Elmer Quayle miserably.

"How foolish, Elmer!" cried the girl.

Elmer braced himself. "Before I gave her an engagement ring," he nodded, "she was as fine as silk. Things changed after that. I found her smoking cigarettes to beat the band. I'll stake my bottom dollar she's a fiend."

"What else," queried the prosecutor. "I've got that down."

"Cocktails—too many of them," nodded Elmer Quayle; "and she keeps a lot of bottles on tap in her apartment in the bargain. I know she drinks too much."

"What else?" demanded Sam Oliver, making more notes.

"She goes to dances every night," said Elmer; "she dances till the cows come home. And what made me sore was this: Before I was engaged to Zelda she danced all her dances with me. Afterward she danced not with me but with the best dressed chaps with the biggest rolls of money in the room. If I got one dance a night I was a lucky man. She ignored me. She let me spend my money on her; she let me give her money. Actually, she threw me down. Only she didn't say so, like a man. In her heart she jilted me before I ever thought of jilting her. I couldn't stand it—I wrote that letter to her. And then, this fire, and now——"

"Obviously," nodded the prosecutor, "the twenty-five thousand put a new light on the matter. That's neither here nor there. It was her good luck to have fate play into her hands. Now, listen, Elmer Quayle. Follow me. The record, as you've made it, stands like this: You courted this girl; you promised to marry her; you gave her a ring. You showered her with money, gifts, attention. Then suddenly you jilt her. She may have jilted you at first, but the record shows you jilted her. One of your strong reasons for so doing is that she dissipates, smokes cigarettes, drinks cocktails now and then——"

"Now and always," returned Elmer Quayle earnestly; "I'm telling you the truth."

"Nobody ever drinks cocktails more than now and then—before a jury," went on the prosecutor. "And beside the cigarettes and drinks she goes to dances all the time. Good. She'll admit most of these charges, if she's wise. They are probably susceptible of proof. Grindstone will set her straight on that. What does it amount to, Elmer Quayle? Over in New York there are mothers, grandmothers—staid, respectable women with large families—smoking cigarettes, drinking cocktails, dancing every night. River City is a city—it's not so far away from the Borough of Manhattan. Hundreds of River City girls get married every year—a whole lot of 'em have smoked cigarettes, drunk cocktails, gone to dances every night. Ten chances to one there'll be three men on your jury who met their wives at a public dancing place. That's what dancing's for. These wives of theirs are bringing up their children. How are you going to prove that Zelda Lindquist is any different from these girls?"

"I know she is," said Elmer Quayle.

"What else do you know about this girl?" queried Sam Oliver.

"Nothing," said the athlete; "neither does anybody else. She came here from Australia five years ago, she says—she and her brother Joe. They lived first in New York—then here. That's all I ever knew."

Sam Oliver leaned back in his chair and thought about it hard. "It's bad enough," he said at length, "and you must understand just how bad it is. This is Elmer Quayle's town—and Elmer is a hero. The children of the city place at Elmer's feet twenty-five thousand dollars to do with as he will. A sacred tribute. For him to do with as he will. This woman comes along—this strange woman. They've never even heard of her before. She sets her velvet claws upon this pile and takes it for her own. Twenty-five thousand dollars, raised for Elmer Quayle—presented to him by kids with glowing eyes, with hero worship in their hearts. And then he hands it over to a woman of this type."

"But she hasn't got the money yet!" cried Peggy Warner.

"Now, you're talking," said the prosecutor. "No more post-mortems. We'll build up now instead of tearing down. Let everybody help."

"I'll help," nodded Peggy Warner. "This case must be settled, and settled right away."

"How much money have you got?" queried Sam Oliver.

"Twenty-five thousand dollars," responded Elmer Quayle forlornly, "and not a dollar more."

"I have two thousand dollars of my own!" cried Peggy Warner eagerly.

Sam Oliver thought it over carefully. He didn't like it, but, after all, it was one way out. "Bring in your two thousand," he said to Peggy Warner, against the protests of Elmer Quayle, "and I'll go see Eleazer Grindstone right away."

He sat up that night till midnight preparing an answer that would put out the eye of any ordinary antagonist. Next day he took his answer in to Eleazer Grindstone, handed him a copy, and laid two thousand dollars on Eleazer Grindstone's desk.

"Two thousand dollars," nodded Sam Oliver to Grindstone, "if your woman quits right now. Destroy these papers. Squelch the whole thing—strangle it in its birth. That means a thousand to you, Grindstone—and a thousand more to her. A thousand for a few hours' work. That's fair."

Grindstone picked up the answer and read it carefully. It was a formidable document, but Grindstone merely chuckled as he read it.

"Not a farthing less than twenty-five," said Grindstone. Next day the storm broke—the fight was on. Next day, too, Eleazer Grindstone sent for Zelda Lindquist. And Zelda Lindquist came.

"Now, young woman," he nodded to her, "I've sent for you to find out what you are doing with yourself."

The beauty tossed her head. "I am doing as I please," she answered.

"Exactly," nodded Grindstone; "I supposed so. Ten years from now you'll look back and wonder at your recklessness. You've been doing as you please too much. Your picture, lady, will be in all the evening papers. And from now on you'll do as you don't please.

"Keep under cover, don't be seen. Don't smoke in public, don't dance in public, don't drink in public. Don't be seen. Not here, at any rate."

Sam Oliver, on his own part, spent two sleepless nights in an attempt to solve a problem that somehow, in the nature of things, would not work out. His would be a superhuman task—it was up to him to make a jury see this thing in the same way that he saw it, that Elmer Quayle and Peggy Warner saw it. The evidence was all against him as it stood—he must have superevidence to combat it. There was nobody to furnish him that superevidence, unless it was the woman in the case. Sam concentrated on the woman in the case. He had her reckoned up, carefully shadowed. He had her past, so far as it was known, investigated. And all without result. The woman had no record—she was an adventuress without a past. But she was an adventuress, and Sam Oliver knew her for the thing she was. He must trim Grindstone in this case, and with legal evidence. The more he thought about it the more he felt that somehow, in the showdown, the woman in the case would yield that evidence. She must be made to give it up. At two o'clock in the morning of his second sleepless night Sam Oliver started in at the beginning of things. He called to mind the first time he had ever seen this woman, called to mind every impression he had recorded as he watched her that day from his vantage point on the top step of the city hall. He made that whole scene live over in his mind—flashed it on the screen; picked it to pieces, detail by detail. He saw that pile of currency again, noted greedy eyes that lusted for it. And then——

Then, at half past two that morning, he chuckled to himself. Five minutes later he was fast asleep. Fast asleep, with all his questions answered. Fast asleep over a problem that suddenly had solved itself.

At eight o'clock that morning he reached his private office. Elmer Quayle and the little Warner girl were waiting for him.

"Now, then," said Sam Oliver curtly, "suppose you show me the letter that you received from Rossiter F. Jones, the stock broker."

"Oh," cried Elmer Quayle, "I know." He fumbled in his pocket. He produced a business envelope and handed it to the prosecutor. Then he stared at Sam. "How did you know," cried Elmer Quayle, "that this Rossiter F. Jones had written me a letter?"

"I know," smiled Sam Oliver, "because, like you, Rossiter F. Jones is a prolific letter writer. Let's see now what he wrote you, Elmer Quayle."

"It's a good letter, anyway," said Elmer Quayle.

It was. It was a letter a week old. It congratulated Elmer Quayle warmly on his heroism—it set forth in plain and honest but well rounded phrases with what pride Rossiter F. Jones of River City contemplated that self-sacrificial act. The letter did not stop there. It went further, to remind Elmer Quayle that, though there were no strings tied to the twenty-five thousand dollars that he had in hand, yet, after all, there was a trust imposed upon him to make the money do the best it could. That meant investment—carefully considered. Not wildcat speculation—not that. Investment in solid security. The letter was a caution. Rossiter F. Jones warned Elmer Quayle against most oil stocks, new and cheap industrials, and fly-by-night mining enterprises. He warned him particularly against brokers who offered him big dividends and swift returns.

"Mr. Jones says," smiled Sam Oliver, "that no man should expect more than fifteen per cent in dividends upon any safe investment. He knows of one particularly safe investment that is yielding that much income. He advises you to waste no time investigating Papakating common. So far so good. Elmer, have you ever met this man?"

"I've seen him," nodded Elmer Quayle, "and I know his offices—second floor of his building on Second street downtown."

"His building?" echoed Sam Oliver.

"The Jones building," nodded Elmer Quayle.

"The Jones building," conceded the prosecutor, "but not his. There is at least one other Jones in River City. Rossiter F. is a tenant, not a landlord."

"Don't you think?" queried Peggy Warner innocently, "that fifteen per cent is a rather small return?"

"I think," said Sam Oliver, "that his letter contains some excellent advice—which is, to keep away from sharks. Suppose you write this Rossiter F. Jones and find out all you can about his Papakating common."

"I'll write him right away," said Elmer Quayle.

"When you get his answer, come to me," said Sam.

One week later, in the evening, Prosecutor Sam Oliver made his way to the bachelor apartment of Rossiter F. Jones in the Guernsey Arms in River City. He was expected. He had advised Rossiter F. Jones that afternoon of his projected visit. Rossiter welcomed him with an apprehensive eye.

Sam Oliver, at the other's invitation, slumped into a chair and took one of Rossiter's cigars. "I was going to call upon you at your office, Mr. Jones," he said, "but I was afraid the advent of the prosecutor there in broad daylight might make a stir."

"Well, it might," smiled the other man, with a nervous twitch of his mouth.

"I have cleaned so many eminently reputable brokers out of River City," went on Sam reminiscently, "that I can't saunter into anybody's office to take a legitimate little flyer on the Street without ruining that man's reputation."

"Right you are," said Rossiter F. Jones.

"I'm here on business," went on Sam. "I have a client with real money. He wants to put up his twenty-five thousand dollars on Papakating common."

"Who's your cleint?" queried Jones doubtfully.

"A young man of the name of Elmer Quayle," said Sam.

Rossiter F. Jones nervously flicked the ashes from his cigar. "I've been reading all about him in the paper," he returned. "As you say, he's got twenty-five thousand dollars now. But this woman, Zelda Lindquist—he's not liable to have that money long."

"True," mused Sam Oliver; "he's fair game. If Zelda Lindquist doesn't get it, somebody else will."

"Exactly," nodded Rossiter F. Jones. He smiled, almost banteringly. "Why not do her out of it?" he suggested humorously. "Why not let somebody else get the money first?"

"Not a bad idea," said Sam dryly. He thrust his hand in his breast pocket and drew forth three sheets of paper. "Copies of the letters, Jones, that you sent Elmer Quayle," he said.

Jones stared at him. "Look here," demanded Jones, "are you here in your official capacity as county prosecutor?"

"Nothing but," said Sam Oliver.

"What's the matter with these letters?" demanded Rossiter F. Jones.

"Papakating common is the matter with the letters," said the prosecutor.

"What's the matter with Papakating common?" demanded Jones.

"Dividends," said Sam Oliver.

"She's a fifteen per cent stock and she's proved herself," retorted Jones. "She's been paying dividends for one whole year."

"Out of principal," nodded Sam Oliver.

"Prove it," retorted Rossiter F. Jones.

Sam Oliver held up his hand. "Ah," he nodded, "now we're getting down to cases. Now you're talking sense. I can't prove it."

"I thought so," returned Jones.

"I can't prove it," went on Sam Oliver, "without spending, maybe, ten thousand dollars of the county's money to get my proof. But I know that what I say is true—I have direct, conclusive information on the subject. I know that Papakating common never earned a dollar in its life. And I know that you know that, too."

"Prove it," persisted Jones.

"Do you want me to start in?" smiled Sam Oliver.

"I dare you to start in," said Jones.

"Settled," smiled Sam Oliver. "I hand these letters, with my information, to United States District Attorney Joline at nine o'clock tomorrow morning. That won't cost River county anything. But it's my way of starting in. Do you want me to begin?"

"No," said Rossiter F. Jones.

"Exactly," said Sam Oliver. "Proof or no proof, you know as well as I do that you're done if it leaks out that the federal authorities are interested in you. You're done in River City—after that you can't sell a single share of stock. If I begin, you end. That's clear. Now, listen to me, Jones. Crime in River county that I can prove—that I can indict and convict—that sort of crime doesn't worry me at all. It's the offenses that I can't prove that turn my hair gray. You have been selling Papakating common to the school teachers of this town—and it's paid them dividends, and they consider it the Bank of England. The whole town's gone crazy on Papakating common, and you know it. And this town is my town—and this thing is going to stop. River City is no place for undesirables. You're an undesirable—you've got to move on, or I'll know the reason why. My way of cleaning up my county is to clean it up—to sweep the rubbish out. Not very ethical, maybe, to foist you on to some other community, but I'm interested in my county and not in any other. You've got to go. If you don't go, I'll smash you good and proper, and you know it."

"Hell, I'll let go," said Jones. "I'm not stuck on your town, anyway. You've educated River City to the limit. I can hardly make a living here, I tell you those. How much time will you give me to get my house in order and clear out?"

Sam Oliver made a rapid calculation on a piece of paper. "Six months," he said, "provided you'll stop active trading in objectionable stocks right now."

The eye of Rossiter F. Jones brightened. "And that's all there is to it," he demanded.

Sam Oliver energetically shook his head.

"No," he returned, "that isn't all there is to it, not by a darned sight. There's a condition to fulfill."

"What's the condition?" queried Rossiter F. Jones, warily.

She looked at Bruce with a whimsical little smile.

"You must have been very uncomfortable behind those curtains," she said. "I believe you were just as frightened as I was."

She walked round the desk to the window.

"It was a good hiding place," she remarked, "but not much good as an observation post. Why! you could see nothing of the room. The curtains are much too thick!"

"Not a thing," Bruce agreed rather ruefully. "I thought you were the detective!"

He held out his hand to take his leave with a smile. He was a charming looking boy with a remarkably serene expression which went well with his close cropped golden hair.

Mary Trevert did not take his hand for an instant. Looking down at the point of her small black suede shoe she said shyly:

"Mr. Wright, you are a friend of Mr. Greve, aren't you?"

"Rather!" was the enthusiastic answer.

"Do you see him often?"

The boy's eyes narrowed suddenly. Was this a cross-examination?

"Oh, yes," he replied, "every now and then!"

Mary Trevert raised her eyes to his.

"Will you do something for me?" she said. "Tell Mr. Greve not to trust Manderton. He will know whom I mean. Tell him to be on his guard against that man. Say he means mischief. Tell him, above all things, to be careful. Make him go away . . . go abroad until this thing has blown over. . . ."

She spoke with intense earnestness, her dark eyes fixed on Bruce Wright's face.

"But promise me you won't say this comes from me! Do you understand? There are reasons, very strong reasons, for this. Will you promise?"

"Of course!"

She took Bruce's outstretched hand.

"I promise," he said.

"You mustn't go without tea," said the girl. "Besides," she glanced at a little platinum watch on her wrist—"there's not another train until six. There is no need for you to start yet. Besides, I don't like being left alone. Mother has one of her headaches and Horace and Dr. Romain have gone to Stevenish. Come up to my sitting room!"

She led the way out of the library, locking the door behind them, and together they went up to the Chinese boudoir where tea was laid on a low table before a bright fire. In the dainty room with its bright colors they seemed far removed from the tragedy which had darkened Harkings.

They had finished tea when a tap came at the door. Bude appeared. He cast a reproachful look at Bruce.

"Jay would be glad to have a word with you, Miss," he said.

The girl excused herself and left the room. She was absent for about ten minutes. When she returned she had a little furrow of perplexity between her brows. She walked over to the open fireplace and stood silent for an instant, her foot tapping the hearthrug.

"Mr. Wright," she said presently, "I'm going to tell you something that Jay has just told me. I want your advice. . . ."

The boy looked at her interrogatively. But he did not speak.

"I think this is rather important," the girl went on, "but I don't quite understand in what way it is. Jay tells me that Mr. Parrish had on his pistol a sort of steel fitting attached to the end . . . you know, the part you shoot out of. Mr. Parrish used to keep his automatic in a drawer in his dressing room and Jay has often seen it there with this attachment fitted on. Well, when Mr. Parrish was discovered in the library yesterday, this thing was no longer on the pistol. And Jay says it's not to be found! . . ."

"That's rather strange!" commented Bruce. "But what was this steel contraption for, do you know? Was it a patent sight or something?"

"Jay doesn't know," answered the girl.

"Would you mind if I spoke to Jay myself?" asked the young man.

In reply the girl touched the bell beside the fireplace. Bude answered the summons and was dispatched to find Jay. He appeared in due course, a tall, dark, sleek young man wearing a swallow-tail coat and striped trousers.

"How are you, Jay?" said Bruce affably.

"Very well, thank you, sir," replied the valet.

"Miss Trevert was telling me about this appliance which you say Mr. Parrish had on his automatic. Could you describe it to me?"

"Well, sir," answered the man rather haltingly, "it was a little sort of cup made of steel or gun-metal fitting closely over the barrel. . . ."

"And you don't know what it was for?"

"No, sir!"

"Was it a sight, do you think?"

"I can't say, I'm sure, sir!"

"You know what a sight looks like, I suppose. Was there a bead on it, or anything like that?"

"I can't say I'm sure, sir. I never gave any particular heed to it. I used to see the automatic lying in the drawer of the wardrobe in Mr. Parrish's room in a wash-leather case. I noticed this steel appliance, sir, because the case wouldn't shut over the pistol with it on, and the butt used to stick out."

"When did you last notice Mr. Parrish's automatic?"

"It would be Thursday or Friday, sir. I went to that drawer to get Mr. Parrish an old stock to go riding in, as some new ones he had bought were stiff and hurt him."

"And this steel cup was on the pistol then?"

"O, yes, sir!"

"And you say it was not on the pistol when Mr. Parrish' body was found?"

"No, sir!"

"Are you sure of this?"

"Yes, sir. I was one of the first in the room and I saw the pistol in Mr. Parrish's hand and there was no sign of the cup, sir. So I've had a good look among his things and I can't find it anywhere!"

Bruce Wright pondered a minute.

"Try and think, Jay," he said, "if you can't remember anything more about this steel cup, as you call it. Where did Mr. Parrish buy it?"

"Can't say, I'm sure, sir. He had it before ever I took service with him!"

Jay put his hand to his forehead for an instant.

"Now I come to think of it," he said, "there was the name of the shop or the maker on it, stamped on the steel. 'Maxim,' that was the name, now I put my mind back, with a number. . . ."

"Maxim?" echoed Bruce Wright. "Did you say Maxim?"

"Yes, sir! That was the name!" replied the valet impassively.

"By Jove!" said the boy half to himself. Then he said aloud to Jay:

"Did you tell the police about this?"

Jay looked somewhat uncomfortable.

"No, sir!"

"Why not?"

Jay looked at Mary Trevert.

"Well, sir, I thought perhaps I'd better tell Miss Trevert first. Bude thought so, too. That there Manderton has made so much unpleasantness in the house with his prying ways that I said to myself, sir. . . ."

Bruce Wright looked at Mary.

"Would you mind if I asked Jay not to say anything about this to anybody just for the present?" he asked.

"You hear what Mr. Wright says, Jay," said Mary. "I don't want you to say anything about this matter just yet. Do you understand?"

"Yes, Miss. Will that be all, Miss?"

"Yes, thank you, Jay."

"Thanks very much, Jay," said the boy. "This may be important. Mum's the word, though!"

"I quite understand, sir," answered the valet and left the room.

Hardly had the door closed on him than the girl turned eagerly to Bruce.

"It is important?" she asked.

"It may be," was the guarded reply.

"Don't leave me in the dark like this," the girl pleaded. "This horrible affair goes on growing and growing and at every step it seems more bewildering . . . more ghastly. Tell me where it is leading, Mr. Wright! I can't stand the suspense much more!"

Her voice broke and she turned her face away.

"You must be brave, Miss Trevert," said the boy, putting his hand on her shoulder. "Don't ask me to tell you more now. Your friends are working to get at the truth. . . ."

"The truth!" cried the girl, "God knows where the truth will lead us!"

Bruce Wright hesitated a moment.

"I don't think you have any need to fear the truth!" he said presently.

The girl took her handkerchief from her face and looked at him with brimming eyes.

"You know more than you let me think you did," she said brokenly. "But you are a friend of mine, aren't you?"

"Yes," said Bruce, and added boldly:

"And of his, too!"

She did not speak again but gave him her hand. He clasped it and went out hurriedly to catch his train back to London.

That faithful servitor of Fleet Street, the Law Courts clock, had just finished striking seven. It boomed out the hour, stroke by stroke, solemnly, inexorably, like a grim old judge summing up and driving home, point by point, an irrefutable charge. The heavy strokes broke in upon the fitful doze into which Robin Greve, stretched out in an armchair in his living room, had dropped.

He roused up with a start. There was the click of a key in the lock of his front door. Bruce Wright burst into the room.

The boy shut the door quickly and locked it. He was rather pale and seemed perturbed. On seeing Robin he jerked his head in the direction of the courtyard.

"I suppose you know they're still outside?" he said.

Robin nodded nonchalantly.

"There are three of them now," the boy went on, "Robin, I don't like it. Something's going to happen. You'll want to mind yourself. . . if it's not too late already!"

He stepped across to the window and bending down peered cautiously round the curtain.

Robin Greve laughed.

"Bah!" he said, "they can't touch me!"

"You're wrong," Bruce retorted without changing his position. "They can and they will. Don't think Manderton is a fool, Robin. He means mischief. . . ."

Robin raised his eyebrows.

"Does he?" he said. "Now I wonder who told you that. . . ."

"Friends of yours at Harkings asked me to warn you . . ." began Bruce awkwardly.

"My friends are scarcely in the majority there," retorted Robin. "Whom do you mean exactly?"

But the boy ignored the question.

"Three men watching the house!" he exclaimed, "don't you think this looks as though Manderton meant business?"

He returned to his post of observation at the curtain.

Robin laughed cynically.

"Manderton doesn't worry me any," he said cheerfully. "The man's the victim of an idée fixe. He believes Parrish killed himself just as firmly as he believes that I frightened or bullied Parrish into doing it. . . ."

"Don't be too sure about that, Robin," said the boy, dropping the curtain and coming back to Robin's chair. "He may want you to think that. But how can we tell how much he knows?"

Robin flicked the ash off his cigarette disdainfully.

"These promoted policemen make me tired," he said.

Bruce Wright shook his head quickly with a little gesture of exasperation.

"You don't understand," he said. "There's fresh evidence. . . ."

Robin Greve looked up with real interest in his eyes. His bantering manner had vanished.

"You've got that letter?" he asked eagerly.

Bruce shook his head.

"No, not that," he said. Then learning forward he added in a low voice:

"Have you ever heard of the Maxim silencer?"

"I believe I have, vaguely," replied Robin. "Isn't it something to do with a motor engine?"

"No," said Bruce. "It's an extraordinary invention which absolutely suppresses the noise of the discharge of a gun."

Robin shot a quick glance at the speaker.

"Go on," he said.

"It's a marvelous thing, really," the boy continued, warming to his theme. "A man at Havre had one when I was at the base there, during the war. It's a little cup-shaped steel fitting that goes over the barrel. You can fire a rifle fitted with one of these silences in a small room and it makes no more noise than a fairly loud sneeze. . . ."

"Ah!"

Robin was listening intently now.

"Parrish had a Maxim silencer," Bruce went on, impressively.

"Parrish had?"

"It was fitted on his automatic pistol, the one he had in his hand when they found him. . . ."

"There was no attachment of any kind on the gun Parrish was holding when he was discovered yesterday afternoon," declared Robin, positively. "I can vouch for that. I was there almost immediately after they found him. And if there had been anything of the kind Horace Trevert would certainly have mentioned it. . . ."

"I know. Jay, who came in soon after you, was surprised to see that the silencer was not on the pistol. And he made a point of looking for it. . . ."

"But how do you know that Parrish had it on the pistol?"

"Well, we don't know for certain. But we do know that it was permanently fitted to his automatic. Jay has often seen it. And if Parrish did remove it he didn't leave it lying about anywhere. Jay has looked all through his things without finding it. . . ."

"When did Jay see it last?"

"On Thursday!"

"But are you sure that this is the same pistol as the one which Jay has been in the habit of seeing?"

"Jay is absolutely sure. He says that Parrish only had the one automatic, which he always kept in the same drawer in his dressing room. . . ."

Robin was silent for a moment.

Very deliberately he filled his pipe, lit it, and drew until it burned comfortably. Then he said slowly:

"This means that Hartley Parrish was murdered, Bruce, old man. All through I've been puzzling my mind to reconcile the unquestionable circumstance that two bullets were fired—I told you of the bullet mark I found on the upright in the rosary—with the undoubted fact that only one report was heard. We can therefore presume either that Hartley Parrish first fired one shot from his pistol with the silencer fitted and then removed the silencer and fired another shot without it, thereby killing himself, or that the second shot was fired by the person whose interest it was to get rid of the silencer. There is no possible or plausible reason why Parrish should have fired first one shot with the silencer and then one without. Therefore, I find myself irresistibly compelled to the conclusion that the shot heard by Mary Trevert was fired by the person who killed Parrish. Do I make myself clear?"

"Perfectly," answered Bruce.

"Now, then," the barrister proceeded, thoughtfully puffing at his pipe, "one weak point about my deductions is that they all hang on the question as to whether, at the time of the tragedy, Parrish actually had the silencer on his pistol or not. That is really the acid test of Manderton's suicide theory. You said, I think, that a rifle fired with the silencer attachment makes no more noise than the sound of a loud sneeze."

"That's right," agreed Bruce, "a sort of harsh, spluttering noise. Not so loud, either, Robin. Ph—t-t-t! Like that!"

"Loud enough to be heard through a door, would you say?"

"O, I think so!"

Robin thought intently for a moment.

"Then Mary is the only one who can put us right on that point. Assuming that two shots were fired—and that bullet mark in the rosary is, I think, conclusive on that head—and knowing that she heard the loud report of the one, presumably, if Parrish had the silencer on his automatic Mary must have heard the muffled report of the other. What it comes to is this, Mary heard the shot fired that killed Parrish. Did she hear the shot he fired at his murderer?"

"By Gad!" exclaimed Bruce Wright, impressively, "I believe you've got it, Robin! Parrish fired at somebody at the window—a silent shot—and the other fellow fired back the shot that Mary Trevert heard, the shot that killed Parish. Isn't that the way you figure it out?"

"Not so fast, young man," remarked Robin. "Let's first find out whether Mary actually heard the muffled shot and, if so, when . . . before or after the loud report."

He glanced across at the window and then at Bruce.

"I suppose this discovery about the silencer is responsible for the deputation waiting in the courtyard," he said, drily.

"The police don't know about it yet," replied Bruce. "At least, they didn't when I left."

Robin shook his head dubiously.

"If the servants know it, Manderton will worm it out of them. Hasn't he cross-examined Jay?"

"Yes," said Bruce. "But he got nothing out of him about this. Manderton seems to have put everybody's back up. He gets nothing out of the servants. . . ."

"If Parrish had had this silencer for some time, you may be sure that other people know about it. These silencers must be pretty rare in England. You see, an average person like myself didn't know what it was. By the way, another point which we haven't yet cleared up is this: Supposing we are right in believing Parrish to have been murdered, how do you explain the fact that the bullet removed from his body fitted his pistol?"

"That's a puzzler, I must say!" said Bruce.

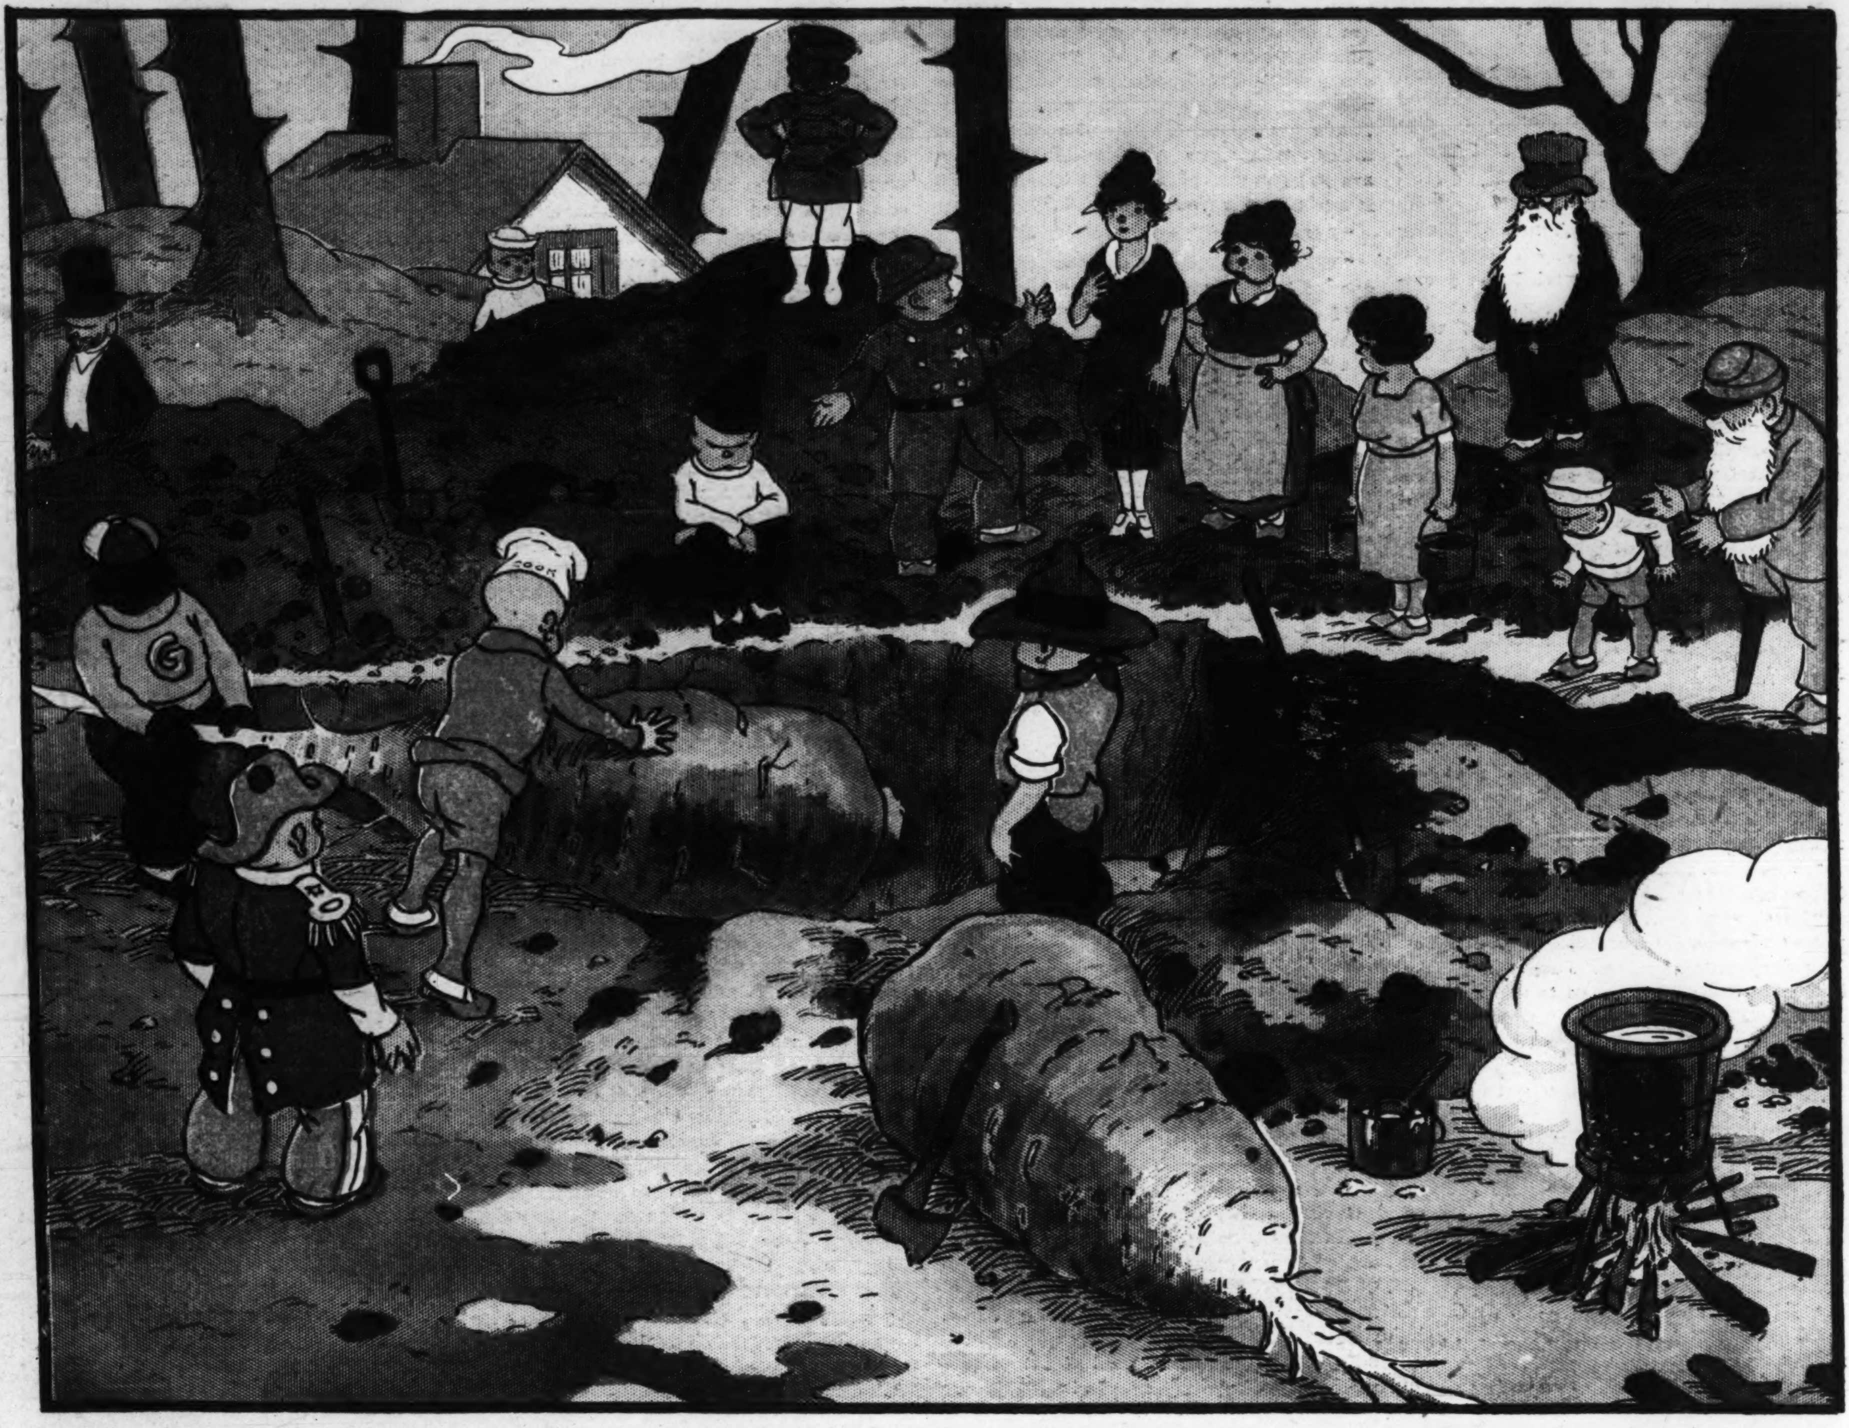
THE TEENIE WEENIES

THE TRAVELERS RETURN TO SHOEHURST AND TACKLE A BIG TASK.

BY WM. DONAHEY.



IT had been rather lonesome for the few Teenie Weenies who had stayed at home while the rest of the little folks were touring.

Tess and Buddy, however, seemed to mind it less, for, being newly married, they were much interested in each other's company.

Grandpa sat on the tiny porch of the shoe house one evening, and although the weather was quite warm the little old fellow was bundled up in his heavy overcoat, muffler and woolen mittens.

"I wish the folks would come home," he muttered to himself. "There's no good in this trapsin' around over the country like a troupe of gypsies."

It seemed almost as though the good fairies had heard the old man's wish, for the next minute the two tiny trucks came honking up the garden walk towards the shoe house.

Grandpa jumped to his feet and almost tumbled off the steps in his hurry to greet the returning Teenie Weenies.

The old fellow hugged each Teenie Weenie, and great tears of happiness rolled down over his long white beard.

Tess and Buddy came running over to the shoe house, and for some time there was much chattering of tiny voices.

There was one piece of news which made the Teenie Weenies feel badly—their old friend the Rhyming Rabbit was quite sick. The old rabbit was so crippled up with the rheumatism he could hardly get out to find his food, and Tess and Buddy had carried food over to his hole almost every day.

"I don't know what's going to become of the poor old fellow when everything is covered up with snow this winter," said Buddy.

"I've been thinkin' we might store up a few carrots for him," suggested Grandpa. "We've got more in our garden than we'll need."

"We haven't enough room in the storehouse to take care of our own food," cried the Cook. "Where would we put 'em?"

"That's easy," said the Old Soldier. "We can dig a big hole in the ground, line it with leaves and bury all the carrots we care to. They'll keep mighty near all winter that way."

The Doctor and the General went over immediately to see the sick rabbit, while the rest of the little folks unloaded the two trucks.

The little people set to work the next day to bury carrots for the sick rabbit, and everybody worked with a will, for although they were Teenie Weenie folks they had mighty big, kind hearts.

A great hole twenty Teenie Weenie feet deep, twenty-four Teenie Weenie feet long, and sixteen Teenie Weenie feet wide had to be dug in the ground. It took the little men nearly a week to dig the hole, while some of the little fellows began taking the carrots out of the ground where they grew.

The huge carrots grew so deep in the ground it was quite a task to get them out. First the carrot tops had to be cut away with axes and then the earth had to be dug away with picks and shovels. Sometimes the little men had to dig down ten or twelve Teenie Weenie feet in order to loosen the roots.

When the roots were loose the Teenie Weenies tied ropes around the carrot top and with the aid of pulleys they pulled the great vegetable out with one of the trucks.

Two carrots were then loaded into a truck, for two carrots were all one of the trucks could carry, and then they were hauled over to the hole near the shoe house.

When the ends of the carrot roots and the place where the tops had been cut off were covered with hot paraffine, they were rolled into the hole.

"What do you put the paraffine on the carrots for?" asked the curious Dunce.

"To keep the air out," answered the Policeman. "Wherever a piece of the carrot skin is cut the air gets in and then the carrot begins to rot, so the paraffine keeps the air out and preserves the vegetable."

When the hole was nearly full of carrots dry leaves were placed over the vegetables and then covered over with a mound of earth.

It took the Teenie Weenies over a week to do the work, and when the task was done eleven huge carrots were stored away.

(Note: A Teenie Weenie foot is half an inch in our measurement.)

The YELLOW STREAK

by Valentine Williams

Bruce Wright jerked his head in the direction of the courtyard. "There are three of them now," he said. "Something's going to happen. You'll want to mind yourself, if it's not too late already."

SYNOPSIS.

Hartley Parrish's guests at Harkings, his country home, include Lady Margaret Trevert, her daughter Mary and son Horace, and Robin Greve. When Mary, in answer to Robin's proposal, tells him she is engaged to Parrish and admits mercenary motives, Greve leaves in anger. Mary hears a shot, and Parrish is found dead in his library, with his revolver in his hand. Suspicion is directed toward Greve as a factor in the apparent suicide when Bude, the butler, tells of hearing angry voices. Robin denies all, and voices the belief Parrish was murdered. He finds a mysterious scrap of blue paper beside the body, and later a bullet mark on an upright in the rose garden. He leaves Harkings at Mary's request, made through her brother Horace. Detective Manderton, in charge of the case, tells Mary the verdict will be suicide, but she can see he is not satisfied with this. Jeekes, Parrish's secretary, informs Mary of a French woman in Parrish's life. While they are talking a door is found ajar, as though there had been an eavesdropper. Robin is visited by Bruce Wright, formerly employed by Parrish, who tells of the latter's career in South Africa—of one Victor Marbran, an enemy, and of certain blue letters that roused Parrish's fears. Robin sends Wright to Harkings to get the blue letter that arrived just before Parrish's death. Wright is about to search Parrish's desk when some one enters the library, and he hides. Peering out, he sees it is Mary Trevert. He confronts her.

SEVENTH INSTALLMENT.

The Maxim Silencer.

"OH!" cried the girl, "you frightened me! You frightened me! What do you want here . . . in this horrible room?"

She was trembling. One slim hand plucked nervously at her dress. Her breath came and went quickly.

"I saw the curtain move. I thought it was the wind at first. But then I saw the outline of your fingers. And I imagined it was he . . . come back . . ."

"Miss Trevert," said the boy, abashed. "I must have frightened you terribly. I had no idea it was you!"

"But why are you hiding here? How did you get in? What do you want in this house?"

She spoke quickly, nervously. Some papers she held in her hand shook with her emotion. Bruce Wright stepped to the desk and turned the bulb of the reading lamp down into its normal position.

"I must apologize most sincerely for the fright I gave you," he said. "But, believe me, Miss Trevert, I had no idea that anybody could gain access to this room. I climbed in through the window. Bude told me that the police had taken away the key."

The girl made an impatient gesture.

"But why have you come here?" she said. "What do you want?"

The boy measured her with a narrow glance. He was young but he was shrewd. He saw her frank eyes, her candid, open mien, and he took a rapid decision.

"I think I have come," he answered slowly, "for the same purpose as yourself!"

And he looked at the papers in her hand.

"I used to be Mr. Parrish's secretary, you know," he said.

The girl sighed—a little fluttering sigh—and looked earnestly at him.

"I remember," she said. "Hartley liked you. He was sorry that he sent you away. He often spoke of you to me. But why have you come back? What do you mean by saying you have come for the same purpose as myself?"

Bruce Wright looked at the array of letter trays. The marble paperweight had been displaced. The tray in which it had lain was empty. He looked at the sheaf of papers in the girl's hand.

"I wanted to see," he replied, "whether there was anything here . . . on his desk . . . which would explain the mystery of his death . . ."

The girl spread out the papers in her hand on the big blotter.

She laid the papers out in a row and leaned forward, her white arms resting on the desk. From the other side of the desk the boy leaned eagerly forward and scanned the line of papers.

At the first glimpse his face fell. The girl, eying him closely, marked the change which came over his features.

There were seven papers of various kinds, both printed and written, and they were all on white paper.

The boy shook his head and swept the papers together into a heap.

"It's not there?" queried the girl eagerly.

"No!" said Bruce absent-mindedly, glancing round the desk.

"What isn't?" flashed back the girl.

Bruce Wright felt his face redden with vexation. What sort of a confidential emissary was he to fall into a simple trap like this?

The girl smiled rather wanly.

"Now I know what you meant by saying you had come for the same purpose as myself," she said. "I suppose we both thought we might find something, a letter, perhaps, which would explain why Mr. Parrish did this dreadful thing, something to relieve the awful uncertainty about . . . about his motive. Well, I've searched the desk . . . and there's nothing! Nothing but just these prospectuses and receipts which were in the letter tray here. They must have come by the post yesterday morning. And there's nothing of any importance in the drawers . . . only household receipts and the wages book and a few odd things like that. You can see for yourself. . . ."

The lower part of the desk consisted of three drawers flanked on either side by cupboards. Mary Trevert pulled out the drawers and opened the cupboards. Two of the drawers were entirely empty and one of the cubboards contained nothing but a stack of cigar boxes. One drawer held various papers appertaining to the house. There was no sign of any letter written on the slatey-blue paper.

The boy looked very hard at Mary.

"You say there was nothing in the letter tray but these papers here?" he asked.

"Nothing but these," replied the girl.

"You didn't notice any official looking letter on bluish paper?" he ventured to ask.

"No," answered the girl. "I found nothing but these."

The boy thought for a moment.

"Do you know," he asked, "whether the police or anybody have been through the desk?"

"I don't know at all," said Mary, smoothing back a lock of hair from her temple. "I daresay Mr. Jeekes had a look round, as he had a meeting with Mr. Parrish's lawyer in town this afternoon!"

She had lost all trace of her fright and was now quite calm and collected.

"Do you know for certain whether Mr. Jeekes was in here?" asked Bruce.

"Oh, yes. The first thing he did on arriving last night was to go to the library."

"I suppose Jeekes is coming back here tonight?"

No, she told him. Mr. Jeekes did not expect to return to Harkings until the inquest on Tuesday.

Bruce Wright picked up his hat.

"I must apologize again, Miss Trevert," he said, "for making such an unconventional entrance and giving you such a fright. But I felt I could not rest until I had investigated matters for myself. I would have presented myself in the ordinary way, but, as I told you, Bude told me the police had locked up the room and taken away the key."

Mary Trevert smiled forgivingly.

"So they did," she said. "But Jay, Mr. Parrish's man, you know, had another key. He brought it to me"

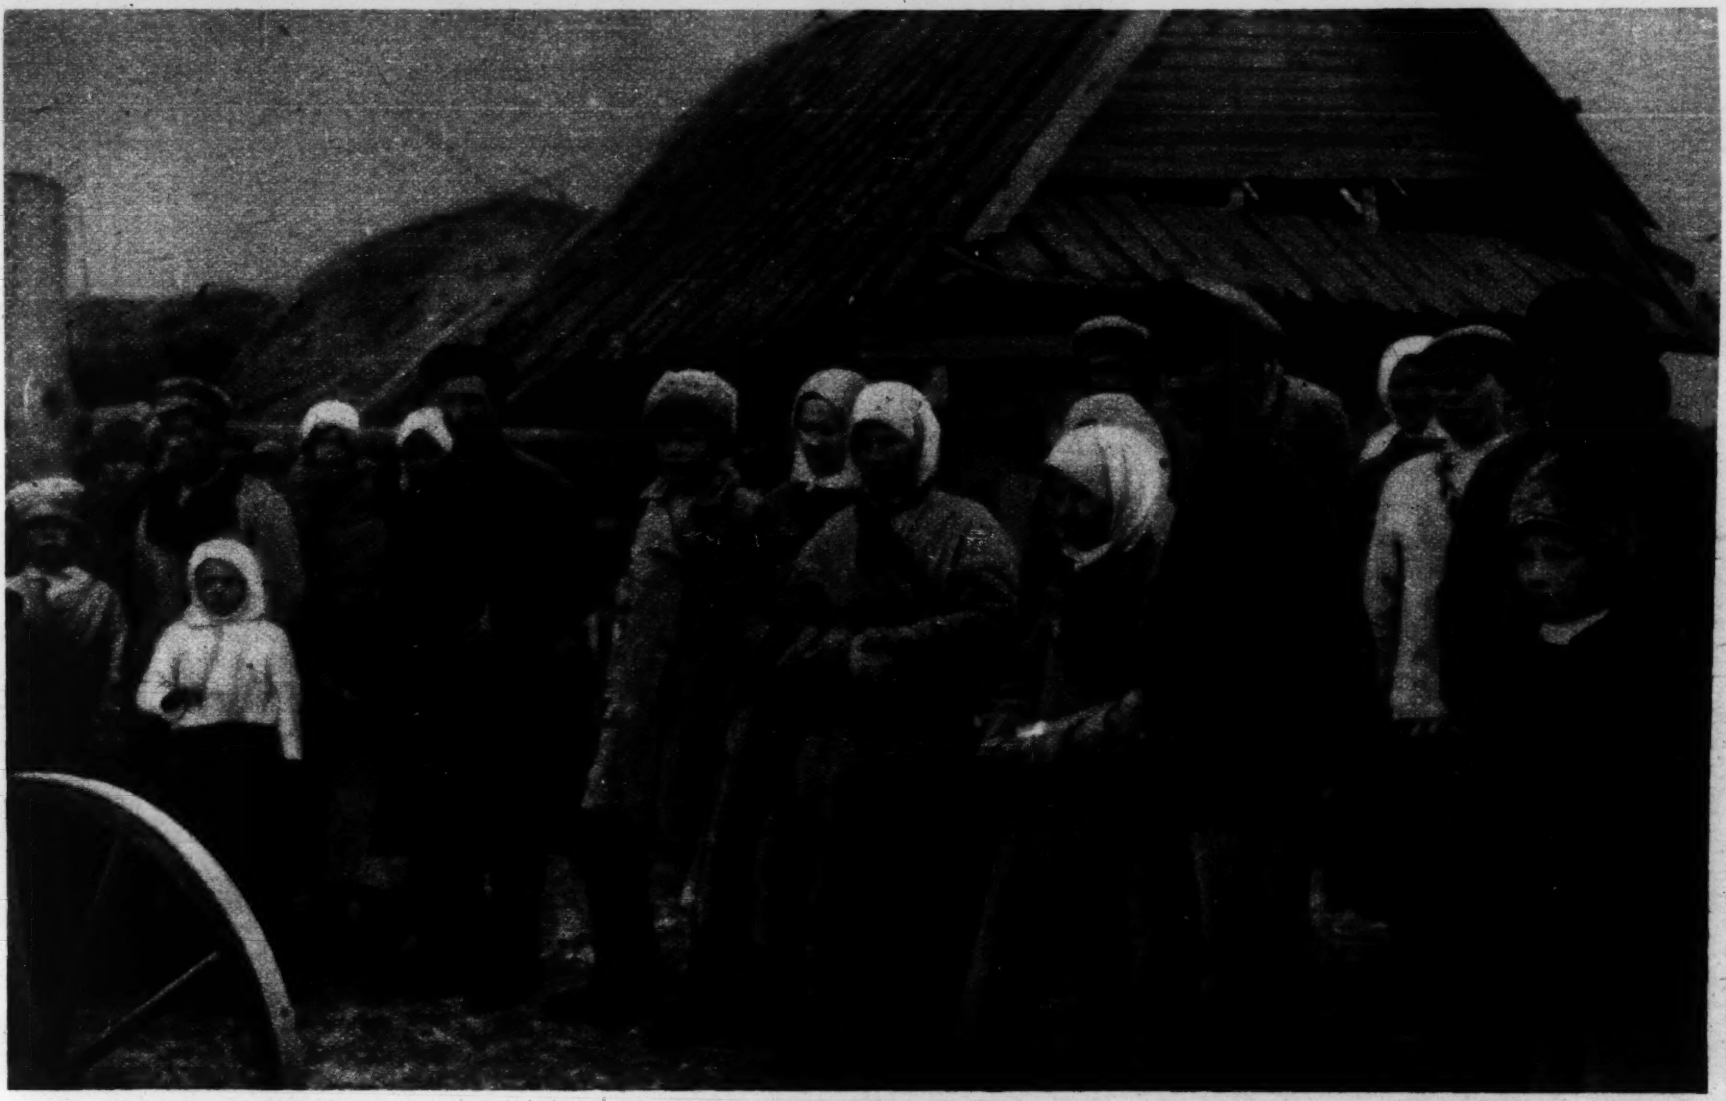
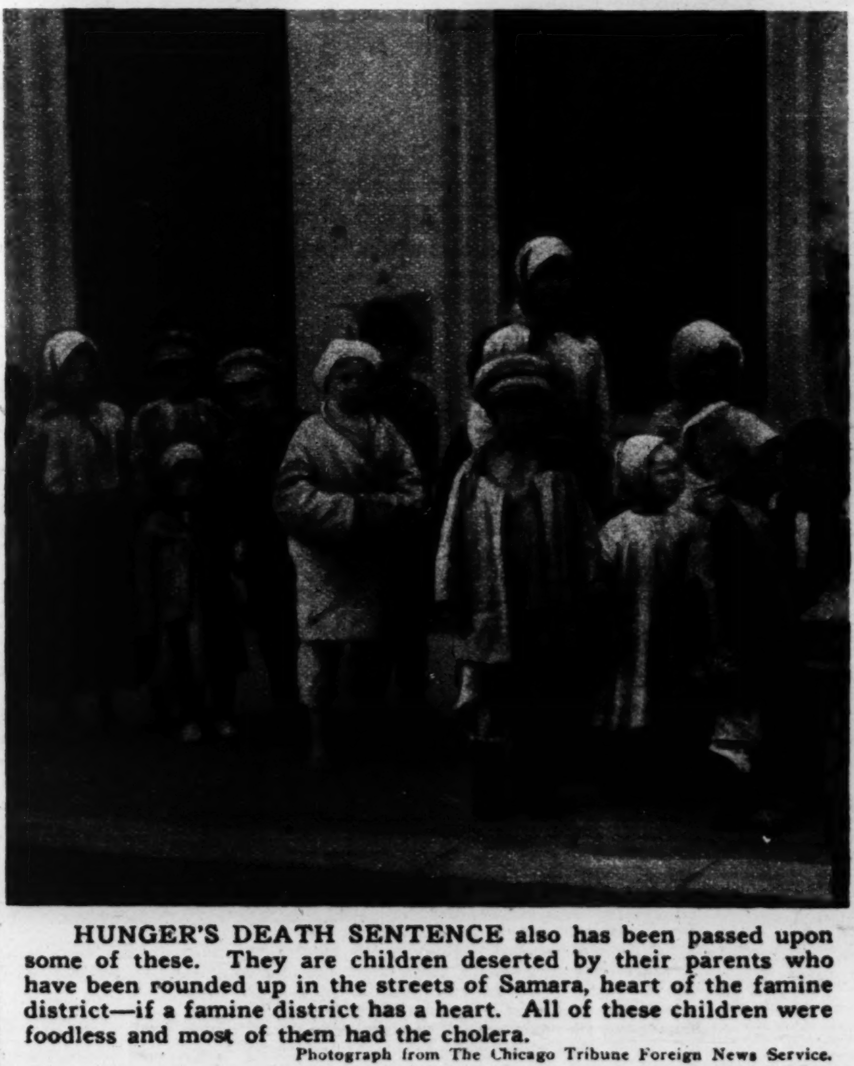
WHERE FAMINE STALKS MILLIONS

New Pictures from Russia, Land of the Homeless and the Hungry.

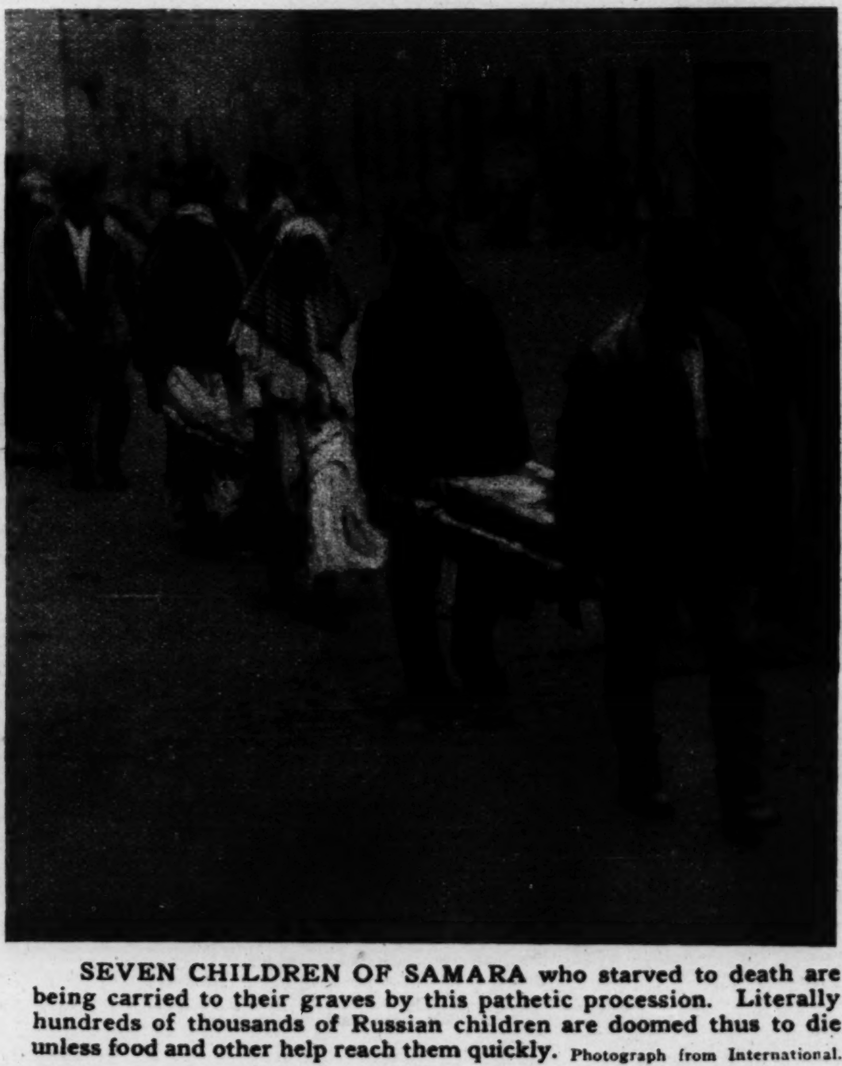


THEY ARE SLOWLY STARVING, these passive men, women, and children of a Russian village fifteen miles inland from the Volga. Not even childhood can smile any more. The group is typical of the grim submissiveness of the Russian peasant. In one village hundreds starved near a heap of grain reserved for seed and therefore considered sacred. Throughout a vast area such starving groups as this may be found. American relief is just beginning to reach the stricken zones. Photograph from The Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.



HUNGER'S DEATH SENTENCE also has been passed upon some of these. They are children deserted by their parents who have been rounded up in the streets of Samara, heart of the famine district—if a famine district has a heart. All of these children were foodless and most of them had the cholera.

Photograph from The Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.



SEVEN CHILDREN OF SAMARA who starved to death are being carried to their graves by this pathetic procession. Literally hundreds of thousands of Russian children are doomed thus to die unless food and other help reach them quickly. Photograph from International.

All through the evening—that tormenting thought hovered in the back of her mind

A YOUNG girl slipped away from the crowded floor of a ball-room. Unobserved, she crept into the deserted dressing-room, and sank down on one of the chairs in front of a mirror. The maid, noticing her dejected attitude, came forward with an offer of assistance.

"Can I take a stitch in your frock, Miss?" she asked.

But the girl shook her head. And, indeed, her dancing dress, a cloud of delicate lace and tulle, looked as if she had just stepped into it; not a frill was disarranged.

She leaned forward and studied herself for a moment in the mirror. Anxiously she began dabbing powder on her face. All at once a big tear rolled down her cheek.

It was her first big dance—and it was a failure.

MOST girls could have sympathized with her experience;—the dance was one she had looked forward to for weeks. Her dress was the prettiest she had ever worn. Her escort was the man she liked best. But one little thing had gone wrong — and this one thing had spoiled all the rest.

Every time she looked in the mirror she saw that her skin, which should have been smooth and flawless, looked neglected, unattractive. For days she had been struggling with it—but it simply would not come right.

All through the evening, what else could she think of but this one tormenting fact? The humiliation of it had taken away all her natural gayety and self-confidence—made her stiff, awkward, silent, when she should have been at her best.

REAL knowledge of the skin and its needs would save hundreds of girls and women from the worry and chagrin of an unattractive complexion.

Any girl, by giving her skin the right care, can keep it smooth, soft, flawlessly clear.

Your skin is changing every day

Your skin is constantly changing—each day old skin dies and new skin takes its place. By giving this new skin the special care it needs, you can make it smooth, clear, lovely in freshness and color.

It is to meet the every-day needs of different types of skin that the famous Woodbury treatments have been formulated.

Two of these famous treatments are reproduced on this page. Other complete treatments for all the commoner skin needs are given in the booklet wrapped around every cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap. By following the treatment recommended for your type of skin, you can not only free your skin from the faults that have been troubling you—you can keep it, day by day, in flawless condition.

Get a cake of Woodbury's today. Use it according to the directions given in the treatment booklet, and see what a marked improvement your skin will show within a week or ten days.

Woodbury's Facial Soap is on sale at all drug stores and toilet goods counters in the United States and Canada. A 25 cent cake lasts a month or six weeks for general cleansing use, including any of the special Woodbury treatments.

Write today for a complete set of the Woodbury skin preparations

For 25 cents we will send you a complete miniature set of the Woodbury skin preparations, containing:

A trial size cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap
A sample tube of the new Woodbury's Facial Cream
A sample tube of Woodbury's Cold Cream
A sample box of Woodbury's Facial Powder
Together with the treatment booklet, "A Skin You Love to Touch."

Send for this set today. Address The Andrew Jergens Co., Spring Grove Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio.

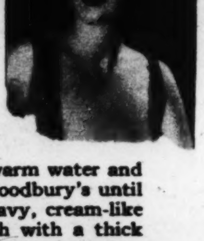
Two famous treatments for improving your skin

If you do not find here the treatment your skin needs, look for it in the booklet wrapped around each cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap.

Is your skin dull and sluggish? How you can rouse it

Just before retiring, wash your face and neck with plenty of Woodbury's Facial Soap and warm water. If your skin has been badly neglected, rub a generous lather thoroughly into the pores, using an upward and outward motion. Do this until the skin feels somewhat sensitive. Rinse well in warm water, then in cold. Whenever possible, rub your skin for thirty seconds with a piece of ice, and dry carefully.

To free your skin from blemishes—the right way



Each night just before retiring, wash your face with Woodbury's Facial Soap and warm water, finishing with a dash of cold water, and dry carefully. Now dip the tips of your fingers in warm water and rub them on the cake of Woodbury's until they are covered with a heavy, cream-like lather. Cover each blemish with a thick coat of this and leave it on for ten minutes. Rinse your face thoroughly, first with clear hot water, then with cold.

DO YOU REMEMBER WAY BACK WHEN Chicago looked like this? It was just before the great fire of fifty years ago. Notice the body of water just west of the railroad on the lake front, and the distinctness with which the river looms up. Sailing vessels in that day still apparently outnumbered the "sidewheeler" steamers.

Gentlemen: I have used one of your lamps in my practice for a long time. It has always done good work and is easily operated. Its marvelous effects on tumors, ulcers, cancers, sprains, burns, rheumatism, neuralgia, neuritis, etc., have caused me to use it on most of my patients.

I have frequently advised my patients to purchase lamps for their own use at home rather than use the dangerous drugs. It is easy, safe and true, with ordinary intelligence. Where pain is a prominent factor, the lamp never fails to allay it quickly. I would not be without one in my practice.

Yours very truly,

To stay youthful looking

—your skin needs two creams

For daytime use — the cream that will not reappear in a shine

You must protect your skin from wind, cold and dust, or it will protect itself by developing a tough, florid surface.

Wind whips the natural moisture out of the skin, drying it so that tiny scales appear. Cold makes it harsh and rough. Dust bores deep into the pores, dulling and blemishing the complexion and forming blackheads.

Always apply Pond's Vanishing Cream before you go out. It is based on an ingredient famous for its softening effect on the skin. The cream disappears at once, affording your skin an invisible protection. There is not a drop of oil in Pond's Vanishing Cream to reappear and make your face shiny. No matter how much you are out of doors, it will keep your skin soft and smooth.

At night — the cleansing cream made with oil

Guard against wrinkles by faithful use of Pond's Cold Cream at night. This nourishing cream contains just the amount of oil needed to supplement the natural oil—and natural oil is the skin's most successful opponent of wrinkles. Rub in Pond's Cold Cream where the lines are beginning to form, under and around the eyes, at the corners of the mouth, at the base of the nose, and under the chin. Too vigorous manipulation of the skin often increases instead of lessening wrinkles. Pond's has been made extremely light in texture so that with it only the gentlest stroking is necessary.

Start using these two creams today. They are both too delicate in texture to clog the pores and they will not encourage the growth of hair. In both jars and tubes at any drug or department store. The Pond's Extract Company, New York.

AGNES AYRES is the young woman who has obtained the much desired role of Diana in George Melford's production, "The Sheik." Rudolph Valentino is the hero of the story. You would imagine that a director might have selected a rather more positive and magnetic personality to represent the girl of the story. Well, maybe this is the sort of role Miss Ayres has needed to put a little pep and originality into her work. Here's hoping.

JOHNNY WALKER is a "black sheep." That is, he's the black sheep of "Over the Hill." He's the one who, you remember, though always up to trouble during childhood days, saves his poor old mother from the poorhouse later on.

Young Mr. Walker is 26 years old and was born in New York City. From college he went into vaudeville and from there to the screen, his first picture being "Greater Than Fame," with Selznick.

For the benefit of the ladies present be it said that this smiling gentleman is unmarried. Some whisper that he has considerable money. One thing you can bank on—his disposition's all right.

If I were a boy,
I'd long for a toy
That gallops and steers,
And has regular ears.

"We missed such fun when we were kids, Mother"

"IF Bronco were only larger, I'd go for a ride myself. I'd gallop back to boyhood and spend a day with the Indians and cow-punchers."

Lucky, happy Billy! The best daddy in town has brought him Toytown Bronco—the classiest toy in the world.

Bronco is the galloping, dappled-gray horse on rubber-tired wheels—artillery wheel in front, two disc wheels behind. He's easy to pedal and easy to steer. Safe and sound, with no pinchy places to tear clothes. Cowboy saddle adjusts to three heights.

Your little boy or girl will love Bronco. So will you. He's reasonably priced and needs no food or upkeep.

At most hardware, furniture and department stores. For smaller riders, Bronco has two little brothers without pedals, Buster Bronco and Bobby Bronco.

SPAIN'S WAR AGAINST the MOOR

Flower of Spanish youth departs for front; glimpse of desert warriors in revolt.

"GOOD-BY AND GOOD LUCK," shout the crowds in the great Santander railroad station as the Spanish troops entrain for the coast, there to take ship for Morocco to fight the insurgent Moors. Note the soldiers standing on top of the train, to the left. The scene is not greatly unlike some of recent memory in America. (Photograph from Underwood & Underwood.)

THESE DESERT WARRIORS are a portion of the Moroccan cavalry whose guerrilla warfare has given their Spanish masters so much trouble. They nearly scored a military success at the siege of Melilla, but were not quite strong enough to push it to a definite conclusion. As a result, what promised to be a major military operation developed into a running fight between trained Spanish soldiery and these fleet desert bands. Is your appetite uncertain—your digestion impaired?

Why the food we eat may fail to keep us fit

ONE single food element essential to health! We now know that many of our inefficiencies and failures are really due to lack of a health-maintaining element in food—the water-soluble vitamine. Scientists are agreed that without this one food factor we lose appetite and weight and fall off in health.

This is why thousands of men and women who are eating otherwise good and wholesome meals find their energy and vigor slipping—why many have little appetite and remain in a state of lowered vitality.

Today Fleischmann's Yeast is recommended as a corrective food for overcoming these difficulties, for Fleischmann's Yeast has been discovered to be a rich source of the essential vitamine we need throughout life.

Fleischmann's Yeast is a wholesome, fresh food, assimilated like any other food. Eat it at any time, 2 to 3 cakes a day. You will like its fresh, distinctive flavor and the clean taste it leaves in your mouth.

Have it on the table at home and try it as a sandwich filler or spread on crackers. Have it at your office and eat it at your desk. It is good in milk, and many like it just plain. If troubled with gas, dissolve it first in very hot water. This does not affect the efficiency of the yeast. Place a standing order with your grocer for Fleischmann's Yeast and get it fresh daily.

Send 4c in stamps for the booklet, "The New Importance of Yeast in Diet." So many inquiries are coming in daily for this booklet that it is necessary to make this nominal charge to cover cost of handling and mailing. Address THE FLEISCHMANN COMPANY, 701 Washington St., New York, N. Y.

Better digestion from eating Fleischmann's Yeast

Many who have become listless and fallen off in weight have regained a vigor and zest unknown for years by adding Fleischmann's Yeast to their daily diet.

Fleischmann's Yeast, a fresh, wholesome food, builds up appetite. It helps digest the increased food you eat. In addition, because of its freshness, it helps your body get rid of waste matter. Scientific tests have shown its great value in correcting a number of common ailments often due to wrong eating.

Beware of untested yeast preparations. The name Fleischmann is your protection and guarantee of uniform purity and strength.

What Will Tomorrow Bring?

Would you go with full powers and beauties into the coming years? Then, cherish well the powers and the beauties which are yours today. Guard jealously that portal of your body, the mouth. Beware of Pyorrhea.

In its effect upon the body, Pyorrhea is akin to Age. It depletes vitality, and weakens organs whose perfect functioning is essential to health. In its blight upon beauty, Pyorrhea is as merciless as Time.

Watch your gums. Pyorrhea begins with tenderness and bleeding of the gums. Then the gums recede, the teeth decay and loosen, or must be extracted to rid the system of the Pyorrhea germs which breed in little pockets about them. It is to these infecting germs which seep into the system through the gums that medical science has traced so many serious ills.

End your Pyorrhea troubles before they begin. Visit your dentist regularly for teeth and gum inspection, and start using Forhan's For the Gums today.

Forhan's For the Gums will prevent Pyorrhea—or check its progress—if used in time and used consistently. Ordinary dentifrices cannot do this. Forhan's will keep the gums firm and healthy, the teeth white and clean.

Brush Your Teeth With Forhan's—How to Use It

Use it twice daily, year in and year out. Wet your brush in cold water, place a half-inch of the refreshing, healing paste on it, then brush your teeth up and down. Use a rolling motion to clean the crevices. Brush the grinding and back surfaces of the teeth. Massage your gums with your Forhan-coated brush—gently at first until the gums harden, then more vigorously. If the gums are very tender, massage with the finger, instead of the brush. If gum-shrinkage has already set in, use Forhan's according to directions, and consult a dentist immediately for special treatment.

35c and 60c, in the U. S. and Canada. At all druggists.

CREPE GIVES WAY TO VARIED MATERIALS

by CORINNE LOWE

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—There is a great difference between the smart lunching place of today and that of last April. Then everything one saw was crepe. Today the lorgnette squad reports at first glance that the crepe-ing paralysis is at an end. Broadcloth, Kasha, duvetyn, and Poiret twill—these are what one finds at almost every table.

As a matter of fact, the New Yorker's return to town is always marked by codified apparel. She usually does it in a one piece frock—often a coat dress—of navy Poiret twill. With this she wears a smart little hat and a fur scarf. The latter is often one of those small sable things that look like a fond brown caterpillar. This year her hat is likely to be black with a touch of sapphire blue trimming.

The last brings a note of surprise. Fuchsia has been so much exploited that the sight of all this brilliant blue here in town is exactly like seeing Elsie Ferguson in a play which has been advertising Marjorie Rambeau. Yet, without any warning, here it is. Sapphire blue velvet evening gowns are encountered on every side; sapphire blue broods over our millinery; sapphire blue trims our dark dresses and suits. In the last connection one thinks immediately, by the way, of a three piece costume of black Kasha from Callot, in which the charming little loose coat is piped with the same brilliant blue satin which lines it.

Of course, there is no cause for an elegy in the changed bill. Most of us will get along much better with sapphire blue than with the trying fuchsia tints. And, of course, the prominence of the former does not by any means indicate the exclusion of the latter. Fuchsia is kept busy with evening clothes, and some of the velvet evening wraps of this tone stand out as the most beautiful examples of a splendor which we have borrowed from other climes and other days.

But to go back to the coat dress of navy twill, one can do no more than point to the delightful model offered by Jenny, second from the right of this page. This is trimmed with black silk braid, and the inevitable panel is accomplished in black satin, repeated in the collar and on the cuffs. And, as nowadays every little girdle has a movement all its own, the model conforms to popular sentiment by strands of vari-colored elastic held by steel plaques.

Next in importance to the coat frock comes the three piece costume. This is inflected as hard as an irregular French verb. You may find your frock accompanied by any kind of cape or coat or garment reconciling the two. Perhaps the most popular interpretation, however, is found in the short, loose little coat, such as is provided in the three piece costume second from the left.

The upper section of the frock is of white satin and the repetition of this fabric in the lining of the coat is one of the features with which any exhibition of new models renders us immediately familiar. The bodice is, of course, long waisted, and the moodiness of motif authorized by fashion is illustrated by placing a design of brilliant hued beads high up on the left side of the corsage and then repeating the thought low down on the right side. Be it remembered, indeed, that in order to be a regular person nowadays you have got to be irregular.

Hat brims, hems, sleeves, the placing of trimming—all are carefully calculated to look uncalculated. That is why the motifs on a blouse or frock often look as if they had been thrown at the garment from the other side of the room.

When it comes to the adornment of the coat and skirt we face one of the most persistent elements in winter modes. Really, every other garment nowadays looks like a steel plant, so unremitting is the use of steel beads and nailheads. They are used on dresses, hats, coats, and suits with equal impartiality, and here the designer scatters them liberally on both skirt and coat. This trimming is complemented by monkey fur.

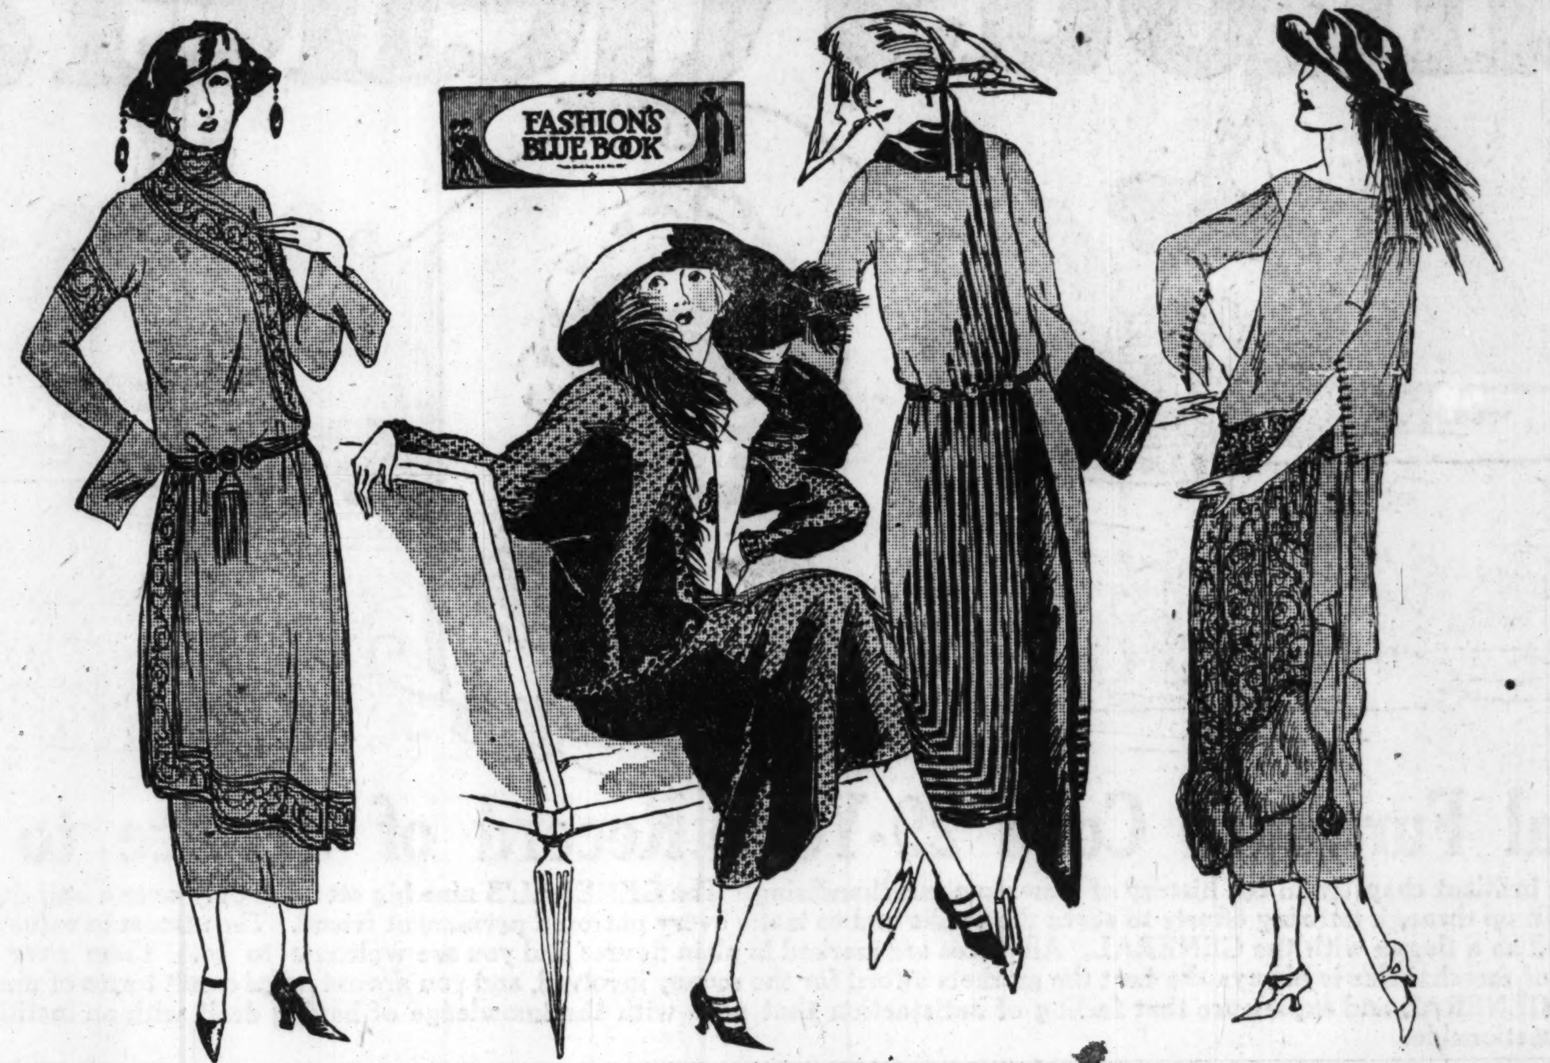
Here again we encounter a favored autumn premise of the designers. Mix up beads or embroidery with fur and you get a stunning suit coat. That is the thought back of many of the imported models. It is one which Bernard, for example, works upon in a suit of black wool velours trimmed promiscuously with self-color embroidery, steel beads, and skunk fur. The beads are used just above the border of pelt on the coat, where they give way to a rush of embroidery invading the garment to within nine inches of the high skunk collar. Then again they find a sphere of usefulness on the edge of the flaring sleeve, and their design is stemmed only by the band of fur placed just below the elbow.

This suit of Bernard's draws our attention to the side closing which is favored so enthusiastically in both coats and dresses. Many of the suit coats have adopted the principle with great advantage to that sacred creed, be irregular and you'll be chic. Quite often the side closing gives an opportunity for unevenness of coat hem. Thus the suit of Bernard's just described fastens at the left in a way to concentrate all the fullness on that side and also to draw up the material. The result is a diagonal line of coat.

No matter how it is achieved, the long coat of the suit is frequently uneven. It is so vast in its scope, this garment, that it frequently might be mistaken for a top coat. And its waywardness of line is achieved in many instances by long panels—often fur edged—that dip even below the skirt itself. And, speaking of these garments, do not forget the inverted plaits at the sides which contribute the desired flare to the lower section of the coat.

The side closing of coats is only one manifestation of a general feverish impulse toward diagonal lines. Draping, the surplice closing of many of Callot's Kasha frocks, lines of embroidery running from one shoulder to the opposite side of the waist, folds of material doing the same thing in the evening frocks, panels, tunics —a host of these minister to this unquenchable hunger for the diagonal line.

It is illustrated in the navy serge frock at the left in the course of the gold thread embroidery on the corsage and also by the line of the tunic. This, by the way, is an immensely smart way of spending our autumn days—this Drecoll frock. It banishes the everlasting bateau or boat shaped neckline in favor of the high collar. This feature, in addition to the girdle with its gold ornaments ending in gold fringe and the narrow sleeves finishing in a blare of cuffs, makes it arresting in any group of navy serges.



THE habit of looking like a steel plant formed by so many of the costumes of the winter is witnessed here by the three piece suit of black serge and white satin second from the left. For numberless steel beads perform most of the trimming chores and leave but a small legacy of labor for the monkey fur. At the left a blue serge model from Drecoll points through the course of its tunic and the application of its bands of gold embroidery to the popularity of the diagonal line.

Additional proof of the authority of this mode is contributed by the gray broadcloth at the right. This latter distributes interest through the various channels of an apron of silver lace threaded with black and gold, a girdle of gold and silver beads, draperies falling from shoulder to hem, and a dangling ball of gold and silver.

Last, a Jenny coat dress of navy Poiret twill is trimmed arrestingly with black silk braid, black satin, and fanciful girdle, and is accompanied by one of the ubiquitous Napoleonic hats.

Among the materials stressed by the French designers broadcloth has an honored place. For both suits and frocks it is used in a variety of ways. In the coat dress it has achieved a conspicuous success, a truth pointed most spectacularly by a creation from Lanvin. This consists of white broadcloth bordered with bands formed by cutting the material into triangular strips and opening over black satin underskirt. The high collar, with its pointed, hoodlike piece emerging at the side to fall over one shoulder, is a distinctive feature of this creation, which is also developed for the benefit of practical minds in cerise broadcloth over black satin.

There are numbers of practical broadcloth models of navy blue charming and simple enough to contest with the serges and twills of this standard tint. These are achieved with touches of colored—often figured fabrics—in cuffs, vestee, and collar. They are also combined with black satin. Among more radical colors for dressy occasions one is impressed immediately by the bronze broadcloths which Doucet, consistently with his emphasis on this tint in other fabrics, has sent for our approval. However, a more general sentiment will probably be created by the elaborate frocks of gray broadcloth.

We are showing at the right one of these last named adventures, otherwise significant in the additional testimony it renders to the sway of the diagonal line. This gray broadcloth has a sloping girdle composed of gold and silver beads, and from this falls an apron tunic of silver lace threaded with gold and black and edged with gray fox. Lines of drapery fall from shoulder to below the hem of the skirt, and the gold ornament at the elevated left side of the girdle provides a starting point for a gold and silver ball glimpsed among the draperies on this side.

As a last word on the new fashions one must present an omelet of facts. Tans and browns are much in evidence in suits, coats, and frocks. Skirts may now be anything from four to ten inches above the ground. A red heel on a patent leather slipper—a Paris mode of which we have spoken—often flashes nowadays on the floor of lunch place or teaing ground. The black felt hat—another Paris fancy of the summer—is being worn either untrimmed or set with quills. The tricornes and Napoleonic bicornes continue in high favor. Many of the most stunning hats are trimmed with both peacock feathers and ostrich—a fancy illustrated on this page by the black panne hat second from the left. Finally, everything is being worn—provided it is worn irregularly.

Your Hair Is Going to Suffer If You Don't

WHEN a girl spends $25 or thereabouts for a chapeau, naturally she feels it is something to wear, and wear it she must. But in imitation of what the good book says, what doth it profit her if she lose her hair in her attempt to get her money's worth out of the hat?

It is no unusual sight these days to walk into a business office where a woman is in command and find her buried head deep in serious affairs hatted to the 'nth degree.

Business Woman's Failing.

Walk in on a bridge party or an afternoon tea, and loath indeed seems the fair femme to trust her $40 bit of headgear to a welcoming enought hat rest. Not that she feels she plays a better game; mayhap in feminine reckoning she feels her hat the piece de resistance of the costume.

Once in a while wearing the hat indoors does no damage, but the business woman gets the habit—she figures it saves time—and presently she wakes up some morning to inquire where, O where has her little hair gone? The same way is true of the bridge player, the club woman, and the partygoer. If she has a nice hat, she gets the habit of wearing it sometimes to save time on a marcel or sometimes just for no reason at all.

Bald Headed Race May Result.

The Life Extension institute bulletin goes into the matter quite seriously, even threatening a bald headed race if the habit is not put under control.

"It is a shame," they say, "that certain customs for women conform so little to the laws of health. For one thing, women keep their hats on too much. In church, at teas, in all public places convention refuses to women what is assigned to men—the opportunity for ventilation of the scalp. If the hat is heavy or tight, it is especially bad to keep it on hour after hour. Whatever stops the circulation is bad for the hair. A tight hat has the same effect in cutting off the blood supply as if you tied a string around your head. Even if it does not result in baldness, which is quite possible, lack of air is apt to make the hair brittle and dry.

Glands Must Be Kept Open.

"It is bad to expose the hair to direct rays of the sun in extremely hot weather, but with ordinary precautions in mind the hat should come off whenever possible.

"Professional and business women often fall into the habit of working for hours with their hats on. It is a bad practice. If they keep up this overprotection long enough, slow change in the human body, which comes with adaptation to environment, will ultimately result in the complete baldness of the human race. Bald people are just as healthy as others, but such would be the loss to poetry and painting, to say nothing of beauty parlors, from the extinction of human hair, that we urge attention to rules of hair health."

Wash the hair frequently enough to keep the glands open. Let it go unwashed for weeks and weeks, and the pores become clogged just as the pores of the face do, which—as you know—is the beginning of acne and pimples and blackheads. With the scalp, dandruff is the resultant trouble.

Daily Brushing Important.

Brush it regularly every day. The best and healthiest heads of hair result from this form of massage. A hair specialist tells me that any number of cases where the expense runs up into quite a sum of money to the customer is remedied through the consistent brushing he gives. If one did this brushing daily herself, she would cheat him out of a good deal of money. You should brush until the scalp tingles. It massages and removes dust and grime that would otherwise clog up the pores and gives that enviable gloss by distributing the oil throughout the hair.

If the hair is thin and dry, rub in a mixture of three to six teaspoons of castor oil in a pint of alcohol or bay rum.

If Your Home Lacks a Sun Room, Why Not Turn the Sunniest Room You Have Into One?

By Anita de Campi.

BACHELOR PREFERENCES.

THIS is the time of year when the most tempting reductions are made on all outdoor furniture. It follows, of course, that this is the best time to bring "all of outdoors" into the house with you. If you haven't a sun room, it wouldn't be a bad idea to convert the sunniest room you have into one. At least the experiment would not be wildly extravagant, and the informality of the thing would allow great leeway in the point of novel color scheming. It is such fun to have one room with everything new in it. It should be merry by sunlight and contrastingly intimate and softly shaded by night.

The sun room is a modern contrivance, so let it be modern in style—fresh and clean in color and effect.

What kind of furniture? Well, the most logical is wicker or reed. Good looking, bright, figured chintz is the fabric for the cushions. Striped linen or linene makes nice window draperies, as it is the same on both sides. It may be handled in the form of casement curtains or may be made in roller shades, as illustrated here.

I like linoleum on the sun room floors, and it comes now in such good patterns. A pattern that is particularly good is a design of French blue or Italian red bricks or squares joined with a mortice line of barley gray. Rugs may be used over the covering as a decoration.

A comfortable sun room will have several wicker chairs, a chaise longue, in one or two pieces, a tea wagon, a work basket, a book rack, a writing shelf between windows, some lovely pottery, plants in painted pots—such as evergreen or ivy—and at least one hanging shelf of books.

A fireplace, to my thinking, is essential in a sun room that is to be used the year round. A little steam radiator is great for convenience, but for hospitality commend me to the addition of an open grate. It isn't as difficult as it sounds. Anyone can buy a Franklin grate. Flank it with a coal box on one side and a wood box on the other, and enjoy a live fire.

A bachelor who furnished his own sun room, pictured here, insists that no one who has never tried it appreciates the comfort of an upholstered box spring. On the unseen side of the room is a grate in which long logs are burned, and luxurious Mr. Bachelor has his box spring placed before the grate.

When he was a boy he was not allowed to sprawl, and this unusual placement may be a direct result of early suppression. Anyway, I have seen as many as sixteen young people perched around its edge, and they all said it was jolly and were very glad his mother spanked him when she did.

The coloring of the room is mannishly bold. The curtains are amber and green, the floor is slate gray, the upholstery is plum and gold, and the cushions are bright coral red. The translucent parchment shades over the candle brackets are trimmed with vivid emerald green chenille, and the edges of the wicker furniture are enameled emerald green.

A favorite color scheme for sun rooms is one that permits of the introduction of plenty of yellow, ranging the complete gamut of hues from pale lemon to deep nasturtium. Contrasts are supplemented as well. Primrose yellow and leaf green are good. Lemon yellow and Italian blue are striking. Citron yellow is excellent with violet or plum. All of the tones of nasturtiums flash up over a ground of pea green or niggerhead brown. Champagne yellow is nice with turquoise, with copper bowls, and aquariums of gold fish. Flame red, black, and raw sienna make an interesting scheme with glazed purple and blue pottery and with this we might use a saffron red luster tea set.

Bachelors and babies love lots of sun light and gay tones. So choose fabrics for them that are sunfast and tubfast. Delicate things that are fadey and easily washed out will not do at all.

What do you deduce from this funny little fact? Nine times out of ten the bachelor furnished room would make an ideal nursery. A happy family of my acquaintance, on subleasing a bachelor furnished apartment, immediately installed the children in the sun parlor. As a matter of choice, the owner had placed in the room few if any accessories which were breakable. There were wide window benches supplied with pads and springs and comfortable enough for any child to sleep upon, and there were deep drawers for things to be put away in.

A good many women nowadays are giving up the living room and sun room to the children. It means that the conception of the home has been reconstructed—that its use as a scene of entertainment has become secondary to its use as a place in which to rear healthy children. If there is but one large room in the house it is cheerfully given over to the mental and bodily health of the children; it is made into their play room, and the adjoining sun room is their sanitary sleeping place.

Be Better Looking—Take Olive Tablets

If your skin is yellow—complexion pallid—tongue coated—appetite poor—you have a bad taste in your mouth—a lazy, no-good feeling—you should take Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—a substitute for calomel—were prepared by Dr. Edwards after 17 years of study.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color.

To have a clear, pink skin, bright eyes, no pimples, a feeling of buoyancy like childhood days, you must get at the cause.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act on the liver and bowels like calomel—yet have no dangerous after effects.

They start the bile and overcome constipation. Take one or two nightly and note the pleasing results. Millions of boxes are sold annually at 15c and 30c.

Popular Rhymes about Wedding Days

by Doris Blake

MAUDE MARTIN ELLIS

NEXT to June, which ancient lore declares to be the luckiest month of all the year for weddings, so far as the bride is concerned, as the month is governed by Juno, the classic goddess who protects women, comes October. However, the gods of luck are not so generous with their promises for the October wed, as you will note in the popular rhymes about wedding months which I present you today.

Says one rhymester:

Marry when the year is new—
Always loving, kind and true.
When February brides do mate
You may wed, nor dread your fate.
If you wed when March winds blow,
Joy and sorrow both you'll know.
Marry in April when you can
Joy for maiden and for man.
Marry in the month of May,
You will surely rue the day.
Marry when June roses blow,
Over land and sea you'll go,
They who in July do wed
Must labor always for their bread.
Whoever wed in August be
Many a change are sure to see.
Marry in September's shrine,
Your living will be rich and fine.
If in October you will marry,
Love will come, but riches tarry.
If you wed in bleak November,
Only joy will come, remember.
When December's snows fall fast,
Marry and true love will last.

Another interradation is:

Married in January's chilling time,
Widowed you'll be before your prime.
Married in February's sleety weather,
Life you'll tread in tune together.
Married when March winds shrill and roar,
Your home will be on a foreign shore.
Married 'neath April's changeful skies,
A checkered path before you lies.
Married when bees over May blossoms flit,
Strangers around your board will sit.
Married in merry month of June,
Life will be one honeymoon.
Married as July's flower banks blaze,
Bitter-sweet memories in after days.
Married in August heat and drowse,
Lover and friend in your chosen spouse.
Married in gold September glow,
Smooth and serene your life will flow.
Married when leaves in October thin,
Toil and hardship for you begin.
Married in veils of November mist,
Fortune your wedding ring has kissed.
Married in days of December cheer,
Love will shine brighter year after year.

And then you have probably recited these rhymes about the days of the week on which to marry:

Monday for health,
Tuesday for wealth,
Wednesday the best day of all.
Thursday for losses,
Friday for crosses,
Saturday no luck at all.

Or this:

Wed on Monday, always poor;
Wed on Tuesday, wed once more;
Wed on Wednesday, happy match;
Wed on Thursday, splendid catch;
Wed on Friday, poorly mated;
Wed on Saturday, better waited;
Wed on Sunday, Cupid's wooing;
Wed in the morning, quick undoing.

And speaking of rhymes and brides, do you know this relative to the color of her wedding gown:

Married white, you've chosen all right.
Married in green, ashamed to be seen.
Married in gray, you will go far away.
Married in red, you will wish yourself dead.
Married in blue, love ever true.
Married in yellow, ashamed of your fellow.
Married in black, you will wish yourself back.
Married in pink, of you only he'll think.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair of which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

Try Some Tact.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl 17 years of age. I am never allowed the company of the opposite sex. If I mention a boy's name more than once or twice I am told I am too young for such things. Miss Blake, this is discouraging and embarrassing, too. If I am introduced to a young man and he asks if he may walk home with me or the like I must refuse. Please advise me.

"ONLY A WORKING GIRL."

That is a little bit too harsh, I think, dear. What more natural than your mind should be occupied some of the time with thoughts of the other sex? I guess your parents have forgotten their youth a little, haven't they? One of these days they will be blaming you for not being popular, won't they? Try to make them see your side of the case. Perhaps if you argue without any appearance of bitterness or wilfulness you may convert them.

Merely Wants a Chum.

"Dear Miss Blake: There is a certain young man where I live that I care a great deal about as a chum. But as I get better acquainted with him I find that he cares to be more than a chum. As I have my work outlined in the business world I do not care to be married, but he will not believe this. How can I let him know this and still have him as a chum?

"G. E. F."

I guess it is not that you have your work outlined in the business world so much as the fact that this is not the man to persuade you a home life is more attractive. You know the old story about having one's cake and eating it, too, being a thing impossible. It is true in your case. You have to choose one or the other. And, as I say, if you were in love you would have no trouble making the choice.

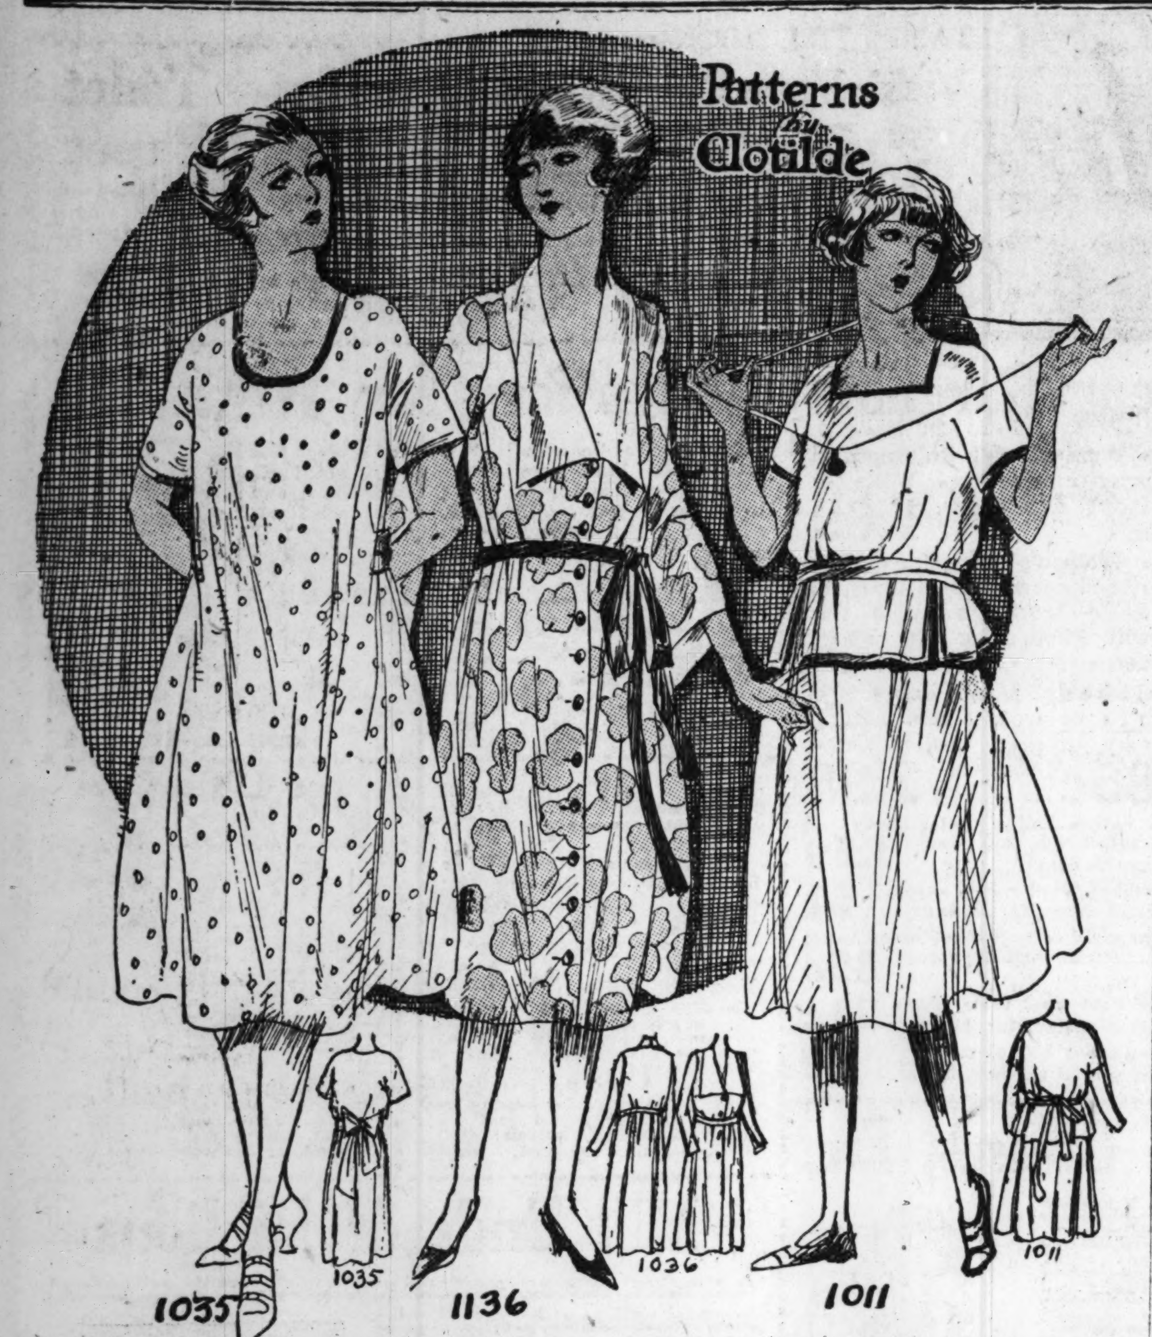
PIANO TUNING AND PHONOGRAPH REPAIRING — PHOTO STUDIO LINCOLN AVE. STORE



1035—Woman's apron. Sizes 36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4 yards of 32 inch material and 2¼ yards of binding.

1136—Woman's dress. Sizes 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅜ yards of 36 inch material and ½ yard of 36 inch contrasting.

1011—Misses' or small woman's dress. Sizes 14, 16, 18, and 20 years. Size 16 requires 3¼ yards of 36 inch or 54 inch material, with ⅝ yard of 36 inch contrasting.

How to Use the Patterns

THE sash ends of pattern No. 1035 give it a decidedly jaunty appearance, and the young housekeeper who appears at breakfast in an immaculate apron or house dress made by this pattern of a pretty percale will be as attractive as possible. I think the feeling of being so appropriately and becomingly attired will help make the work go more quickly and thoroughly.

The apron is cut kimono fashion and has underarm seams. It slips on over the head, so there is no fastening to bother with. The only caution suggested would be to shrink the percale and be sure when cutting that the upper or waist part is broad enough. For size 36 the lower edge measures one and seven-eighths yards.

Where the sash ends are stitched to the apron the ends are laid under a plait at each side taken in the apron. The pattern indicates this quite clearly, and it is a good way to set sash ends on. The one pocket can be plain or worked with a bit of gay embroidery. Rickrack braid makes a good finish for the neck, sleeves, and top of pocket, and the two rows of stitching it requires add strength to the apron edges.

No. 1136 is a decidedly popular model and is seen in the shops made of serge, wool jersey, silk, crêpe, etc.

Little, if any, trimming is needed besides the contrasting color and material used in the collar and string sash.

The pattern is in four pieces—front, back, sleeve, and collar. The width at the bottom for size 36 is one and one-half yards. The opening is in the front, the breadths there being lapped to within about eleven inches of the waistline. Of course, if one wished, the dress could button the entire length.

There are two kinds of sleeves with the pattern—one a close fitting one and full length; the other with a pretty flare from the elbow to the bottom.

Here is a little frock that is specially designed for girlish figures—No. 1011. Waist and skirt are made separately, and the kimono shaped waist is intended to be slipped on over the head—doing away with any bothering opening to finish.

Perforations on the waist pattern show where it is to be slashed, allowing it to flare slightly over the gathered skirt about the hips.

The skirt is in two pieces and is straight and gathered at the waistline.

Charmeuse or some one of the crêpes would make up well, and with neck, sleeve edges, and slashes bound with the same or a contrasting material no other trimming will be needed.

It should be easy to make, but care should be taken to finish the seams well—making French seams if the material is soft and light enough weight, or binding and pressing them open if the dress is made of heavy material.

Under the arms where the curve is greatest the sleeves should be reinforced with a bias strip of material hemmed down carefully over the seams—first clipping the seam at close intervals if it is not a French seam.

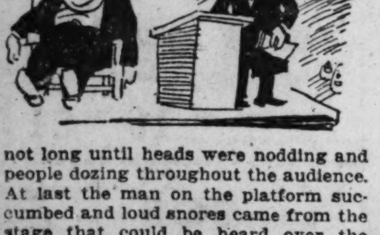
Does He Does She SNORE?

Does anybody in your family snore? If so, did you ever try to prevent it, and how? Do you know any funny incident connected with this habit? Tell it in a letter to the Snoring Contest Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. For every letter printed $1 will be paid.

Competition.

I attended a lecture not long ago, and the speaker was introduced by one of the leading men of the town, who occupied a chair on the stage.

The lecture was lengthy and was read entirely from notes, and it was not long until heads were nodding and people dozing throughout the audience. At last the man on the platform succumbed and loud snores came from the stage that could be heard over the entire room. Those who were awake shrieked with laughter and awakened those near them who were sleeping and the meeting was all but broken up.



Before the lecturer could finish, however, he was obliged to awaken the man on the stage, as both could not be heard at the same time. It was indeed amusing. W. C.

"Jimmy" Is Home.

I arrived home from the army several days before I was expected. As it was late at night when I got home, and I didn't wish to wake up the folks, I thought I would sleep on the porch and surprise them in the morning.

I had my nose injured several years ago at a football game, and since then when I snore I make a peculiar noise with which every member of the family is well acquainted.

I had been sleeping only a short time when my dad, who is a light sleeper, hearing me snore, started to shout, "Jimmy is home, Jimmy is home!"

I received my welcome that night. J. R.

Now She Turns Over.

I have roomed for years with a dear friend who has begun lately to lie on her back and snore. At Christmas I gave her two nightgowns on which I sewed sashes to be tied in the back. The knots hurt her and in her sleep she turns over on her side and the snoring stops. She is grateful and I am tickled to death. M. M. C.

DRY CLEANING AT HOME

by Alma Harding

This is the twenty-fifth article of a series giving instructions in dry cleaning, fine laundry work, bleaching, and dyeing.

LAUNDRY WORK AT HOME.

Rinse in the last bluing water, which should be cold. If the garments are thoroughly rinsed and free from soap and dried in the sun, there is little need of bluing. For its general use is to counteract the yellowness which comes of drying clothes indoors and rinsing in only one water.

Prussian blue is the most common form of bluing, but, as it is an iron compound, which is decomposed by alkalis, you will find your clothes spotted with a fine rust unless you are careful to rinse all soap from them before putting them in the bluing water. This is the cause of that fine yellow haze which gets on some clothes.

Ultramarine is the ball bluing. It is really insoluble in water and is only in a state of suspension, just scattering fine particles of blue through the water, which are absorbed by the material. For this reason the water must be stirred constantly while the clothes are in it. Although it is an iron compound, it does not give off iron rust through the actions of alkalis.

Aniline blue is a real dye, and can be removed only by the stripping process or a real bleach, such as titanous chloride. It gives the best color, but must be used carefully.

If you get too much bluing or it is streaked, sometimes a simple boiling will remove it, or soaking in fairly strong ammonia solution. But usually it is necessary to boil with a dilute acid or alkali.

Starching.

Boiled starches may have a little bluing added if you wish. Be sure that the starch boils ten minutes, as this is the real secret of preventing its sticking to the iron. Boiled starches are preferable for everything but collars and cuffs. Always make the starch of soft water if possible. Ordinary gelatin may be used for stiffening silks and finery. Gum tragasol, a product of the locust bean, is a tough jelly, and is ideal for table linen and napery, also for such delicate articles as muslin and organdy, since it stiffens without injuring the pliability.

Colored starches for ecru and yellow curtains, children's dresses, etc., may be made by dissolving some modern dye in boiled starch water.

Drying.

When possible always dry clothes outdoors—white goods in the fullest, strongest sunlight, and colored goods in the shade. Take in before quite dry, as they iron better if not dampened artificially.

Sprinkling.

If the clothes are too dry to iron sprinkle with warm water and roll down a sufficient length of time for the moisture to become even over all the garment. Buy a sprinkler and fasten it in the bottle. This saves a great deal of time and does much more even work.

Ironing.

Iron all laces and embroidery on the wrong side, after placing on a thick blanket.

If it is necessary to iron silk on the right side in order to avoid the shiny place the iron will leave, place a sheet of tissue paper over the silk and press with not too hot an iron.

Chiffon velvet may be ironed just like cloth, but the iron must follow the direction of the nap.

When ironing wool or serge which has been dampened, place a dry linen cloth between the wool and the iron to absorb the moisture, so only the steam strikes the wool.

If you gloss clothes in ironing—especially serge—immediately apply more steam to the glossy place and brush briskly. Hot vinegar brushed over the shiny place will aid in its removal.

Effect of acids and alkalis on Fabrics.

A summarized table of the effects of the different acids and alkalis on various fabrics may be useful in keeping in mind both the easiest way to clean materials and the safest way for the fabrics.

The acids are either mineral like sulphuric, nitric, and hydrochloric; or organic, like acetic, oxalic, citric, etc. The mineral acids, if allowed to stay on any kind of fabric, will destroy it, although used with care and immersed in a neutralizing solution, they are helpful in taking out special stains.

Cotton.

Mineral acids have quick effect on cotton. Sulphuric destroys the fiber almost immediately. Organic acids have little effect unless they are allowed to dry in and are afterwarad ironed. Alkalis, if diluted, are all right, even in boiling. But concentrated solutions of caustic weaken the cloth in time. Do not use either too much or too strong alkali. Experiments show that the habitual use of a hot solution, even when weak, has a destructive force on fibers of linen and cotton, and more so on wool and silk. It is a common tendency to use too much soda in laundry as it economizes soap and makes the water softer and seems to make the washing easier. Avoid all washing powders you do not make yourself.

Wool.

Dilute acids have little effect on wool, but concentrated acids eat it up entirely. Alkalis are bad—even weak solutions, say 5 per cent at the boiling point, will dissolve the fiber. Dilute solutions of borax or ammonia, if not too hot, are all right. The color is usually more fast in wool than in cotton or silk.

Silk.

Concentrated acids destroy silk also hot alkalis. Dilute alkalis destroy the luster. Silk is also affected by salt, which is one of the reasons that silks yield so quickly to perspiration stains.

Linen.

Strong mineral acids eat the fiber, but cold dilute mineral acids may be used if the material is well rinsed and neutralized. Organic acids are all right if not allowed to dry in. Alkalis act on linen as on cotton. To bleach linen, the best way is to moisten continually and dry in the sun stretched out on the grass. Spots are more easily removed from it than from cotton, and its gloss keeps the dirt from penetrating so quickly.

Miscellaneous Hints.

In washing white silks, sodium perborate in the rinsing water is good as it prevents yellowing.

In rinsing wool, loosen the wringer. Don't twist in the hands, but press out all the water possible. Arrange sweaters loosely on a flat surface, turning from time to time. They dry soft and unstretched in this manner.

Wash chiffons in a soap solution. No rubbing will be required, just a rinsing up and down. Don't have the water too hot.

Veils may be washed perfectly in a weak soap solution and then beaten nearly dry between the hands. If they are ironed wet, they are apt to be too stiff. It is better to pass them through a weak gum arabic solution and stretch on the ironing board without ironing.

Bleaching.

In the Latin countries they never boil their clothes. They beat them on stones and scrub them with a stiff brush, then use a lessive or a bleach. The use of eau de Javelle is really much easier than boiling and saves that unpleasant smell around the house. If used with care and well rinsed, it does no harm to the clothes.

If you do this, do it about once a month. That should be sufficient. Have ready a rinsing watere of one cup eau de Javelle to the tub, and put the clothes in for about ten minutes, stirring from time to time. Then rinse thoroughly in water to which has been added ammonia in the proportion of one tablespoon to the gallon. This is to neutralize all possible ill effects of the chlorine bleach.

You're Bilious, Headachy, Constipated!

Clean your liver and bowels!

Sick headache, biliousness, coated tongue, or sour, gassy stomach—always trace this to torpid liver and constipation. Poisonous matter clogged in the bowels, instead of being cast out of the system is reabsorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, dizzy, sickening headache. A Cascaret tonight will give your liver and bowels a gentle but most thorough physic and will straighten you out by morning.

Two Extra Gifts Will Come

This week, to start the dessert season, we make this remarkable offer.

A set of Initial Dessert Molds will be sent to each Jiffy-Jell user who complies with the offer below.

Two other gifts will come with them—gifts which we don't announce. We want them to surprise you.

Accept the offer made below and see what the postman brings.

Fruit in glass

The purpose is to remind you how Jiffy-Jell excels. Now starts a new dessert season. We want you to start it with this queen of all desserts.

Jiffy-Jell is the real-fruit dessert. The flavors come in liquid form, in glass—a bottle in each package.

We crush the fruit, condense the juice and seal it. It comes to you fragrant and fresh. So Jiffy-Jell desserts taste just like fresh-fruit dainties.

A bottle in each package

Each flavor is abundant. We use half a ripe pineapple, for instance, to flavor one Jiffy-Jell dessert. So Jiffy-Jell is rich in fruit, and the children love it.

No extra cost

Jiffy-Jell used to cost much more than old-style quick desserts. Now it costs the same as those with flavors in dry form.

You get this real fruit essence, and in plenty, without an extra price.

We want to remind you what that means to you and yours. So we make this three-gift offer.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

THE BOBTAILED SUIT COAT.

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Little bobtail jackets are awfully popular. They are out in numbers in the morning on the avenue du Bois du Boulogne—that trial field for the styles. And what a setting it is for such a contest, how entirely the product of the old world and therefore disassociated from ours.

The old woman collecting two sous for the little iron chair from the smart bourgeoise lady, who has come with her double-barreled lorgnon to view the "défilé"—the "file past," as we have come to call in literal translation all parades of style. Of course, said lady who sits along the line of march is a notch below in extravagant display the lady who is in her motor displaying. The lady on the bench wears copies of the grand toilettes, and yet she, even more than the nature background of old trees and old morning sunshine gives the parade its distinctive character.

Everything that is old contributes to the atmosphere of a French scene. The old beaux riding with stirrups too short and white whiskers bleached whiter are an important part of the setting on the bridle path across the wide boulevard. Did you know it was the style now not to dye your hair—or henna it? All of a sudden the latter is considered hard. If you get more than two or three gray hairs, you must bleach your head.

But to get down to the business of the letter: I saw one of the bobtail jackets in warm looking soft material—in color, tan. It was the coat of a tailored suit, but not the natty looking close affair that we think of when tailoring is mentioned.

The French seem to like their tailleurs full and—careless looking. Of course, some of us say that is because they can't make one to fit. But that is a challenge to international argument. The facts are that anything like a close fitting coat is now dying at the end of a boom, and the shaggy ones are popular.

The short one I have been trying to describe was in beige and it had a wide hem or band round it of sealskin, which fur made also the collar and the cuffs. The skirt was awfully long—and, my word, but the French girls do look funny in that attenuated silhouette!

There is a little one who comes into Fouquet's, a smart dining place on the Champs Elysées, in a skirt below her ankles and a blouse that fastens, like a middy, where she is widest. I regret for her the days of the high apron string and the chemise frock.

Because so many of her countrywomen are like her in build, I cannot think the present styles will long prevail. Except for one reason they could not. The French will wear anything that is fashionable, and whether it is becoming is the last thing they consider. Our women would not accept a fashion so unbecoming to them.

A costume of the general character under consideration is shown in the first model. Callot made it, and Jenny goes in for the same line. It shows the long blouse effect that comes below the jacket, although, as a matter of fact, this one is a one piece dress, made with the blouse effect in white and the lower part of the skirt, corresponding to the jacket in bottle green. Opossum is the fur used in the model.

I like the costume very much. Isn't the hat what we used to call "cute"? The illustration tells the story. It is of black felt, out of which a pie shaped slice has been lifted on the right side and a white wing set in.

The new features come for the most part in the details. The low, tight belts are really, I presume, the characterizing signs of the autumn mode. I have heard them named various things, an dtoday some one called them the "South Sea island inspiration." They certainly carry much the same line. They and the gaudy metal belts are the feature of the day.

Another novelty shown by Worth is contained in the sleeve of an attractive dinner dress, shown on the second model. The gown is black, and it carries little rhinestone sleeves, which trimming is repeated—would you believe it—in a long rhinestone tassel.

The next model gives indications of being one of Callot's winners. When seen in the "file past" it makes a striking contrast to the hooped skirts which she is pressing hard. She does this frock in all colors, beaded and embroidered. The one shown in her shop is of white georgette embroidered in gold and worn over a white satin slip.

The fourth sketch shows the fantasy of full skirts which are raging in the showrooms and on the stage. Whether they are prevalent in ballrooms is yet to be seen. This one, too, is by Callot. It is of black silk and trimmed with fringe—will it never die? The dress is cut square in the neck and a separate high collar goes round the opening, a circle of fringe finishing the bottom of it and rounding the lady's white chest.

In the Coal Bin.

We moved into one of a row of flats, identical in appearance and construction, but each under different management. Our landlady was to furnish our coal, but we had to build our own fires. I needed some coal one day and went to our landlady's bin (she had told us to help ourselves) and shoveled up nearly a bucketful.

"You put that coal right down," exclaimed an angry female voice.

I looked up in astonishment. A strange woman, much agitated, was speaking. I paid no attention, but put another shovelful in my bucket.

"I told you to put that coal down," said the voice again. Fearing to have my hair pulled or some other dreadful thing, I hardly knew what, I said:

"I was told to get my coal here."

"Who told you to get coal here?" demanded the angry voice.

For the life of me I could not think of my landlady's name, so I said: "My landlady did."

The woman scoffed. I do not remember what she said, but I had visions of a disgraceful scene made by angry women in the police court, of which I had read, and after she had talked a while longer, I said, indignantly:

"My landlady told me to get coal here. I will show you."

With my head up and with a proud and dignified bearing, I marched into the flat and knocked on the landlady's door. A woman whom I never had seen before opened the door.

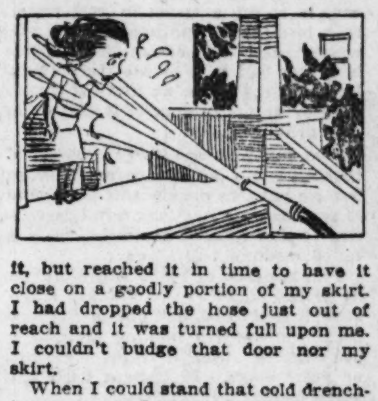
I was in the wrong flat and the wrong coal bin! M. T.

Both Nearsighted.

I was passing up the business street of my home town when a gentleman on the opposite side lifted his hat and bowed most cordially. I observed and acknowledged the greeting in the same cordial way. Seeing he wished to say something to me, we both proceeded to cross the street and met in the middle of the driveway. What was our consternation when we met and found that neither knew the other. He had taken me for another woman and I supposed he was another man. R. B. S.

From Cold to Frost.

When I moved into my new bungalow in a highly desirable neighborhood I decided to make a good impression on the residents. After my nap one afternoon I put on a becoming new house dress and went out to cool off the porch with the hose.



I had just started when I saw the front door slowly closing, and the night lock was on, alas I sprang to catch it, but reached it in time to have it close on a goodly portion of my skirt. I had dropped the hose just out of reach and it was turned full upon me. I couldn't budge that door nor my skirt.

When I could stand that cold drenching no longer I slipped out of my dress and made a dash for my nearest neighbor's front door. My frantic ring was answered at once—and I burst in upon an afternoon tea party. If a look could have slain I should have been spared the embarrassment of seeking my basement window and ignominiously crawling through the coal hole with that battery of eyes upon me. C. H.

A Man Named Smith.

My mother being away from home, I was in charge of the house. Father told me in the morning that there would be an extra man for dinner—Mr. Smith. I remembered the man, from my earliest school days, as a queer character who lived all alone at the extreme end of the town. All the children were afraid of him and gave him a wide berth.

At dinner the conversation turned to a queer old woman who lived in the town. Father told of queer things she had said and done. Then I took up the story. She had a daughter who had married a worthless fellow named John Smith. (I never thought of any connection between the two Smiths) and I said: "I guess she has no love for her son-in-law."

Father gave me a queer look and Mr. Smith said: "What makes you think that?"

I answered: "O, I heard her say once that 'her Jennie, she could have lots of good chances; she could have married some good man, but she waited till the devil came along and took him.'"

Absolute silence and a look from my father that should have withered me. Mr. Smith finished his dinner and left the room. Father said, "Good Lord! Didn't you know John Smith was his son?" L. E. L.

What She'd Long Sought.

When a freshman at a co-ed college I saw a junior young man whom I admired greatly. I often remarked to the other girls, how much I would enjoy meeting him. One Saturday my roommate and I had been to an adjoining city to do some shopping and came home laden with bundles. As we were mounting the second flight of stairs at the "College Inn," where we lived, whom should I see coming down the stairs but a senior and the junior I so much admired.

We were introduced and as I extended my hand to meet his, some of my bundles began dropping. I jumped to save them, and in so doing lost my balance and bundles and I rolled to the bottom of the stairs.

I thought my embarrassment was great as I could bear, but to add to my chagrin one of the other co-eds appeared on the scene and said in a loud voice, "Well, now, you have met, how do you like each other? E. S.

The Soft Answer.

Several years ago, when the inelegant, though effective expression, "Keep your shirt on," was in vogue, I was sitting in a university class, listening to a professor read a passage from a book. A certain sentence he read sounded strange to me, and since I had a copy of the book with me I decided to verify it on the spot.

The professor, annoyed at the disturbance, elevated his eyebrows and said: "Pardon me, but will you please refrain from reading?"

"Keep your shirt on," I replied. "This is the book from which you are reading."

A merciful class bell rang and relieved the situation, which was indeed tense. E. S.

THE MASTER CANDY FORMULA.

LET us consider the case of a woman eager and anxious to make home made candies of a superior grade. We must suppose also that this woman has great persistence and patience. How then shall this imaginary woman begin? Probably there is no simple and better way than that of mastering the arts that go with the use of the most simple and universal of candy formulas, in the lowest terms in which it is used.

This formula is: Two cups of sugar or one pound, one-half cup of liquid or a little more in the case of certain variations, one-eighth teaspoon of cream of tartar, or its equivalent in glucose or corn syrup, up to one-half cup, may be used instead—either of which prevents crystallization.

Let the would-be candy maker practice with this, cooking the mixture for all the different stages, which different degrees of cooking will result in ten different classes of candy. The varieties under one class in some cases are most numerous, and for most of the classes there are a number of species. Having learned how to cook these classes of candy you will find that any other work will simply go to perfecting skill in manipulating cooked sugar.

Syrups of Different Weights.

What are the ten ways, or stages, for cooking this pound of sugar with wetness enough to dissolve it and some ingredient to prevent it from going back to sugar?

First, we may make syrups of different weight, each being of service in candy making. We start, as in every case, by stirring the whole over a medium fire—not a high flame by any means—until it is dissolved. In two or three minutes we get a thin syrup. If we want a heavier one, and want to know just how much we have cooked the sugar, we must fasten a candy thermometer into the pan, after we have rinsed it off with hot water, or some people hold it over the candy until the mercury rises to something above 100. Two hundred and twenty degrees or 224 degrees are the heavy syrup temperatures.

The temperature of 238 degrees, or what is called the soft ball stage of cooking, gives us the form of cooked sugar which is most universally serviceable. Spun sugar is cooked to this stage, when it will spin an eight inch long hair. It is the temperature for fudge, which is a variety of fondant. Fondant is made by the master formula cooked to this stage, but for fudge we add chocolate and use milk instead of water. For penuchi we vary our ingredients also.

Sugar cooked to fondant stage, also called the feather or blow stage, allowed to get cold and worked, gives us the smoothest of products. We use it for the centers of chocolate creams, for making cream patties and bonbons of every type, and we may melt it and use it for dipping bonbons, fruit, and any centers we choose, and for icing cakes, for the making of all of which there is a technique to be mastered. And this is not all we can do with it. Homogeneous loaves or striped, Neapolitan fashion, may be made, sliced, dipped in chocolate, and so forth.

Testing for Soft Ball Stage.

When the cooking must be done without a thermometer, the sugar must be lifted from the fire and a little of it dropped in cold water. The preferred way is to dip a spoon in cold water, then into the syrup, then into the cold water again. If it comes off the spoon in a soft ball it is at the right stage. By using the spoon we find out sooner than by dropping some of it into water and fishing it out.

Two hundred and forty degrees of cooking gives us the caramel stage, but we have to modify this statement in various ways in giving a full description of how to cook caramels. This is called medium ball stage.

Two hundred and fifty degrees gives us cooked sugar at the chewing stage, after it is worked, and one of the temperatures used in making divinity is 260 degrees. This is called hard ball or pearl stage. It gives a hard ball when tested.

We get the brittle stage, which is used for various nut candies, at 265 degrees, but for making popcorn balls it is cooked to 272. The first is called light crack or brittle and the second is called medium crack. Hard crack or butterscotch sugar is cooked to 290.

For all kinds of toffees, rocks, glazings of fruit and nuts, and what used to be called "clear goods," our pound of sugar is cooked to 310 degrees. Carameled sugar, not caramels, is sugar cooked to the point of burning. On the thermometer that point is 360 degrees.

Fire Must Be Watched.

You can burn sugar at any of these stages, and in most of the early stages it will boil over if too much fire is under it. These two facts indicate, if there were not others, that candy in cooking must be watched. The thermometer does the watching to tell when it is done, but it cannot regulate the fire under it.

The small boy of the candy making story said that no matter what kind of candy he made, it was always burned candy. And if you have noticed carefully you know that some people get burned potatoes no matter what way they cook potatoes; burned preserves, no matter what preserves they make, and burned jellies, and burned doughnuts, and burned pancakes, burned bacon, and so forth.

No person who habitually burns whatever food she works with should try to cook sugar or its relatives. That person will burn the gingerbread, scorch the cake, carbonize, in part, almost anything. When she wants to make candy let her confine herself to mixtures of chopped fruits and nuts, made into balls or squares and rolled in sugar, or let her stuff dates, raisins, and prunes with nuts.

Plain Fondant.

A fondant is a sugar dough. It may be worked into all sorts of shapes and lumps, which may be flavored all sorts of ways. It is not granular. We make it by the master formula of two cups of sugar, one-half cup of water, which may be boiling to hasten the dissolving of the sugar, and a bit of cream tartar, or if we are not fussy about the flavor of corn sirup we may use up to a half cup of that. It helps to make a larger batch.

Every precaution is taken first and last to prevent this mixture from crystallizing or going back to granulated sugar. If while the sugar is partly undissolved the sugar and water boils up, the crystals will stick to the side of the pan and in the end cause trouble, so people have wiped the pan—not an easy thing—with a wet cloth on a stick, and so forth. But a recent practice is to cover the pan for three minutes or so, after the sugar is completely dissolved and cooking, and let any sugar on the sides steam off. Of course it must be over a low fire or it will boil over much more quickly than when uncovered, and that is quicker than anything except milk and its compounds over too much fire.

When it has cooked to soft ball stage take from fire, let stand a minute, and pour out on marble slab, platter, or Russian iron baking tin which has been rinsed with cold water. Save back the last drop or two in pouring it out. Its temperature is so different from the hot mass that it may cause trouble.

Probably it is best to wait until it is quite cold before beginning to work it. The working is really a pulling it back and forth on the slab or platter until it loses its shiny color and becomes a soft, creamy mass. But if it has cooked a minute too long the edges may stiffen before the center is cold, and they should be turned in before they stiffen much. If it has been cooked too much or if you start to work too soon it will stiffen so that you cannot work it, in which case it is best to recook it for caramels.

Scrap Caramels.

The master formula answers for caramels, but for those of the most perfect consistency we need a sirup, and sorghum may be the sirup, using as much of it as of the liquid which dissolves the sugar. It helps to keep the caramels soft. And, as the best caramels are made by gently stirring the mixture all the time it is cooking—with a wooden spoon—the whole might easily granulate but for the sirup.

When the mixture is cooked to fudge stage add from one-half to a whole cup of cream, stirring it in slowly as you always stir the caramel mixture and cooking it to 240 degrees after that. Instead of starting with two fresh cups of sugar, all sorts of scraps of sugar may be used, such as fudge or fondant that was a failure or some that has become stale, also leftover cake icings. If made with egg the mixture when being dissolved must be skimmed. The whole is weighed and about one-fourth more allowed than in the case of fresh sugar. The master formula calls for one pound of sugar. With candy scraps we should use one and one-fourth pounds.

The scraps must be dissolved carefully over a slow fire and a little extra liquid may be called for. Flavor for caramels should be added after they are off the fire. Caramels may be easily shaped with two knives if they pull in cutting into squares.

Dipping Candies.

Fondant is melted over hot, not boiling, water, and flavored balls of it, nuts, and even fresh fruits like grapes and strawberries are coated with it. A little hot sirup or plain water is added to it when it is melted, and it is stirred all the time while it is melting, and frequently while it is being used for the coatings. Whether it is melted for this or for making cream patties or icings, it must not get too hot or it loses its gloss. Do not let the water under it boil.

The chocolate is melted in a double boiler and then allowed to cool to a temperature of 82 degrees. Skill in dipping comes with practice. An old fashioned button hook with a loop end or something made like it and with a long wire handle will answer for a dipper. Fingers are used for dipping, but with a knack.

Keeping Candies Fresh.

The home candy maker is often exceedingly eager to learn how to keep candies from drying out. In the trade a great number of candies have been invented or devised that will keep well, if protected, but some are "fresh every hour," since many candies grow stale in the same fashion that cake does. But even sponge cake in tin will be palatable after two weeks. The trade uses tin foil to wrap large pieces of candy, since it keeps them from drying out. Cake keeps better if iced, and the same thing is true of dipped candies—the center is kept from drying out though the outside is hard. The trade uses tin boxes when candy is packed to send away, or boxes of wood. The little wooden firkins and the old fashioned cheese boxes may be so used as to seem highly individual. These wooden boxes are coming to us, beautifully decorated, from Czecho-Slovakia, and from that part of Italy which was so recently of Austria people are bringing home cheese boxes that look like mosaics.

Candy cooked to the light crack or brittle stage, 265 degrees, is pulled and then kept in powdered sugar in a warm place to make it tender and sugary. After dinner mints are of this order. Gum drops are wetter than most candies and are kept fresh by a covering of sugar—they are dipped in a sirup that will crystallize. Fruit squares and simple balls of fondant, made up like centers, may be rolled in sugar. This is on the same principle that jellies when covered with quite a layer of sugar keep as well as with paraffin.

The liberal use of waxed paper and the little crinkled paper cups—always use the white ones—are protective agents.

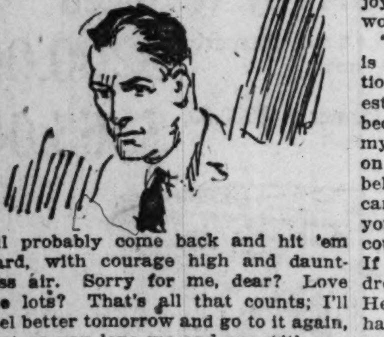
ONE OF HIS DOWN DAYS.

"PRECIOUS Girl: This has been a hard and disappointing day, and your ol' hubby-to-be has been hanging on the ropes all day long. My pep of yesterday is all gone and I had to drag myself around, spirit minus. I'm a queer machine, Peggy; I run by streaks. Tomorrow I'll probably come back and hit 'em hard, with courage high and dauntless air. Sorry for me, dear? Love me lots? That's all that counts; I'll feel better tomorrow and go to it again, just so you love me and are with me.



"But don't worry, darling, 'cause by the time you start worrying I'll be feeling all right again. These down days are pretty tough, but they never last, so just you be happy and know that your lover is fighting for you the best he knows how, because he loves you more than place, power, wealth, or ease.

"At times like this I feel the need of you most acutely, dearest. I long for your sympathy, your love, your understanding. I don't think I'm a coward, dear, but I just want to hide from all the world by coming to you where peace and comfort are always. I need you a lot, dear. Love cries for expression, for freedom. Without you it must remain imprisoned—tortured by confinement, growing too large for its cell, and grieving for the little girl who will soon take it as her own to treasure, nourish, and enjoy. Undoubtedly I love you all the world, sweetheart.

"And so you have learned that it is the simple virtue of natural affection that must rule our motives, dearest. I say 'we' and 'our.' That is because I believe that my character, my life, my salvation, in fact, depend on my precious wife-that-is-to-be. I believe, with Shakespeare, that a man cannot be better than his wife. If you were dishonest, Peggy, in the course of time I would be likewise. If you were careless in speech and dress, I would probably be the same. Hence, sweetheart, your share in our happiness is the larger one. Your work with your own sweet self will largely determine what sort of a man your husband will be. Especially as he loves you so much that he imagines fondly that God patterned the angels from you.

"I do love you, dearest comfort, please know it. My heart aches and aches with loneliness—longing for you. No one in this whole world could fill your place, dear. Your love is immeasurably valuable—priceless. I am so thankful that I can love you, dear—thankful that I have you to love, you for whom a constantly growing reverence and love does not yet approach what your darling self deserves. I can never love you too much. You have all I can give—my heart, my soul, my body, dear. All yours, forever.

TOMMY."

The Store of To-day and To-morrow

THE FAIR

Established 1875 by E. J. Lehmann
State, Adams and Dearborn Streets

Annual Food Show

The Fair
ANNUAL FOOD SHOW

Seventh Floor

An entire floor—the Seventh—aisle on aisle of good things to eat; luscious fruits, tasty desserts, rich, wholesome pastry—clean, appetizing meats and a restaurant and cafeteria in which this quality food is served will become a unique exhibit—A Food Show—for the next two weeks. Marvelous displays of every kind from the simple operation of grinding coffee to the preparing of a difficult dessert, are here in abundance.

OUR Grocery Department, one of the largest and probably the most complete in the country, is filled with every standard brand and every imaginable food product, whether in cans, packages or bulk, at prices that are the lowest. Meats—choice steaks, chops and roasts—beef, pork—veal, lamb—hams, bacon and sausage, received daily and preserved in clean, sanitary refrigerators, assuring at all times fresh meats. Expert attendants spotlessly clean are ever at your service to assist in selecting a choice cut or suggesting the daily supply. Prices, we believe, are the lowest—and cleanliness and freshness are assured by our reputation for reliability.

Delivery

Perhaps the greatest feature of these great departments is the Delivery Service. No stopping of housework to dress and run to the nearby shop is necessary; no heavy armful of bundles to carry; no fatiguing pushing and crowding; just pick up a telephone and call and an Expert attendant, skilled in this work, will take your order. Delivery twice daily to all parts within the city limits and once daily to the suburbs is insured service that food products will arrive in time for meals. A trial—a comparison will soon convince you of our belief that Our Prices are the lowest.

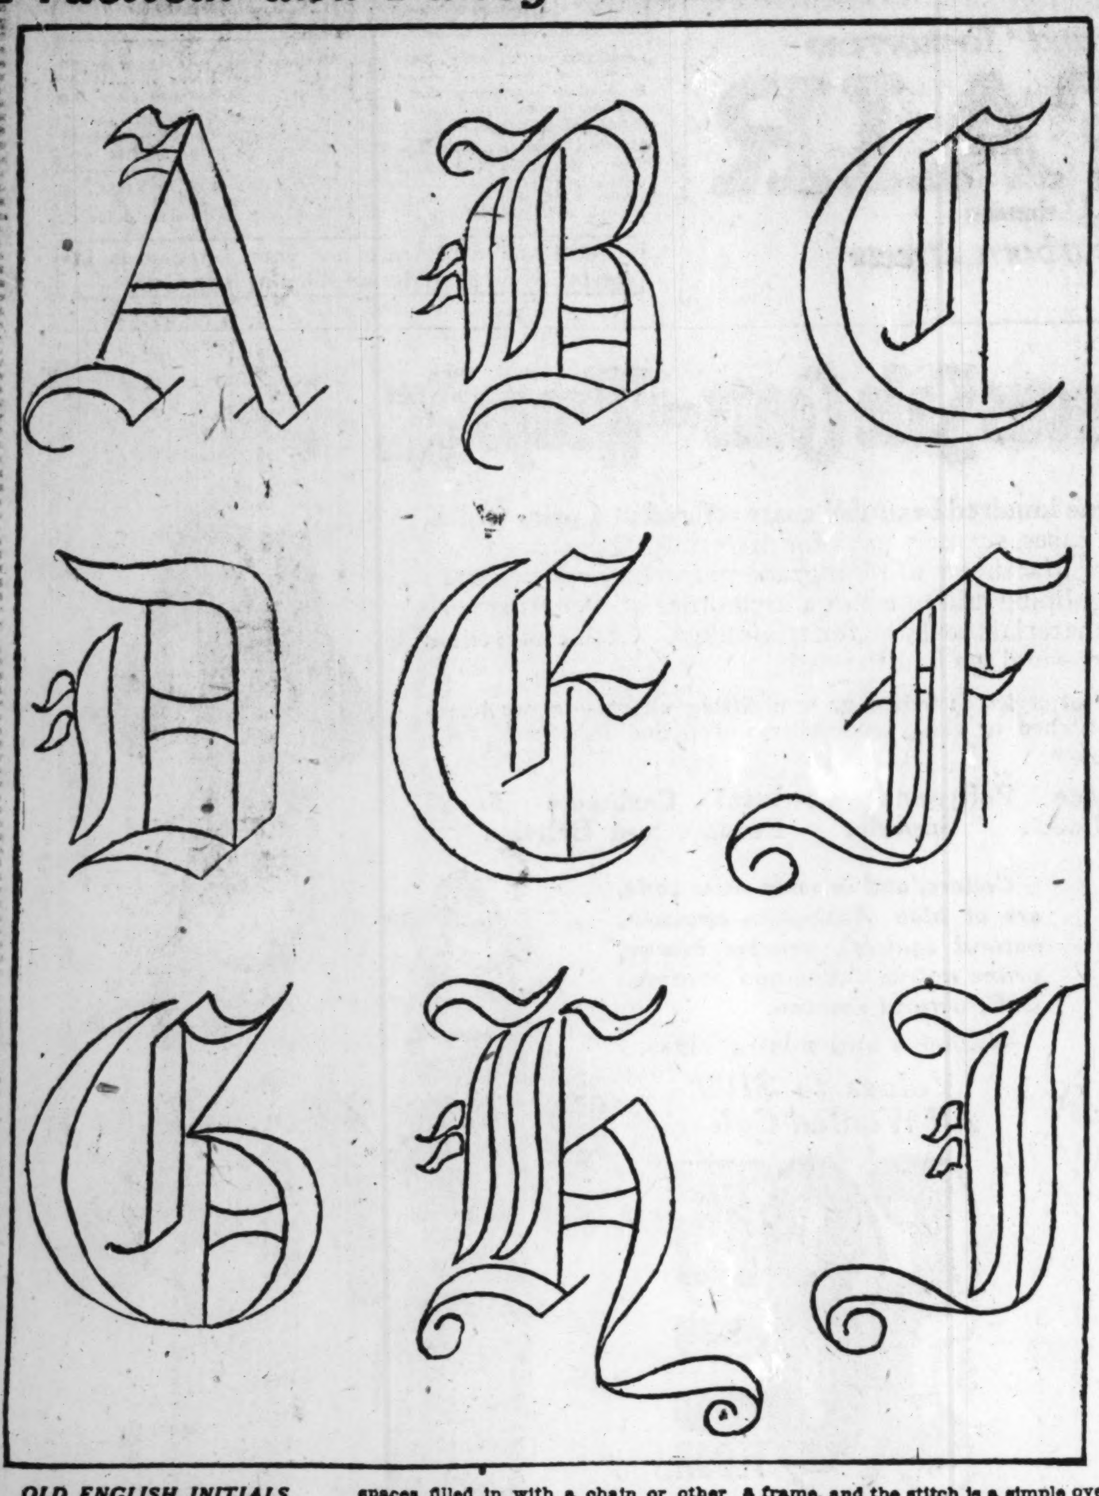
Practical and Fancy Needlework

BY CLOTILDE



OLD ENGLISH INITIALS.

THE Old English is probably the most popular of all letters shown, judging by the constant requests for it. An initial beautifully embroidered will give an air of distinction to any article. It is work that needs to be perfectly done to look well, and this perfection will only come with some practice.

Initial letters should be first outlined in a close running stitch, then the spaces filled in with a chain or other padding stitch. Where a running stitch is used the stitch should be longer on the upper side, and it should always be heavier in the center than towards the edges, thus giving a curved or rounded surface when finished. The padding stitches must all be on the right side, having the stitches that come to the wrong side as small as possible so as to keep the wrong side flat.

The embroidering should be done in a frame, and the stitch is a simple over and over, taken evenly and close together, always running at right angles to the padding and taken as close together as is possible without lapping.

Letters are sometimes outlined with the over and over stitch and the inclosed spaces filled with the seed stitch, but there is nothing more beautiful than the plain "laid" embroidery work if perfectly done.

The second installment of this alphabet will be printed next Sunday.

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

Write This Soldier.

The following comes from a lonesome soldier stationed at Coblenz, Germany:

"Well, here we have been over here for two long years, and have not heard from a living soul in America. As an American citizen I ask you to publish my address: Edward Udell Canoose, Headquarters Det., A. P. O. 927, American Forces in Germany."

Writing to the men overseas has apparently gone out of fashion, but here is a chance to revive it.

Wants a Real Home.

"May I ask you to make an appeal in your column in behalf of a dear little woman? She is able to pay a little a week and wants to have a real home with some person who, like herself, craves companionship. She wants a place where she can make a pie if she wants to, take care of sick folks in the home, and in turn have them look out for her when she is ill.

"She is a civil war veteran's widow—refined and neat appearing, 70 years old. Does not want to live in an institution. Prefers to be with Protestants. She thinks maybe in this big city there is a place for her—somewhere where lonesome hearts like her own are calling. She wants companionship. Has sheets and other bedding, carpets, mirrors, and pictures which she wants to bring with her.

"If you do use things like this in your column I know there will be a grateful old soul whose tears today worried me. MISS D."

This appeal is so true and so pathetic that it cannot fail to touch the heart of all of us. Imagine this sweet old person craving the companionship of which she is deprived. I trust this plea in her behalf meets with success.

No Money for Clothes.

"I am trusting that through you I may receive help, as so many others have done. Three months ago my husband's pay was cut so much that we find we barely have enough for food and cannot buy any clothes. I wonder if some kind reader has clothing that she isn't using that would mean so much to me for my 2 year old little girl. Winter is coming on. I can't buy any warm clothes for her so she can get out for airing. I can sew, so any clothing that can be made over will be highly appreciated. I am in no condition to work myself or I could help out and not ask for aid.

"MRS. A. J. J."

Who of you has just the thing for Mrs. J.'s little girl? She can cut down and make over things that are too large, and whatever you can do for her will be deeply appreciated.

Artists Can Help.

"I am studying commercial art in my spare hours at night. Cannot afford to buy any books. If any artist has any lessons, lesson plates, or other books on the above subject he no longer needs, I would gladly call for same or pay postage if out of city. J. J."

If you can comply with this request, the address of the ambitious young man is at your service.

Making a Quilt.

"Will you kindly ask if any of your readers has some silk pieces? I have a quilt started and not enough pieces to finish. Will gladly call for them.

"MRS. N."

I do hope some rag bags will be gone through with good results, so that the patch work quilt can be finished up quickly by this eager worker.

FOR AND BY BUSINESS GIRLS

By Loretta King.

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Miss Loretta King, The Tribune, Chicago.

ARE WOMEN PERSEVERING?

ABOUT a month ago it happened that Ann's firm had a good job for a girl at its disposal. It was to be something of an experiment, putting a girl in this job, as a man had always done the work before. The position is that of assistant to the purchasing agent, and for a corporation as large as the one Ann works for, it means that the job is a fancy one.

When it was decided by the firm's officers that they would try out a woman in his job and hire some one whose previous business experience would enable her to qualify for the position, Ann asked the purchasing agent—in whose hands the selection of his assistant rested—if he would interview a friend of hers with a view to giving her application special consideration.

He assured Ann that he'd be glad to consider her friend, as he had nobody in mind for the job and was, in fact, a little at a loss where to look for the right sort of person.

Ann had told us at the time this matter came up that she thought her friend, Babbs, would be ideal for the job and she considered the firm in luck to get her. She was intelligent, Ann had said, besides being well educated. She hadn't had much business experience but what she had would fit her for the job.

Up to our entrance into the war she had done nothing, really, but play. But in the latter part of 1917, after her fiance had been ordered to France for active service, she devoted herself, to the exclusion of all social activities, to war work. She developed a faculty for securing, sometimes by judicious buying, more often by begging or borrowing, all the supplies for the local branch of her particular war charity.

She was so good at that sort of thing that she soon made a reputation for herself among all the war relief organizations, and it wasn't long before she was offered a paying job on the purchasing staff of one of the big reliefs. She continued in that position until six months after the war, but from then on she has tried four or five jobs, but has never been satisfied with one of them for long at a time.

When Ann suggested her as a possibly suitable assistant to the purchasing agent she only remembered her unusual success in her war job. She overlooked her subsequent restless moving about from one job to another. If she had stopped to think about that, she says, she would have hesitated to recommend her for any position with the firm, in spite of her previous good record.

Babbs was given the job all right. She started in with a flourish and made a favorable impression on everybody there. Ann is sure that that job was the opportunity of Babbs' life. There is hardly any limit, she says, to the success she might have made. But after the excitement of the first few weeks wore off, she grew restless and dissatisfied. The job became irksome, and without a word of warning to Ann, or to anybody else, she left.

Ann was furious about it, of course, and the first thing she said when she met us was that she'd never recommend another friend of hers for a job again. She supposed, she said, that they'd never take anybody at the office on her recommendation after this. Ann talked to Babbs last night, and found her perfectly unconcerned about what she'd done. It had never occurred to her that Ann would mind her leaving like that. She had no complaint to make about the job, but she wanted to make an out-of-town visit for a week and the only way to do it, she said, was to give up the job. She could always get another just as good, she told Ann defiantly.

"I admit," said Ann, "that I made a mistake in judgment when I introduced Babbs to our purchasing agent. I might have known better than to trust her after her record of the last two years."

I felt as baldy as Ann did over Babbs' defaulting on her job like that. She not only passed up what was probably the greatest opportunity of her life and cast a doubt in the minds of Ann's employers regarding her good judgment, but she eliminated the possibility of another girl's being given a chance at that job. A girl with no more of a conscience than that may seriously affect woman's status in business.

Jack developed the bad habit of climbing on the living room table and pushing off whatever happened to be on it. He had been punished for it several times and the family thought they had broken him of the habit. One day his mother left his dish of cereal and milk on the table when she was called to the phone. On her return, the dish was on the floor while a chair against the table gave evidence of the culprit who was engaged in not noticing his mother.

She began to scold him. Slowly Jack looked around the room, apparently saw the spilled dish for the first time, but immediately looked beyond it to his airedale pup lying on a corner.

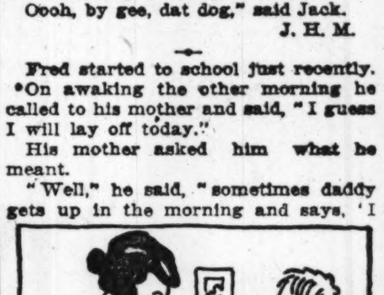
Oooh, by gee, dat dog," said Jack.

J. H. M.

Fred started to school just recently. On awaking the other morning he called to his mother and said, "I guess I will lay off today."

His mother asked him what he meant.

"Well," he said, "sometimes daddy gets up in the morning and says, 'I guess I will lay off today, as I am not feeling well,' and as I go and come from home just like daddy does, I thought I would lay off today, as I don't feel good." I. I.



Mary has always been a mimic and unconsciously imitates her elders in various expressions that she hears. She visited her adoring grandmother, who remarked upon her fast growth.

As soon as Mary returned home she ran to embrace her doll, Hattie.

Holding her off at arm's length for inspection, she fondly exclaimed, "My goodness, Hattie, how you have growed!" H. P.

Audrey was trying to entertain her Cousin Doris and was showing her the family album, explaining each picture—such as, "This was your mamma when she was a baby" and "Here is your daddy when he was a baby."

They came upon a picture post card of a large bird dog that had been double printed. The head of Doris' uncle John had been printed in the place of the dog's head, and Audrey earnestly explained, "This was your Uncle John when he was a dog." G. W.

Chester had been cutting up all day and was in disgrace. Daddy had just had it out with him.

Pretty soon Chester demanded: "Daddy, may I go over and play with Roy?"

"No, you may not!" thundered daddy; "you're not fit company for a nice, well behaved boy like Roy. You stay right here with me!"

"Well, daddy," earnestly persisted Chester, "isn't you afraid I might spoil you, too?" F. J.

A primary teacher was conducting a class in a first grade room. She had written a word on the blackboard. The word was later to be erased and reproduced on paper by the children. Equipped with paper and pencils, the children were told to look carefully and be quiet.

The teacher, walking up and down the aisles during the observation period, noticed a bright little body busily engaged in whispering to his next door neighbor.

Instead of rebuking the child, she passed quietly along, remarking as she passed, "I thought I heard some one talking, but of course it must have been imagination."

Realizing the magnitude of the word for such young children, she smiled, as she asked, "What is imagination?" "Does any one know?"

Up went the hand of the little lad agination. Does any one know?"

"Well, Chester," she asked, "what is it?"

"It's when you think you do and you don't!" E. H. B.

Eatmor Cranberries

From Nature's Own Laboratory!

A cunning theft from the soil—a whiff of the sea—a tinge of frost—and you have the most healthful—most zestful of fruits—Cranberries!

Cranberries are also the most economical of fruits—they cost the least—are easiest to prepare—quickest to cook—and there is no waste!

Try these recipes:

Cranberry Jelly

Cook until soft the desired quantity of cranberries with 1½ pints of water for each two quarts of berries. Strain the juice through a jelly bag.

Measure the juice and heat it to the boiling point. Add one cup of sugar for every two cups of juice; stir until the sugar is dissolved; boil briskly for five minutes; skim, and pour into glass tumblers, porcelain or crockery molds.

Cranberry Sauce

One quart cranberries, two cups boiling water, 1½ to 2 cups sugar. Boil sugar and water together for five minutes; skim; add the cranberries and boil without stirring (five minutes is usually sufficient) until all the skins are broken. Remove from the fire when the popping stops.

Strained Cranberry Sauce

If a strained sauce is preferred, cook the cranberries and water; then press through the strainer, keeping back the skins; add the sugar and finish the cooking as suggested.

Cook cranberries in porcelain-lined, enameled, or aluminum vessels—never in tin.

To be sure of a selection of the choicest varieties—ask for Eatmor Cranberries.

Curling Hair Like This Promotes Its Health

For those whose hair is straight and lank nothing better could be recommended than the Silmerine method. This insures a beautiful curliness which is perfectly natural in appearance, and the health of the hair is not affected as where the heated iron is used. A few ounces of liquid Silmerine—which, of course, can be had at any drug store—lasts a long time, so it is quite economical to use. It is pleasant to use, too, being neither sticky nor greasy, and is easily applied with a clean tooth brush. The hair should be moistened the full length before doing it up. The pretty wavy effect in evidence in three hours is surprising to those who try this simple method the first time. The liquid also serves as an excellent dressing, giving the hair a delightful gloss.

Real Love Stories

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake The Tribune, Chicago.

SHE DID AND HE WAS.

Of course no really nice girl falls in love with an exhibit at a dime museum, but she did and he was.

One evening a half dozen of us went to a carnival and we came to a tent devoted to freaks. The admission was 10 cents and we all went in. There was, of course, the fire eater, the barefooted man who walks on broken glass, the bearded lady, and the tallest man in the world.

One of the girls in our crowd was a chic person with a keen sense of the ridiculous. When we came to the tallest man there stood up before us a strapping boy of about 20 years. He was really a handsome fellow and had gray eyes that danced and laughed back at us as we stood staring at him. The advertisement said that he came from Texas, and he wore a cowboy outfit that showed to good advantage the careless grace of his 7 feet 2 inches.

The barker asked some one of the spectators to come up and stand beside him to show up his extraordinary height. The boy's eyes, roving over the crowd, met an answering sparkle in the eyes of my friend, and his eyes seemed to challenge her to come and stand beside him. The barker caught the by-play and motioned to her to come up., To my surprise she went.

As that was the last exhibit, the crowd soon dispersed. As the boy looked down at her she said, "You never saw Texas."

He said, "What makes you think so?"

"Because Texas produces men with red blood in their veins and no red blooded man will stand up and exhibit himself for 10 cents a look."

Her sarcasm cut like a whip, and he must have had some red blood in his veins, for a deep flush crept up over his face.

The moment she saw the hurt she wanted to heal it, so with an understanding look she asked, "Is it really such a lark?"

He hesitated, taken off his feet by this sudden change, and stammered out, "Y-y-yes, I guess I thought so."

Then she said good-by and we left the tent. His eyes followed her with a homesick look, but she went outside and did the next stunt on the program with as much zest as though nothing had happened..

A few days later they met in a grocery. He had on a white apron and an order book in his hand. She gave him her order, and as he wrapped the packages he said, "You know I sort of lost my taste for that job, so I quit the show and found something to do to tide me over."

It was her turn to be confused now, but she managed to retort, "O, I'm a regular little missionary," and walked out of the store.

They became good friends; that friendship ripened into love, and soon they are to be married. A. L. S

"DANDERINE"

Grows Thick, Heavy Hair

35-Cent Bottle Ends All Dandruff, Stops Hair Coming Out

Ten minutes after using Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp. Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them, helping the hair to grow long, strong and luxuriant One application of Danderine makes thin, lifeless, colorless hair look youthfully bright, lustrous, and just twice as abundant.

Our 56th Anniversary Sale

OUR 56th Anniversary SALE

Fifty-six years ago Joseph Spiegel founded what was to be the greatest of all furniture companies.

Little did he think at that time that such growth as fifty-six years have brought would be the direct result of so simple a motto as—COURTESY—HONESTY—SINCERITY.

Today there exists a large mail order department, four stores in Chicago and thirty-one other stores in twenty-eight large cities; the combined business being the largest in the world.

The strict adherence to the principles adopted fifty-six years ago is the reason that we are today truly—the Home of Home Outfits.

The Deft Max Again, and a Second Sangster

Beerbohm's Forthcoming "Even Now" Recalls Facile Whimsicalities—Margaret Sangster the Second's "Island of Faith" a True Thing—Mr. Brooks' "Hints to Pilgrims" and the Price of a Fact.

Last week's composite list of best sellers at five leading Chicago book stores was:

FICTION.

"If Winter Comes," by A. S. M. Hutchinson.
"Dangerous Ages," by Rose Macaulay.
"Far to Seek," by Maude Diver.
"Ursula Trent," by W. L. George.
"Erik Dorn," by Ben Hecht.
"Her Father's Daughter," by Gene Stratton Porter.

NONFICTION.

"Outline of History," by H. G. Wells. (The new and cheaper edition has much increased the number of readers of the "Outline.")
"Queen Victoria," by Lytton Strachey.
"Mirrors of Washington" (anonymous).

AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

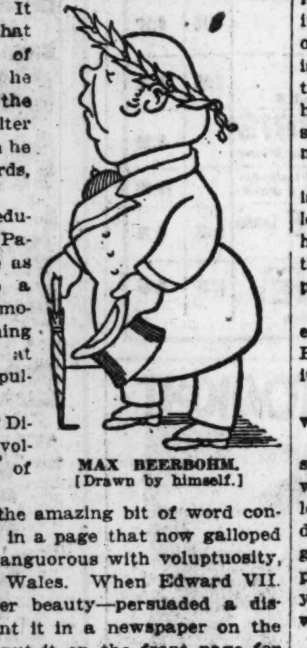
The six books most in demand at the public library last week were:

"Main Street," by Sinclair Lewis.
"Alice Adams," by Booth Tarkington.
"Dust," by Mr. and Mrs. Haldeman-Julius.
"Outline of History," by H. G. Wells.
"Queen Victoria," by Lytton Strachey.
"Mirrors of Washington" (anonymous).

By Eye Witness.

To be published soon in this country by the Duttons are Max Beerbohm's latest essayettes, grouped under the title "And Even Now." Since the "Roundabout Papers" of Thackeray there have been no essays in precisely that strain save Max's—playful, plaintive, carefully wrought, yet seeming casual. It is the facility of his touch that makes them the despair of thicker fingered men. Once he packed pages of criticism on the calculated melodies of Walter Pater into one sentence when he confessed, in thirty-seven words, that he was——

". . . bored by that sedulous ritual wherewith he [Pater] laid out every sentence as in a shroud—hanging like a widower, long over its marmoreal beauty or ever [meaning "before"] he could lay it at length in his book, its sepulchre."



MAX BEERBOHM.
[Drawn by himself.]

That is from the essay "Diminuendo" in the little volume entitled "The Works of Max Beerbohm."

In the same essay comes the amazing bit of word conjuring in which he described in a page that now galloped with incident and now was languorous with voluptuosity, the career of the Prince of Wales. When Edward VII. died I—because it was sheer beauty—persuaded a distracted night editor to reprint it in a newspaper on the plea that it was news. He put it on the front page for both reasons. It is the passage beginning, "Around me seethed swirls, eddies, torrents, violent cross currents of human activity."

"Diminuendo," by the way, was written in 1895 in Chicago—of all places. It is the one in which Max released that other treasure, "Only Art with a capital H gives any consolations to her henchmen."

The "Works" was followed by another volume, e'en smaller, entitled "More," and in it was another of his empurpled pages—the one on the vicissitudes of the ordinary man's life—in the essay "Some Words on Royalty." "But, who," it began, "shall cast the horoscope of an ordinary child? Who knows the vicissitudes of his journey?"—and so on.

A clever man. He might have been great, but life ran in ways too pleasant.

The Reviewer in the Background.

MARGARET E. SANGSTER THE SECOND.

A reviewer may well keep his hands off and his views in the background when a young writer demonstrates in the first two pages of her first novel a touch at once so firm, so spacious, and so unforced as is here displayed:

> There is a certain section of New York that is bounded upon the north by 14th street, upon the south by Delancy. Folk who dwell in it seldom stray farther west than the Bowery, rarely cross the river that flows sluggishly on its eastern border. They live their lives out with something that might be called a feverish stolidity, in the dim crowded flats, and upon the thronged streets.
> To the people who have homes on Central Park West, to the frail winged moths who flutter up and down Broadway, this section does not exist. Its poor are not the picturesque poor of the city's Latin quarter, its criminals seldom win to the notoriety of a front page and inch high headlines; it almost never produces a genius for the world to smile upon—its talent does not often break away from the undefined, but none the less certain, limits of the district.
> It is curious that this part of town is seldom featured in song or story, for it is certainly neither dull nor unproductive of plot. The tenements that loom, canyonlike, upon every hand, upon every side are filled to overflowing with human drama; and the stilted little parks are so teeming with romances of a summer night that only the book of the ages would be big enough to hold them—were they written out! Life beats like some great wave up the dim alleyways—it breaks, in a shattered tide, against rocklike doorways. The music of a street band, strangely sweet, despite its shrillness, rises triumphantly above the tumult of pavement venders, the crying of babies, the shouting of small boys, and the monotonous voices of the womenfolk.
> In almost the exact center of this district is the Settlement House—a brown building that is tall and curiously friendly. Between a great hivelike dwelling place and a noisy dance hall it stands valiantly like the soldier of God that it is! And through its wide open doorway come and go the girls who will gladly squander a week's wage for a bit of satin or a velvet hat; the shabby, dull eyed women who, two years before, were carefree girls themselves; the dreamers and the ones who have never learned to dream. For there is something about the Settlement House—and about the tiny group of earnest people who are the heart of the Settlement House—that is like a warm hand stretched out in welcome to the poor and the needy, to the halt in body and the maimed in soul, and to the casual passerby.

So Much Told So Sparingly.

Thus, in Miss Margaret E. Sangster's "The Island of Faith," the outlines and the promise of problems, passions, trials, achievements, humors, and emphatic individualities are sketched in with strokes not bold or capricious, but sparing, steady, clear, and artfully disposed. The note curiously unites temperateness with a certain veiled poignancy. Such writing, so compact and yet so fraught with tender allusions to a score of the manifestations of existence as it somehow gets itself uttered on the lower East Side of the metropolis, is of value both as a detached specimen of what writing can be and as a sign, not of promise alone, but of high achievement, manifested by the bearer of a celebrated name who has yet to become celebrated.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

By Fanny Butcher.

Last summer in a bed which looked out at the ominous, snow-etched grayness of Long's peak, with a battalion of gloomy thoughts perching on her shoulders, prodding her mind into fears of being seriously ill a thousand miles from a home, the Tabloid person read the galley proofs of a book.

No book could have been read under less favorable circumstances.

EDNA FERBER.
[Bachrach Photo.]

Three or four other books had been started, listlessly read for a few pages, and as listlessly allowed to slip out of uninterested fingers. Almost in despair of finding anything that could take my mind off the steady thump-thump of a heart that beat in temples, in finger tips, in resounding thuds in a frame that had housed it for years almost unbeknownst that it existed, I started a novel. It amused me; it made me a little sad now and then, but it gave me back the feeling that, as Eunice Tietjens says, the dream goes on. By the sheer human realness of it it made me feel that one obstreperous set of insides that shrieked unhappiness for one person was only a part of the song of mankind, whose melody is joy, whose accompaniment is sorrow.

Soppy way to feel, perhaps, about a book, but so it made a somewhat crusty and uncomfortable reviewer feel—it was so honest a picture of the simple hunger of three lives for freedom from the discomfort of maladjustment.

Last night, wholly mended, I read that novel again. I felt the same confidence in it that I had felt in Colorado, a confidence that the dream goes on, the song sings itself forever. So it wasn't merely because I was ill and it diverted me that I thought "The Girls" is a fine piece of work. The reason, I figured out, that it seems so good is because it is the reality of what Edna Ferber has been trying to do ever since she started writing, the reality of her dream, which she nearly realized in the "Fanny Herself," which she did realize in the picture of Fanny's mother.

It is, in the most honest sense of the word, human. It is the human you, the human me, the human Aunt Charlotte Thrift, aged 74, who lives across the street; the human Lottie Payson, aged 32, who lives next door, and the human Charley Kemp, aged 18, the self-sufficient, proud, sturdy girl who lives on the corner.

Because Edna Ferber is a "popular" writer many readers are going to think "The Girls" is only a popular novel. But the honest critic who reads it will feel its reality, its proud fineness.

Because Edna Ferber is too real a person herself to yerp when things go wrong, her book doesn't yerp.

It might have been dour. It might have been full of sobs. It is, however, so amusing that even the lazy reader will like it. It is a Chicago story, of the days when Charlotte Thrift's lover marched off to the civil war and of the days when Charley Kemp's lover went, unwillingly, to the great war and Lottie Payson went willingly and returned proudly. It is—but when you read it you will proclaim your own enthusiasm for a piece of honest, simple, good work.

Something Grim Out of Finland.

"The Song of the Blood Red Flower," the first novel by Johannes Linnankoski, a Finn, to be available in English to Americans, has stirred the exclusive circles of literary criticism into violent splattering of ink on white paper.

There are those who say it is Jurgen-esque, meaning that it's pas pour jeunes filles, and there are those who say it's Jurgen-esque, meaning that it celebrates the realization by a man, after he has pulled all the petals off the blood red flower, that he has destroyed the thing which he thought the most beautiful creation in the world.

Some say it is twaddle, others that it is a masterpiece.

It is a pilgrim's progress through the gaudy, primrose paths and his sudden realization that the everlasting bonfire is at the end of the flower-strewn gayety.

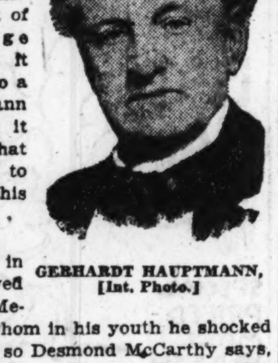
Personal Glimpses of the Writers.

There is a report—authenticated—that Gerhardt Hauptmann has finished his "Der Grosse Traum," a sort of Divine Comedy written in terzinas. A Viennese critic who claims to have seen it says: "Hauptmann has written a great history of the German people, not objectively, as a historian would, but in a spirit of passionate subjective charge and complaint. He began it years ago. It has grown into a mighty volume. Hauptmann has completed it and laid it aside for the generations that come after him." It is not to be published until after his death.



GERHARDT HAUPTMANN.
[Int. Photo.]

There's something ironic in the way England has received Bernard Shaw's "Back to Methuselah." His own people, whom in his youth he shocked at every breath, are actually, so Desmond McCarthy says, "respectful" in their reception of "Back to Methuselah." "Not," he adds, "the kind of reception that would have gratified the Shaw of earlier days."

A friend of Sir Hall Caine—whose "The Master of Man" is said to be stilling instead of raising its author—has a few choice words to say about him. The friend's name is Orton Tewson. He is a British newspaper man. He ought to sell his name to a popular novelist. He says of the author: "His eyes are like living hot lumps of coal. They remind me very much of the orbs possessed by the late J. Pierpont Morgan. In fact, I have frequently noted that the eyes of many of the world's great men all have this curious quality."

Goodness! He Gave Up a Pension.

W. H. Hudson has resigned his civil list pension of £150 a year because he no longer needs it. That seems to mean that he is finally being appreciated as a writer of the rarest and most lovely prose. Any one who hasn't read his "Green Mansions" is herewith presented with three or four hours of pure literary happiness in the suggestion that he repair his omission immediately. Then he will read "Far Away and Long Ago" and "A Little Boy Lost," and the books about birds and all of the rest of Hudson that he can lay his hand upon.

Turning the Tables on Teacher.

"The Wonder World We Live In," by Adam Gowans Whyte, is "for children whose eyes are opening to the wonders of the world." Mr. Whyte is an Englishman who feels that life would be more amusing if instead of the teachers asking all the questions the pupils did the questioning and the teachers the answering, that although six times eight is a necessary part of any child's education, why a bunny has a white tail is more intriguing. He has written a book which I frankly enjoy, about all sorts of natural things—the sun, how old roses change into new, how man is naturally religious, how our savage ancestors live, double breathing fish, how the Bible came to be written, the custom of right and wrong, the difference between guessing and knowing, the place of exact science in life. I should have thought it a fascinating book when I was a child. He writes as though he were talking to his own child—man to man.

English Play with Purpose Scores on Merit as Drama

By James Whittaker.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—[Special.]—An English play with a purpose has come to the George M. Cohan theater, where it will try to prove that its great success in London had been due to its excellence as an entertainment quite as much as to its force as a protest against a strange medieval defect in English law and custom. In America, where divorce laws are facile and enlightened, "A Bill of Divorcement" will not be helped to success by violent attacks by the clergy and enthusiastic acclamations from Fabians and Shavians. It happens that the divorce laws of the state of New York provide that a woman must remain tied for life to a diseased or insane husband. But New York wives can get New Jersey divorces easily, and with no greater addition to the expense of the operation than a few 6 cent Hudson tube fares. In England, totally surrounded by water to keep foreign vices out and its own vices in, a woman is living dead if she has the bad luck to draw a defective mate. The home she inhabits with the man she married may be his castle. It is her sepulcher.

CLEMENCE DANE.

Clemence Dane unwhites this sepulcher in her play. She might have done this brutally and awkwardly. A young author's greatest temptation comes when he discovers a stench. It is so easy and thrilling to spread it. But Miss Dane has the same tact with which Ibsen handled the delicate problem of "Ghosts." Only a woman or a genius could approach the rottenness which existed in the family of the Fairfields of Kent and cleanse it as tactfully, decently, beautifully as it is done in "A Bill of Divorcement." And Miss Dane is a bit of both.

A Husband Divorced Unawares.

To put her play in motion Miss Dane found it necessary to adopt a premise. The premise is explained in the theater programs. You are asked by the author to imagine that it is the year 1932, that slow moving British reformations have finally amended the list of grounds for divorce to include disease of body or mind, and that even the most conservative citizens have begun to accept the benefits of the reform.

The divorce is that of the mistress of an exceedingly well staged English country house, an embodiment of fearful conservatism in cheerful, lasting interior decorating. Her former husband, having been pronounced incurably insane in that form which includes cessation of memory, knows nothing of the divorce nor of the new laws which permit the divorce, nor, for that matter, of anything whatsoever since the day of 1916 when a shell burst close to him in a ditch in Flanders and left him a whimpering, giggling thing.

Mrs. Fairfield and her 17 year old daughter are in the midst of final preparations for a Christmas day remarriage of the former to the man of her second, more fortunate choice, when the first husband, escaped from the London asylum, walks through the French window into the living room and forthwith demonstrates himself as sane as any Briton by asking for tea.

Miss Dane, you see, has involved her great dramatic talent in one of those pro and con situations so dear to the English stage mind. Even the plays of our queer cousins are parliamentary. Miss Dane embraces the dilemma. Her second act is full of a doctor and a curate, Whig and Tory, who try to fight this thing out with words. But Miss Dane, with a charming humorous twist of her feminine mind, does a new thing to these two straw men of the Shavian comedy. She empties them of their straw. In a scene so well contrived that it does not seem contrived at all, Dr. Allott and the Rev. Christopher Pumphrey talk themselves and each other to a stalemate. With their throats still full of more talk about eugenics and ethics, they are gently hooked off the stage by the adroit Miss Dane, who resumes her play where it was without them. The writing of these two as needless baggage of the drama may be a weakness of the play, but it is first rate drama criticism. It might cure the English stage of them forever.

Great Moments Mark Play.

It is the daughter who finds the sacrifice which will solve the problem, and makes it. Since she has the taint of corrupted gray matter in her blood, she will forego marriage and constitute herself her father's nurse and attendant. Her mother, of clean blood, will be free to remarry and bear other and better children.

What makes "A Bill of Divorcement" a good play is the unerring instinct with which Miss Dane chooses the human rather than the biological elements of this story for her series of scenes. Shaw, of course, could have made such stuff as the debate between physician and clergyman in the second act palatable as a debate. Miss Dane makes it entertaining as the comedy of two old men being thoroughly and windily useless in a crisis. And of several moments in the play (I am thinking now of the undemonstratively tragic final scene, where the daughter makes sacrifice of her life and her love without so much as the sterile consolation of knowing that those who benefit know that a sacrifice is being made, and of that other bitter scene where the weak willed elder woman fails miserably in her task of persuading her first husband to accept exile and, instead, bears his victorious caress with concealed loathing)—of these moments Miss Dane makes drama which you may allow to wring your heart without shame.

The players of this play are in some ways an amusing relic. It contains no less than three actors who strut, have hooked noses, brush their hair back, and intone plain English in the deeply thrilling bass which went away from the American stage with Lillian Russell's spangled trunks. Even Allan Pollock, the Englishman who acts the temporarily sane victim of the good laws, is a bit more actor than our taste in acting requires. But Katherine Cornell joins the thin ranks of good American players with her fine embodiment of the fine girl who, thanks to Miss Cornell, knows how to make a sacrifice without being heard to wail on the other side of Broadway.

Mr. Tarkington's "Mumps."

The fever for writing bad plays usually racks the writing human when he is younger than Booth Tarkington, who has nevertheless succumbed in the writing of "The Wren," which we now have in the Gaiety theater. It is most often a disease of adolescence and quite harmless in that period. But mumps kill adults. Mr. Tarkington is in a bad crisis of bad play writing, and we can tremble a bit for his talent.

MISS HELEN HAYES.
[Lewis-Smith Photo.]

Helen Hayes, the delicious youngster of "Bab," is the wren of the title. She portrays a simple and rather annoying little Miss Fixit of a New England seacoast village, whose occupation in the three acts is the choosing of exact and moral positions for all the furniture and all the characters.

It is characterization which will not thank Miss Hayes for all of the delightful and simple skill which she lavishes on it. You may detect in these comments a certain bitterness. It is mostly the bitterness of displeasure with Mr. Tarkington that he did no better for Miss Hayes, who has a right to his best.

We could forgive Mr. Tarkington his windy elaborations of the Way-Down-East comedy principle, his several characters stolen from the farm rubric of Miller's compiled American humor, and the eleventh unfunny hired man seen on the disastrous stage of this early fall, but we cannot pardon him that he did not write Helen Hayes' appealing charm into Helen Hayes' part. It would have been so easy and pleasant to have written the play with a picture of Helen Hayes beside the typewriter.

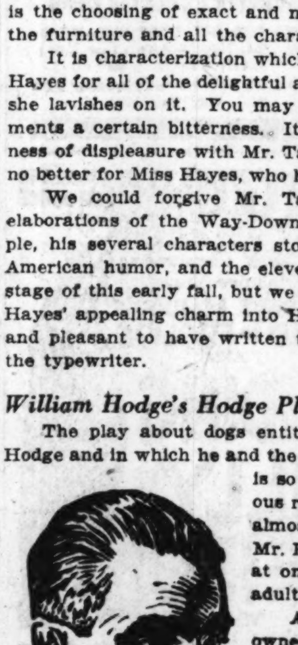
William Hodge's Hodge Play.

The play about dogs entitled "Beware of Dogs," composed by William Hodge and in which he and the dogs are now acting in the Broadhurst theater, is so innocent in its merriment that certain humorous references to the morals of the latter are spoken almost shudderingly by the former. This illustrates Mr. Hodge's method, which is to furnish amusement at once uncensorable and not unbearable for some adult audiences.



FROM A PHOTO BY MOFFETT
WILLIAM HODGE.

At the wrong end of every dog leash is the owner. Mr. Hodge, as an upright and affable young lawyer temporarily engaged in running a dog farm, finds trouble at both ends of the leash. Between the vices of the dogs and their owners Mr. Hodge stands, a patient object of snarls, until the time comes for him to make a Hodge end to a Hodge play. Then he turns on human and canine tormentors and lashes them into submission with an old time Hodge speech, full of the Hodge quiet, facile, and nasal irony. Enfolding the Hodge girl in his arms, he speaks the moral of his essay on dog rearing: "Never again."

The play is full of the peaceful bonhomie and untaxing mirth which the very electric lights before the Broadhurst, arranged to spell Mr. Hodge's name, promise. It is a restful form of amusement that

Musical Programs Are Important in the Film Houses

By Edward Moore

One of the items in a recent cargo of news concerning the Chicago Symphony orchestra brought up an important, if lately developed, part that theaters of the flickering films are playing in musical affairs. The item was a brief one, merely stating that Jacques Gordon, the new concert master of the orchestra, had been occupying the first chair of the violins in the Capitol theater of New York.

More and more are the major movie houses going in for elaborate music. More and more does the tendency give pause to the managers of symphony orchestras in making up their contracts for a new season. The movie houses want music and are willing to pay for it. The orchestral managers must compete to keep up their own standards. Consequently, there is a distinct atmosphere of cheerfulness among the players, who are thereby enabled to vend their services at any time and very nearly at any place they desire.

There are some whose personal preferences for their own musical standards cause them to accept a financial sacrifice in order that standards may be maintained. Mr. Gordon, it is believed, classifies among that order. The majority of players have the none too astonishing theory that the best salary is desirable.

Casual journeys among the homes of celluloid have brought to attention the Tivoli, the Roosevelt, the Riviera, the Pantheon, the Howard, and the Senate, to select at random a few names out of the scores appearing in the advertising columns.

Here, as perhaps in some of the others, one finds orchestras of forty pieces or thereabouts, frequently uniformed, generally alert, and always a distinct part of the entertainment. There is a pause to attract attention, the conductor steps out of a side door, grasps his baton in the full glory of the spotlight, and the music begins.

Generally it is a standardized overture that is played as a prelude. One impresario of the movies says that his orders to his musical forces are to play nothing that is not found in the records and rolls. It is sound psychology. Audiences always react to music that they know well, and frequently do not to the unfamiliar.

Since film shows must move on a rigid and unrelenting time schedule, there are no encores, but there is always applause. Well there may be, for most of the orchestras play with great gusto. The overture, however, is only a small part of their duties.

The progress of the picture is accompanied by appropriate music, and in the selection thereof the imagination of the musical director has a chance. I have heard bits of Beethoven symphonies, cullings from Tschaikowsky and numerous other Russian symphonists, protracted excerpts from the operas, and not the barrel organ operas either.

Curiously enough, there is not a great amount of popular music. That is left to the organist. For, since orchestras may not play indefinitely without a chance to breathe, at a given signal the orchestra ceases and at the same instant an organ takes up the melodic thread.

The organist may be as much of a scenic figure as the conductor of the orchestra, with as much spotlight and as much glory. His specialty, outside of his film accompaniment, is frequently the latest anthem of the people, played as a solo on the most fluttery stop of the instrument, with the words flashed out a couple of lines at a time on the screen. The audience does not sing at such times. An abashed and gentle humming is its most forcible manifestation.

Between films a musical act on the stage is the normal order. These vary from rather good to unbelievably bad. I have heard acts moving me to the belief that both actors and managers should be restrained by special legislative act from all future concern with public entertainment.

These, I hasten to say, are the exception. On the other hand, I have

Paging the Drama League, Lest More Good Plays Die

By Sheppard Butler.

The blight which has ringed Chicago with desolation, theatrically, reached into town last night and sent three entertainments into the silences. From the Olympic "The Broken Wing" departed to thrill no more audiences for the present, and its crashing airplane will gather dust in some mournful storehouse. "The Detour" left the Central, headed for undeserved oblivion, and at the Great Northern "Honeydew" said an untimely farewell to the strains of Mr. Zimbalist's pleasant music.

It was our first experience of the current sorrows of the showmen, for though many plays have fallen by the wayside elsewhere, we have been patronizing the theater and providing the one refuge in the general disaster. One refuge is not enough for all, however. Plays, like the Wandering Jew, must travel or perish, and the owners of the three that have left us, surveying the generally unprofitable state of things, decided to let 'em die.

FROM A PHOTO BY SAL HILL
MISS LOLA FISHER, in "Honors Are Even,"
at the La Salle.

"Honeydew" was to have gone to Cleveland—indeed, was advertised there. But something happened, and the story is that the players, offered their choice of accepting a cut in salary or quitting altogether, voted to quit. This reversed the established order of things, for it is a tradition that many shows win prestige but no profits in New York and make their money elsewhere. "Honeydew" prospered at the New York Casino, but languished when it left Broadway.

That "The Broken Wing" should be withdrawn is strange, for this was melodrama of the sure-fire sort, replete with the surprises and excitements that ordinarily mean wide popularity. A safe venture, you would think—taking "The Broken Wing" from town to town in the middle west. But those who know best say the box offices outside Chicago are desert places, with shekels scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth.

"The Detour's" demise is cause for genuine regret. Here was a fine, simple, honest play, ably acted by people who know how. You will go far to find anything better in the theater than Augustin Duncan's characterization of the dull farmer in the piece. This was in every detail a capital performance: realism at its best. An evening at the Central last week was an evening of delight. But nobody cared, and now the playhouse is dark.

Where was the Drama league when "The Detour" was here? Where were the uplifters who want better things on the stage and neglect them when they arrive? Where were the zealots who rail at the public because it will not support "little theaters," but who themselves will support nothing? A few more plays like "The Detour" and the American drama will be better off, even if some of the amateurs have to forego their own adventures in play-acting to patronize something worth while.

Mr. Dillingham Joins the Benefactors.

To the list of producing managers who have expressed themselves, by word or deed, as favoring a return to normalcy in theater prices must now be added the name of Charles Dillingham, known in Chicago thus far this season as the proprietor of the most expensive show in town. Mr. Dillingham still clings to the peak of local box office rates with "Tip-Top," at the Colonial, but he atones for it by bringing Barney Bernard to the Olympic tonight at the good old price of $2 for the best seat in the house. Except for the experimental price cutting made on behalf of "The Broken Wing" in the middle of its engagement, this is the lowest figure we have encountered in recent months.

It is, nevertheless, a genuine harbinger of easier times, if the showmen are to be believed. The movement toward lower prices is not yet general, but reductions are being made here and there about the country, and Mr. Ziegfeld, Mr. Morosco, Mr. Harris, and some others have admitted, in print, that $4, $4.50, and $5 is no longer the right amount to charge for a theater ticket.

FROM A PHOTO BY
in "Two Blocks Away"
at the Olympic.

In some cases the managers have encountered a quaint dilemma. They have reduced their box office rates, only to find that it has hurt their business instead of helping it. This they explain by the theory that the public has become accustomed to high prices and has accepted them as labels of merit, assuming that a $4 show must, in the nature of things, be better than one priced at $2.50. The theory may be wrong, but it has had something to do with the delay in getting back to pre-war levels.

In Chicago it is no secret that the chief obstacle to more economical playgoing is that amazing captain of industry, Miss Florence Couthoui, under whose auspices theater tickets are sold in most of the downtown hotels. Miss Couthoui is a modest genius who has quietly built up what is virtually a monopoly in this particular trade, and she is a power to be reckoned with by any manager who brings a play into Chicago.

She is no scalper in the old-fashioned sense, for she sells at box-office prices, receiving her commission from the theaters and not from her patrons. Thus she performs a genuine service, and in some quarters she has been hailed as the first broker who has really solved the vexatious scalping problem.

But Miss Couthoui has taken an uncompromising stand against reducing the cost of theatergoing, and her insistence has added considerably to the price of tickets hereabouts. In several instances, when successful plays have come to town, she has protested to the managers that they were not charging enough. Some of the managers have refused to listen, but some have allowed themselves to be persuaded. At one theater, it is said, a complete set of tickets had been printed before Miss Couthoui held her conference with the producer of the scheduled entertainment. After the conference the first tickets were thrown away and an order for a new set, bearing higher prices, was rushed to the printer.

Parenthetically, it is interesting to note that the producer of the most successful play in American theatrical history was one of those who declined to change his plans when urged to do so by Miss Couthoui. That is why "Lightnin'," at the Blackstone, may be seen from the main floor for $2.50.

It Wasn't True, but It Was a Good Story.

This column last Sunday contained a yarn about "The Bad Man," relating how the laughter of its first audiences moved Holbrook Blinn to play the piece as a comedy rather than a melodrama. I was skeptical about the tale and said so, as did Alexander Woollcott of the New York Times, who told it first. Now comes William Harris Jr., who bought the play and staged it, with this:

"That legend you printed about 'The Bad Man' sounds almost as if it had been written by a Russian correspondent. I liked particularly the bit where Holbrook Blinn gathered his company about him in the 'Listen, my children' pose and informed them that hereafter the play was to be a comedy. Do you mind a few facts on the subject?

MISS NANCY GIBBS
in "The Whirl of New York" at the Great Northern.

"The original idea of 'The Bad Man,' as expressed to me by Mr. Porter Emerson Browne, the author, was satirical. His idea was to write a play in which the chief character should wander through a series of circumstances, advocating the doctrine of lawlessness. You will perceive that this was the direct opposite of those characters who exerted a 'good' influence, as, for instance, in 'The Servant in the House' and 'The Passing of the Third Floor Back.' Mr. Browne then chose the Mexican border for his setting, because of his recent experiences there and his desire to portray one of the Mexican bandits. He wrote the first act as bald melodrama purposely, so that this should be the setting in which 'The Bad Man' might work. The play was bought and produced as a satirical melodrama."

To which Mr. E. A. Bachelder, manager of the company in Chicago, adds: "Porter Emerson Browne is the humorist who, sent to Mexico to describe the conditions caused by Carranza, Villa, Huerta, and other nonassimilating forces, sent back the much quoted illumination of the Mexican war situation: 'When the patriotic revolutionists went to capture Mexico City the noon whistle blew, so the army threw down its guns and went to lunch.' I submit that one sentence and the reminder of the many magazine articles Mr. Browne has written with stings in their tails, during and since the war, as evidence that he saw satirical possibilities in Francisco Villa and other generalissimi to give him the basis for 'The Bad Man'."

And there you are. Has anyone else a little story he would like to have printed and denied, thus making two items of publicity grow where but one grew before?

Here and There in the Theaters.

The Shuberts, though they have been acquiring new theaters right and left in recent months, will retire from the Studebaker a year hence. By the terms of a deal concluded last week the Michigan avenue playhouse, on Oct. 1, 1922, will pass into the hands of a company headed by Frank A. P. Gazzolo, owner of the Victoria and Imperial theaters and long a prominent figure in the affairs of the outlying playhouses. No change in the kind of entertainment given at the Studebaker is contemplated, nor will the number of Shubert theaters in Chicago be lessened, since a new Shubert play-may be heartily recommended to those who have had too much of other kinds and to those who have had too little of any kind.

The Effects of a Sad Ending.

"Love Dreams" at the Times Square theater has the names of the eight chorus girls printed in the cast and is called a "melody drama" in the printed program, all by way of persuading me to tell you that it is a very unusual and meritorious musical comedy. It is just another musical comedy. It ends unexpectedly, after Miss Vera Michelena and two comedians have worn harem clothes, on a very sad note. Miss Michelena does not fall into a lover's arms. The curtain drops on her, righteous but dejected, waving her little sister bon voyage as she departs with Miss Michelena's tenor.

MISS VERA MICHELENA.
[Moffett Photo.]

Mr. Morosco, the producer and part author, makes a gallant attempt to prove that happy endings to musical comedies are not inevitable. I still think they are inevitable. But you will refuse to be deceived at 11 p. m. by this trick grand opera finish. You will look back over the extensive evening and recollect that it was a musical comedy.

And then you will be disappointed that you do not remember any of the tunes. If any of them are memorable the shock of a finale with tears knocked them out of my mind. I am unable to record the song hit of the piece, if there was one.

Say! Give the Poor Rich Man a Chance!

"EVERYTHING FOR SALE."

Produced by Realart. Directed by Frank O'Connor.

THE CAST.

Helen Wainwright	May MacAvoy
Donald Scott	Eddie Sutherland
Mrs. Wainwright	Kathlyn Williams
Mr. Wainwright	Edwin Stevens
Lee Morton	Richard Tucker
Lillian Lord	Betty Schade

By Mae Tinée.

AREN'T you getting awfully fed up with seeing the poor rich man abused? I am! He hasn't a chance at all in the pictures! If a fellow's got money and wants to marry the girl he's buying her. If her mamma or her aunt desires the marriage, why, the damsel's a chattel and is being offered for sale. The subtitles speak darkly of auction blocks. Turkish harem scenes are deftly inserted to remind you—or inform you—that, Statue of Liberty to the contrary, frail woman is a slave in America allee samee orient.

No nice girl could love a rich man, and no rich man, it seems, has any right to want a nice girl. If she's decent she gets thin yearning for the impecunious artist or architect or something next door, who has been forbidden to enter her presence. Along the same line of reasoning all the noble, manly qualities extant are confined to the mind and body of same poor young man.

Piffle! Somebody get a new thought! In the present instance the grasping Mrs. Wainwright wants her niece, Helen, to marry the fabulously wealthy Mr. Morton. The family is in debt and Mrs. Wainwright needs Mr. Morton badly. Mr. Morton wants Helen. Helen wants an architect. The architect wants Helen. But auntie, right on the job, fairly dazzles her niece into an engagement with Morton.

On the wedding day, however, along comes the architect and gums things up, assisted by the unmercenary Mr. Wainwright. The picture closes leaving you supposedly happy in the fact that Helen and the architect have won out.

But I didn't feel that way.

To begin with, Richard Tucker, I should imagine, is much more the sort of man a woman would lose her head over that Eddie Sutherland. Also, so far as I could see, until the buttinskies got busy, Mr. Morton realy loved Helen and Helen would really have adored Mr. Morton. Of course, she might have had a limousine and a diamond or so and an occasional trip to Europe, but one honestly shouldn't consider those as serious drawbacks.

Then—I didn't so much blame auntie, either, though the picture does make her a bit of a hag. If one can have Morton—why have Scott? With one eye on the film that question furnishes plenty of ground for argument—and I think the argument is all on auntie's side.

Then, Mr. Wainwright, in the present instance, is not to be considered as a sweet, considerate uncle. A jealous cat, rather, I bet you. A failure himself, and so recognized by his wife, he didn't want Mr. Morton in the family to furnish too much contrast. So he borns in, spoils everybody's plans, and gets lots of credit from the scenario writer. He gives me a pain!

Ever since the Bible said it would be hard for a rich man to get into heaven, the pulpits and pictures have been harping on the subject. Good land, the Bible didn't say they COULDN'T get in!

Give 'em a CHANCE!

CLOSEUPS

Wanda Hawley seems a popular child in California. Report says that "leading citizens of Santa Barbara recently gave a ball in her honor, at which the mayor of the city led the grand march with the star."

Tom Santschi will, while resting from his "westerns," act as leading man in a coming Pauline Frederick production.

On Oct. 4 Buster Keaton was 26 years old. [If anybody cares.]

Remarks Viola Dana: "A while ago they were yelling: 'No beer, no work.' Now let's be happy, we've got both." [Not so bad?]

Lila Lee and Walter Hiers have been engaged for the Will Rogers' comedy being produced by Paramount. The darling has no name as yet.

John Harron, brother of the late Robert Harron, is with Goldwyn and will be seen in "The Grim Comedian."

ASK ME! ASK ME!

BERILLA B.: We forwarded the letter for you, and were glad to be of service.

MAIZIE: Shure! For a stamped self-addressed envelope I'll tell you all I know about scenario writing. (Don't forget the stamp.)

MERE JAPANESE: O, but why so "mere"? It was a long sentence, but even yet I don't see anything the matter with it? And as to the news item—that was an unnecessary "who." Yoo hoo—write again! Disraeli? I should say so! Next time be careful where you sit. (Nobody knows what we're talking about, do they?)

MILDRED S.: Ah'm all puffed up! Tell the dramatic critics how you feel about Mr. Stone. He might be able to help you out. And the name isn't "Tiny."

L. M. A.: Bebe Daniels and Alice Brady are with Realart. Address the former at Los Angeles and the latter at 469 5th avenue, New York.

S. A. B.: Perhaps you mean Owen Moore. He played frequently with Mary Pickford in her earlier productions. You'd better be a little more explicit, however. What did the young man look like? Blond or brunette? And when and in what, did he play with Mack Sennett.

MARY D.: You don't love me half as much as I love you for that darling letter!

P. F. M.: Praise be! Now stay on top. Don't you go and let those old waters of adversity wash all over you again. As to the Arbuckle case—stop thinking about it.

R. E. X.: You ask, "Will a film or a scenario writer keep a story without asking?" No, no, indeed. I should prophesy, emphatically not!

MRS. G. H. G.: Mae Tinée thanks you and stands (sits) corrected.

EDITH MASON.
[Van Riel Photo.]

Edith Mason, one of the new decorative as well as musical features of the Chicago Opera association, will make her debut early in the season in the name part of Puccini's "Mme. Butterfly." When Miss Mason sang the rôle at Monte Carlo last spring, Puccini's daughter, who was in the audience, telegraphed her father that it was by far the best performance of the part within memory. Miss Mason, her husband, Giorgio Polacco, the leading conductor of the association; Mary Garden, its general director, and other members of the orggamization, were scheduled to sail for this country on the Aquitania yesterday.

The Theaters

house planned for Clark street will almost certainly be finished by the time the Studebaker is vacated.

Mr. Blinn and "The Bad Man" will leave the Princess at the end of next week, to be followed, as indicated before in these columns, by Miss Madge Kennedy in "Cornered," another of those plays about the engaging crooks.

A special company has been organized to play "Wait 'Till We're Married" in Chicago as soon as a theater can be found for the purpose. The comedy is now current in New York, where they seem to like it.

The Drama league will have 100 seats at the Playhouse tomorrow night for the opening performance of "Miss Lulu Bett." On Tuesday the play will be given under the auspices of the Student Fellowship of Chicago, which has "bought the house."

Players from several Chicago theaters will participate in a special performance at the Garrick this afternoon for the benefit of the Chicago Osteopathic hospital. The program has been arranged by Eddie Cantor and among those who will oblige the customers are Fred Stone, Dorothy Jardon, Chic Sale, Nan Halperin, Lew Hearn, Harry Kelly, Aunt Jemima, Cecil Cunningham, Ciccolini, and Dickenson and Deagon. The star of "Tip Top" will appear in "The Gunman," a travesty by R. H. Burnside, who stages most of the Dillingham entertainments.

The French theater of Chicago will open its season at Kimball hall Tuesday afternoon and evening with performances of De Flers and De Caillavet's "L'Amour Veille." Mme. Mercedes Devries Schmit will have the leading rôle.

The Victoria theater, on the north side, has an impressive list of plays for production by its resident stock company during the year. The piece for this week is "Smilin' Through," which Miss Jane Cowl played at the Cort, and some of those that will follow are "Turn to the Right," "The Passion Flower," "Transplanting Jean," "The Sign on the Door," "Tiger Rose," "Up in Mabel's Room," "Experience," "Shavings," "39 East," and "The Storm." A comprehensive program, one would say.

MISS YVETTE CURRIER
in George White's "Scandals" at the Illinois.
[Schwarz Photo.]

"The Title," a comedy by Arnold Bennett, will have its first American performance in Montreal tomorrow night.

Avery Hopwood's farce, "The Demi-Virgin," in which Miss Constance Farber is making her debut as a player of things without music, proposes to make itself known in New York on Tuesday night, but is having a terrible time about it. When they showed the play in Pittsburgh it was greeted by the critics with such phrases as "too embarrassing even for the blasé," and "bordering on smut." At the end of the week the Pittsburgh police stopped the performances. Then the piece was withdrawn for revision and there was much talk [which came to nothing] of changing the title. And finally, something happened to the booking arrangements and the New York theater for which the play was intended was found to have been occupied by another show. After some scurrying about a playhouse was found, and the Gothamites, after all, are to be regaled as per schedule.

Varied are the uses of authorship. Frederick O'Brien, who wrote "White Shadows in the South Seas," is arranging a dance for Miss Gilda Gray, the wildest they say of the Broadway danseuses, to be used by her in a forthcoming entertainment. It will be called "The South Sea Isle" and will be free and untrammeled in manner.

This week will bring Sir Harry Lauder back to the American stage for an engagement of twenty-two weeks, during which period he will visit the principal cities of the United States, playing one week only in each. As in other years, he will divide the program with a company of entertainers, but the entire second part will be devoted to the unique Lauder songs and characterizations. His first appearance will be in New York tomorrow.

Al Jolson, having done everything else in the theatrical business, is now to try his hand at producing. He has placed in rehearsal a Hawaiian love story entitled "Aloha Lei," written by Ethelbert Hale. The play will open in Stamford next week.

The New Plays

OPENING TONIGHT.

Olympic—Barney Bernard in a new rôle at last after eight seasons of Abe Potash. He is now the old Jewish cobbler in "Two Blocks Away," a comedy by Aaron Hoffman, who wrote "Welcome Stranger," and [with Samuel Shipman] "Friendly Enemies." The supporting cast includes Edna Hibbard, Anne Carpenter, Wallace Erskine, Harold Russell, John Rutherford and Kate Morgan.

La Salle—William Courtenay and Lola Fisher in the Roi Cooper Megrue comedy, "Honors Are Even"—something about the affairs of a playwright and a society butterfly. Megrue is the author of many plays, including "It Pays to Advertise," "Under Cover," and the extraordinarily deft "Tea for Three." Present with Mr. Courtenay and Miss Fisher will be Paul Kelly, Horace Sinclair, Eleanor Woodruff, Mabel Stanton and some others.

Great Northern—"The Whirl of New York," last of the long series of entertainments which have emanated from the New York Winter Garden, and the thirty-first in that illustrious succession. This one started as a revival of "The Belle of New York," Edna May's old piece, but they say it's hardly recognizable now. The long list of players is headed by Dorothy Ward, J. Harold Murray, Nancy Gibbs, Kyra, the dancer, Roy Cummings, Shaun Glenville, Teddy Webb, and Florence Rayfield. There are, according to the press agent, "seven stupendous and odorful stage settings."

OPENING TOMORROW NIGHT.

Playhouse—"Miss Lulu Bett," Zona Gale's footlighting of her own highly successful novel of small town life in the middle west. They liked the play in New York last season—so well, indeed, that it was awarded the $1,000 Pulitzer prize for the best American drama of the year. Carroll McComas and Louise Closser Hale have the principal rôles, and others in the good cast are Catherine Calhoun Doucet, Lois Shore, Beth Varden, John Thorn, Brigham Royce, John Bohn and Russell Harrison.

IMPENDING JOYS.

Oct. 25—At the Cort, Francine Larrimore, whom you remember in "Scandal," as the heroine of Rachel Crothers' "Nice People," a comedy of the smart set.

Oct. 30—At the Princess, Madge Kennedy in "Cornered."

Marcia Dear—

I can just picture your surprise at hearing from me so promptly—but you have probably already discerned the reason—I just couldn't wait to write you on my new stationery! Isn't it exquisite?

You know that lovely social stationery shop on Michigan Avenue—just south of Madison—Well, we stopped in there on our way to the club, to order some visiting cards and when I saw this stationery, I simply couldn't resist, and Jack immediately suggested it for my birthday. Wasn't that lovely?

Then the young lady suggested they design a new monogram for me and well you can see for yourself—isn't it stunning? It is all worked out in my favorite color scheme and designed especially for me.

I never knew letter writing could be so fascinating—I am going to write you every single week—Just watch!

Fondly

Lake Forest Hunt Has Motor Convoy, but Lacks a Fox

By Mme. X.

WHEN the British gentry and farmers abandon fox hunting and cross country riding then, indeed, may we know that the end of "merrie old England" is at hand. There is no other sport so thoroughly intertwined with the life of John Bull as is this one. It is set about with customs and unwritten laws the knowledge of which marks one as either within or without the pale.

A visiting Frenchman once drew his revolver and shot a fox at the end of a run, holding it up in glee as a trophy. The act shocked the entire countryside much more than if he had shot the M. F. H. himself. It placed the whole French nation for the time being in Jericho in the opinion of every Britisher who knew of the deadly deed.

Out at Lake Forest to the north and at Hinsdale to the west enterprising horse lovers are attempting to graft this ancient and honorable Anglo-Saxon sport on a foxless country. These delicious October days offer every excuse and inducement for this effort. In spite of the automobile, riding horseback has increased in popularity of late years, and a cross country ride affords the true lover of this pastime an exquisite delight not to be matched in any other diversion.

Everything There but the Fox.

Lacking the bushy tailed red fox, we supply his place with a lively anise seed bag dragged over a carefully chosen trail, with jumps prepared and fields marked out in a way to make the fox hunting farmer of Cheshire smile. He'd better wait until we've been at the game the five centuries that he has. Our horsemen and women will ride so much harder and faster than any others that foxes will have developed into long legged sprinters unknown in the British isles.

Following the Lake Forest hunt, as the writer did last Wednesday, in a machine run by one of the most fearless, intrepid, and speed loving women drivers in the land, is not without its excitements and perils. I'd match it against any long legged jumping hunter in Lake county. It was a perfect October afternoon, made by an expert in autumn weather. The hounds were cast off in some fields at the south of the Ogden Armour place.

About twenty-five equestrians and a dozen motors assembled for the hunt. Three men added to the gayety of the scene by wearing the traditional pink coats of British hunting fields. They were Francis Johnson, Joseph T. Bowen, and Col. Nicholson. Some of the women rode cross saddle and some rode side saddle. English women have not yet adopted the cross saddle riding. We confess to a decided preference for the newer mode of riding. A good horsewoman, in a smart habit, riding man fashion on a fine animal, is an exhilarating spectacle.

Hounds Seem Scornful.

Trundling over soft country roads, quite a convoy of motor cars accompanied the hunters that day, catching them up at certain indicated points on the route. It was a pretty sight to watch the riders emerge from distant thickets following the hounds across plowed fields. Low, not very dangerous looking jumps had been prepared on each side of the road where we stopped. First, the hounds leaped them in rather scornful fashion, then the riders came along somewhat conscious, onlookers thought, of the gallery. Gracefully their steeds rose to the fences, and as gracefully their riders rode with them.

A few horses refused the jumps at first, though after a little urging all but one yielded to the seduction of the low leap. This equine bolshevik successfully declined the opportunity, and horse and rider disappeared in the distance with a finality that gave a sense of doom to either rider or ridden.

The run ended in a plowed field, where a pair of farm horses yoked to a plow looked with calm contempt at their fellow quadrupeds. The expression of the farmer was noncommittal.

One Rider Has a Fall.

The chief event of the hunt was the spill William E. Clow Jr. had from his horse, a fall that cut his face in a particularly gory manner owing to the fact that he wears eyeglasses. That serious damage was not done to his eyes should be a cause for thankfulness sufficient to make the painful accident almost easily bearable.

Among the women who took advantage of that perfect autumn day to follow the hounds were Mrs. Austin Niblack, her sister, Mrs. Wilhelm, Mrs. David Adler, Mrs. Hugh J. McBirney, Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen Jr. (who looked extremely chic in a high and shining black silk beaver hat which never swerved from its place on her head at any jump), Miss Eleanor Bradley, Miss Elizabeth Chase, Miss Patricia Hasler, and Miss Mary Prentiss.

A natural outcome of the Onwentsia hunt is the steeplechase being planned by the hunt committee for next Saturday afternoon. It will be held partly on the grounds of the Onwentsia and partly on the Leander McCormick farm to the south. This form of sport is popular in eastern horsy communities, having become an institution on Long Island and in the hunt clubs of Detroit, Cleveland, and Maryland.

Thrills for the Spectator.

The riders in the coming steeplechase will be amateurs from Lake Forest, Hinsdale, and Chicago. The course, which will be two miles in length, will be over cornfields, hedges, rail fences, water ditches, brush jumps, and parts of the Onwentsia golf course, and will finish at the polo field. The horses will be ridden in racing colors. The race will begin at 3 o'clock and will include other equine features. As such a race abounds in hazards, and as the countryside is full of daring riders, the event will be replete with thrills and excitement to onlookers as well as to participants.

Mrs. Hugh J. McBirney is chairman of the women's committee to act as hostesses at a luncheon to be given at the Onwentsia club before the races for the women accompanying the owners of the entries. Most of the Lake Forest houses still open will have house parties for that week-end, and many luncheons and dinners are already being planned to celebrate the occasion. The chief social event, however, will be the big hunt club dinner and dance to be given Saturday night following the race at the Onwentsia.

Only Snow Will Stop Sport.

The race committee consists of Laurence Armour, A. Sheldon Clark, Prentiss Coonley, Joseph Cudahy, Byron L. Harvey, Francis Johnson, Arthur Meeker, Dudley Rutter, and Joseph Ryerson. Until snow makes the roads too slippery, it is likely that the horse will rule the roost in Lake Forest high life.

An interesting theory was advanced in a dinner table conversation lately. This was that, according as we get interested in outdoor sports, we lose the love of mere killing for the sake of killing, which is supposed to be just under the skin of the average civilized man.

An Englishman cited various cases of well known hunters among his countrymen who had abandoned killing live animals in favor of more harmless outdoor games. It is not so likely nowadays that a Britisher would make the once famous remark: "It's a fine morning; let's go out and kill something."

Certain it is that the men who were good at sports made the best soldiers during the late war. Also that the men of the nations most given to national games showed more staying power, better team work and morale than those of nongame-playing peoples.

Alice Bradley to Wed.

Another Lake Forest event on the same afternoon as the steeplechase will be the wedding of Miss Alice Bradley, daughter of long time residents of that village, Mr. and Mrs. J. Dorr Bradley, to Frederick Taylor Fisher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Fisher of Winnetka and Chicago. The ceremony is to take place in the little Episcopal church of Lake Forest, the Church of the Holy Spirit. The bride's sister, Miss Eleanor Bradley, will be maid of honor, while the bridegroom's brother, Thomas Fisher, will be best man. A reception at the Bradley home will follow the wedding.

The Bradleys are occupying the Arthur Aldis house this summer, their own house in Green Bay road being rented for the season to Clive Runnells. The young Fishers will live in New York, where Mr. Fisher has already taken an apartment.

The coming departure of Count and Countess Bolognesi is being made the occasion for an outburst of entertaining of a peculiarly fervent and hearty nature. It would almost seem as if their many and devoted friends were trying to keep them here with the permanence that Graceland or any other such abode of perpetual peace affords. The expression first used when the late William J. Calhoun and his wife went to China some years ago, "They are eating their way to Peking," might be applied to the Bolognesis and the farewell feasts being showered on them.

Count Bolognesi has been here ten years and has become a part of the social life of Chicago in a manner which it is safe to say has never before been achieved by any one in his position here.

Goes to Jugo-Slavia.

The job of Italian consul in Chicago is no sinecure. There are 750,000 Italians in Chicago and about 2,000,000 in the district covered by the Chicago consulate. The post to which he is going, that of Sarajevo in Jugo-Slavia, is one of the most important in the Italian consular service because of the many intricate problems yet to be solved between Italy and the Balkans. It is a position requiring unusual diplomatic gifts. Jugo-Slavia is composed of so many elements which have been at war with each other for centuries that any one living there is dwelling in an airtight room with a powder keg and a lighted candle as chief furniture.

Among the entertainments in Count Bolognesi's honor was a dinner at the Old Elm club, given by thirty of his men friends, when there were many speeches and songs. In memory of the occasion they presented him with a silver cigar box, on the cover of which their names were engraved in autograph.

The governors of the Casino, of which he was one of the board for two years, are giving him and Countess Bolognesi a dinner tomorrow night. The following evening Mr. and Mrs. Gustavus Swift are hosts at a large dinner in their honor, a really farewell affair, as the Bolognesis depart Wednesday.

They sail from New York next Saturday, taking in Madeira, Gibraltar, and Algiers on their way to Genoa. Countess Bolognesi and the children will spend some time with the count's mother at Modena, while he is getting final instructions from his government. Mid-November will find them at their destination, the town made famous by the assassination of the Austrian archduke and his wife in June, 1914, an event which altered the whole face of life for all of us for all time to come.

As yet the Italian government has not appointed any successor to Count Bolognesi in Chicago. Many Chicagoans, who have formed the habit of including Italian consuls in their social calculations because of the impressions made by the count and his predecessors, Guido Sabetta and Lodi Fe, are hoping that the coming one will be as available.

Owen Aldis Hurt.

The fatal quality of well laid plans was never more completely evidenced than by the unfortunate and serious accident which happened last week to Owen Aldis, a former well known Chicagoan, who, with his wife, had been visiting here for a month or so. The Aldises had taken their passage for France on a ship sailing yesterday. Last Sunday they spent in Lake Forest paying farewell visits.

They were waiting for a train to town when, as already chronicled, Mr. Aldis, whose sight is defective, fell down the entire length of the steep cement steps leading to the subway connecting one side of the railway station with the other. He is a heavy man and the wonder is that the fall had not more serious consequences. As it was, his hip bone was cracked so badly that it will be some time before he can be moved from the Alice Home hospital at Lake Forest.

His sister, Mrs. Bryan Lathrop, is opening her house in Bellevue place to make a home for him and his wife to come to for his convalescence. It will be probably two or three months before they can start again for their home in Paris.

Among those of our fellow citizens who are making good use of this best of the four seasons in the western hemisphere are the Frederic C. Bartletts. They, together with Mrs. Bartlett's father, Hugh T. Birch, are taking a motor trip through Canada, the Adirondacks, the White mountains, the Birkshires, and New England. After a few weeks in New York they will all go to Florida, where they are building a family dwelling that promises to be one of the most delightful and original in that part of the world. Mr. Bartlett has designed it himself. It is to be of a somewhat Spanish cast of countenance, such as the early Spanish explorers introduced here, with a patio, a tower, encircling, pillared pergolas, etc. The photographs of its progress are already interesting and attractive.

The Bartletts' little pavilion in the depths of the woods surrounding Mr. Birch's place a few miles from Lake Geneva, on a miniature lake called Como, is one of the most enchanting pieces of architecture I ever saw. It is the fruit of Mr. Bartlett's fancy and Arthur Heun's skill and knowledge. Its design is a cross between a French villino and a Bavarian chateau-chen. (Isn't that sufficiently polygot to indicate what it is?) It contains two large rooms, a lovely glassed-in veranda, and an adorable, tiny kitchenette.

Like a Grimm Fairy Tale.

The two rooms suggest an almost royal fancy in bedroom and drawing room. High ceilinged, spacious, and delightfully decorated in rather rococo style, with charming furniture, they suggest the fourteenth Louis of France; also some of those rococo Bavarian monarchs, who flourished in the early part of the last century and left such a trail of picturesque stories that Bavarians tell them today with much gusto. Lola Montez and a lot of other cheerful ladies added to the gayety of the Bavarian nation then and might have sat on just such chairs and flashed their smiles in the light of candles from those same crystal chandeliers. It is such an utterly sophisticated and exquisite nest in a simple, remote countryside that to come upon it, a mile deep, in the leafy forest there is to feel that one is meeting one of Grimm's fairy tales in real life.

Chicago's social season may be said to open annually with the best music the U. S. A. affords—to wit: the first concert of the season given by our symphony orchestra at Orchestra hall. This took place last Friday afternoon. Next comes the opening night in November of the Chicago Opera company. This is apparently to be on a Monday night, in spite of the vigorous prayers of the Thursday night boxholders.

It has been the custom of late years to give each set of boxholders an opening night. Last year it was the Wednesday nighters' innings, so the Thursday nighters were counting on their turn this year. Undoubtedly the managers of the opera have a perfectly good reason for skipping them, but, if so, the Thursday nighters would like to know what it is.

Taggers Tomorrow Are Asking Your Help for Children

By Kate Webber.

OF the two official "tag days," held in the spring and autumn for the aged and the children, perhaps the most appealing is the annual plea of the Chicago Children's Benefit league, whose workers will invade the loop tomorrow to garner in the small change in our purses. Nothing is more gratifying than to know that even a small gift which is not missed will bring, in the aggregate, enough money to keep the small charges from mental, physical, and moral starvation. The several hundred children who constitute the fifty-two charities on the league's roster will benefit directly from tomorrow's tagging. There are no paid workers, and even the supplies for the day are paid for in advance, so nothing is taken out of the money collected on the streets.

Mrs. Alonzo Beckford is president of the board of directors; Mrs. Charles E. Frankenthal, Mrs. H. Clarence Dickinson, and Mrs. Edward Tilden, vice presidents; Mrs. Ben E. Lawrence, recording secretary; Mrs. H. Victor Keane, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. T. J. Webb treasurer.

Englewood Club to Hear Prof. Moulton

BEGINNING its twenty-sixth season on Oct. 3, with its membership capacity of 800 filled, and a long waiting list, the Englewood Woman's club, under the administration of its new president, Mrs. Walter L. Stebbings, promises a steady forging ahead to even greater accomplishments than have been recorded in past seasons.

The program committee, of which Mrs. A. W. Axtell is chairman, has arranged for speakers of renown and varied interests, among them being McGregor Jenkins, Ruth Bryan Owen, Henry Turner Bailey, Jeanette Rankin, and Joseph C. Lincoln.

Tomorrow morning at 10:45 o'clock Prof. F. R. Moulton will give an illustrated talk on "Visual Education" at a meeting in charge of the education department.

MRS. ALONZO BECKFORD.
[Mabel Sykes photo.]

The Chicago Children's Benefit league, of which Mrs. Alonzo Beckford is president, will have its fifteenth annual tag day tomorrow. Starting with a few charities, the organization now has fifty-two on its roster, and the moneys collected go directly to the beneficiaries. The league is nonsectarian, nonracial, and nonpolitical, and there are no paid workers.

MISS MARY S. WEST.
[Koehne photo.]

The soiree committee of Le Cercle Francais has arranged a series of eight dramatic performances to be given on the afternoons and evenings of the fourth Tuesday in each month, from October to May. The evening performances will be given for the Cercle members and their guests and the afternoon ones will be open to the public. The first program of two plays will be given on Oct. 25, at 3 and at 8:30 o'clock. Miss Mary S. West is chairman of the soiree committee.

MRS. WALTER L. STEBBINGS.
Mrs. Walter L. Stebbings is the newly elected president of the Englewood Woman's club.

(A Business Editorial)

FAIR DEALING

Business must make money if it is to succeed. But money-making alone, and for itself, is a sordid business. It tolerates exploitations along many differing lines and, too often, thinks it is truly in accord with American ideals.

Some day a better idea of business will more generally prevail. All industrial and labor leadership, and for that matter individuals, will be wiser and more patriotic. Both will see that no activity can exemplify real patriotism in the United States until it sets itself, root and branch, against all unfair advertising or exploitation. Until in fact it begins to show in all ways and at all times—to obtain lasting benefits—there must be absolute fair dealing and good fellowship.

ART and ARCHITECTURE

Tomanek Exhibits at the Palette and Chisel Club

By Eleanor Jewett.

THE winter activities of the Palette and Chisel club are heralded in the current number of their publication, the Cow-Bell. Exhibitions will be started with the one-man show of paintings by Josef Tomanek, who, it may be remembered, won several important prizes at the Art institute while a member of the school some few years ago. Following this exhibition will come the annual bidding sale of small pictures, to be held from Nov. 21 to Dec. 17. This is generally accounted the club's most popular exhibit of the year.

Music and art are not as distant cousins as sometimes may be imagined. One of those most interested in painting is Josef Stransky, conductor of the New York Philharmonic orchestra, who has recently purchased the canvas by Edward Manet entitled "The Beggar." This picture has been for a number of years one of the treasures of a private collection in Dresden.

"Susanna and the Elders," by Jean François Millet, brought $17,000 (roughly speaking, £3,400 in English money) when sold lately to the National Art gallery of Victoria at Melbourne. The painting was formerly in the possession of the late William Morris Hunt of Boston.

A painting not as familiar to us as it might be is the "By the Window," by Matisse, hung now in room 39 at the Art institute. The picture was found in Paris by Arthur Aldis and purchased by him for the institute collection with money from a bequest fund. It is not as startling as many of the other canvases by this Frenchman, nor does it convey the impression of immediate genius so often called forth by other paintings from the Matisse brush.

The Chicago Woman's club art class, of which Mrs. Levy Mayer is chairman, will hold its first meeting of the winter on Nov. 1, at 10:30 o'clock, in the northeast parlor of the Chicago Woman's club. The subject before the meeting will be "The Spirit of Chicago Architecture and Its Expression."

The winter series of classes held on Saturday afternoons by members of the Art Institute Alumni association sketch class has been already started. The classes are held in room 133 of the institute. All members of the association are urged to avail themselves of the privileges offered in these weekly meetings.

The first of a course of lectures by Lionel Robertson on "The Home Beautiful" was given yesterday afternoon at the Academy of Fine Arts. The lectures will continue for six weeks on Saturday afternoons at 2:30 o'clock. Mr. Robertson will discuss the choosing of a site for a home, the type of house best fitted to the particular landscape, heating, and ventilating, and the decorating of the various rooms. Patronesses for the lectures are Mrs. Hamilton McCormick, Mrs. Joseph B. Long, Mrs. James S. Stone, Mrs. Clarence Hough, Mrs. Edgar Lee Masters, Miss Anne Morgan, Miss Olga Morgan, Miss Olga Menn, and the Junior Friends of Art.

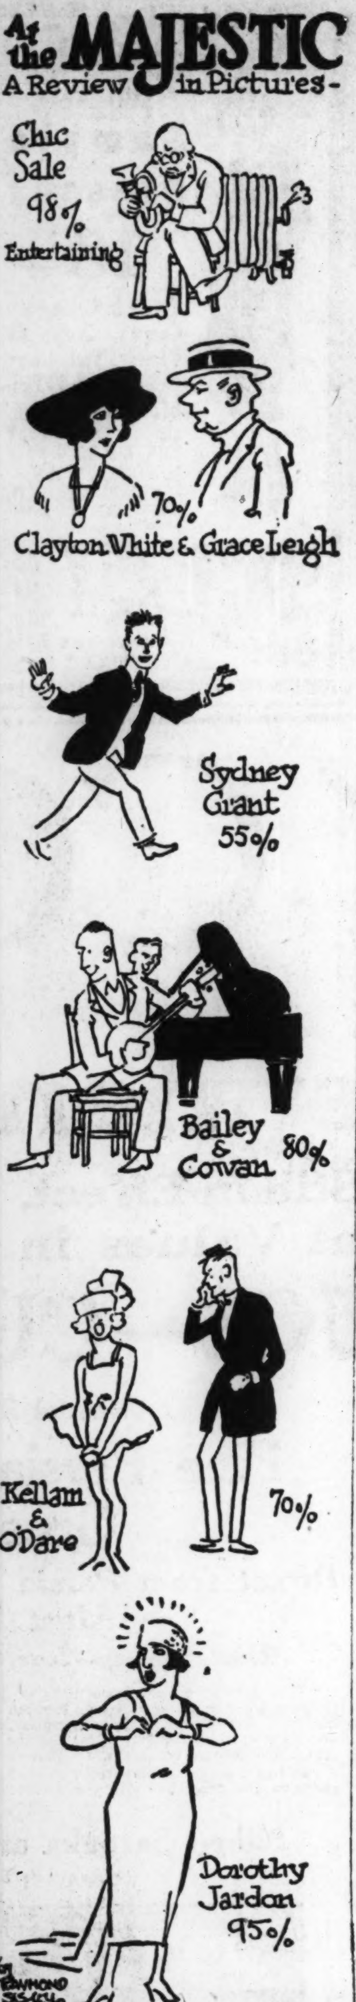
Miss Virginia Chester, who, until the war, occupied the studio in the Fine Arts building, which formerly was the "Rose bindery" under the proprietorship of the late Mrs. Rose Chatfield-Taylor, has taken on the duties of registrar in the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts.

Those interested in the subject of Chicago and Chicago's art should make a point of reading this month's issue of Art and Archaeology, a number devoted entirely to matters Chicagoan. It serves almost as an indispensable guide book to the treasures of the city. Articles have been contributed by Charles M. Wacker, Thomas E. Tallmadge, Lorado Taft, Ralph Clarkson, Clarence A. Hough, Lena M. McCauley, and a number of other persons familiar with the best in all manner of art that our city holds.

An item of interest from the Art institute is the announcement that, at a recent meeting of the trustees, Robert B. Harshe was elected director to succeed George W. Eggers, who has resigned and gone to his new post in Denver.

The third annual exhibition of oil paintings by Illinois artists, held in Peoria under the auspices of the Peoria Society of Allied Arts, will be held this year from Nov. 10 to Nov. 25. The society's silver medal will be awarded to the best painting, and the bronze medal will be awarded to the second best painting. Ralph Clarkson is to act as one of the jury of awards. Entries close Nov. 1, and all pictures for the exhibition must be received not later than that date.

All works of art to be offered for the thirty-fourth annual exhibition of American paintings and sculpture to be held at the Art institute early next month must be at the institute on or before next Thursday.



MY FAVORITE
On Stage and Screen

Who is your favorite actor or actress on screen or stage, and why? Take your pen in hand, name your favorite, and tell why in 100 words or less, writing on one side of the paper only. The Tribune will pay $1 for each letter published. No manuscripts returned. Address "Actors," The Tribune, Chicago.

He Doesn't Seem to Care.

Theodore Roberts is my favorite. There is not the usual sentimental balderdash in his old man impersonations. He is sensible to the last. His gruff exterior is, however, easily penetrated and the true loveableness of his character perceptible.

Theodore Roberts is a comedian of the highest order. There are no cheap tricks in his list of actions in making the audience laugh at him. Perhaps this is his best point—his attitude, "laugh or don't—I care not a snap." That is why you do laugh—he doesn't solicit it.

His happy facility of rilling a cigar, in that indescribable manner, is of continental fame; also his expressions of indignation, surprise and blandness are so masterful that I choose him my favorite. C. D.

Leaves the Dishes.

Any evening in the week I'd leave my dishes standing in the sink, if necessary, and stand in line any length of time to see by favorite, Gloria Swanson. For that piquant little beauty is the personification of daintiness. And no matter how extreme in style her clothes or hairdress, they are correct, and they look right for her. Of all the queens of the movies, she's mine. E. S.

Most Glorious of All.

Here's to Norma Talmadge. In reality, the greatest emotional, the most wonderful, the most glorious actress of them all. The chief reason I think so much of Miss Talmadge is because of her power to move men and women. Her greatest asset is emotion. Her beauty comes next. The nature of her plays brings out her real qualities so that she is practically the same off the screen as she is on. I think she reigns among motion picture artists as Enrico Caruso did among the artists of the music world. Viva Norma Talmadge! May the gods be forever with her. W. R.

Unselfish.

Faversham, by all means. Any one who saw him in Shaw's "Getting Married" will understand my preference. In such a play, which demands an evenly good caste, Faversham showed himself possessor of the one primary qualification of a great actor; one which I have not seen in any other. That qualification is willingness to sacrifice one's interests to the good of the play.

Faversham could have usurped the attention of the audience and have cornered the praises of the critics, if he had chosen the part of Sinjon for himself. But it was not his purpose to use a Shaw play to outshine the rest of his east. He took the part most difficult to play, in a comedy which is anything but easy to put across, being a purely conversational one.

And to those who saw him giving balance to the cast, making a success of the play, Faversham will always remain the greatest of American actors of the twentieth century. B. R. E.

SULPHUR CLEARS A PIMPLY SKIN

Apply Sulphur as Told When Your Skin Breaks Out

Any breaking out of the skin on face, neck, arms or body is overcome quickest by applying Mentho-Sulphur. The pimples seem to dry right up and go away, declares a noted skin specialist.

Nothing has ever been found to take the place of sulphur as a pimple remover. It is harmless and inexpensive. Just ask any druggist for a small jar of Mentho-Sulphur and use it like cold cream.

IMPERIOUS VICTORIA, QUEEN AND WOMAN

BY LYTTON STRACHEY

AFTER the death of Prince Albert all Victoria's other emotions gave way before her overmastering determination to continue, absolutely unchanged, and for the rest of her life on earth, her reverence, her obedience, her idolatry. "I am anxious to repeat one thing," she told her uncle, King Leopold, "and that one is my firm resolve, my irrevocable decision, viz., that his wishes — his plans—about everything, his views about every thing are to be my law! And no human power will make me swerve from what he decided and wished."

QUEEN VICTORIA in 1863.

She grew fierce, she grew furious, at the thought of any possible intrusion between her and her desire. Her uncle was coming to visit her, and it flashed upon her that he might try to interfere with her and seek to "rule the roost" as of old. She would give him a hint.

"I am also determined," she wrote, "that no one person—may he be ever so good, ever so devoted among my servants—is to lead or guide or dictate to me. I know how he would disapprove it. . . . Though miserably weak and utterly shattered, my spirit rises when I think any wish or plan of his is to be touched or changed, or I am to be made to do anything."

At first, in the tumult of her distresses, she declared that she could not see her ministers, and the Princess Alice, assisted by Sir Charles Phipps, the keeper of the privy purse, performed, to the best of her ability, the functions of an intermediary. After a few weeks, however, the cabinet, through Lord John Russell, ventured to warn the queen that this could not continue.

She realized that they were right; Albert would have agreed with them, and so she sent for the prime minister. But when Lord Palmerston arrived at Osborne, in the pink of health, brisk, with his whiskers freshly dyed, and dressed in a brown overcoat, light gray trousers, green gloves, and blue studs, he did not create a very good impression.

Almost Unknown to Subjects

For months, for years, she continued in settled gloom. Her life became one of almost complete seclusion. Arrayed in thickest crêpe, she passed dolefully from Windsor to Osborne, from Osborne to Balmoral. Rarely visiting the capital, refusing to take any part in the ceremonies of state, shutting herself off from the slightest intercourse with society, she became almost as unknown to her subjects as some potentate of the east.

As the years passed her depression seemed to deepen and her loneliness to grow more intense. "I am on a dreary, sad pinnacle of solitary grandeur," she said. Again and again she felt she could bear her situation no longer—that she would sink under the strain. And then, instantly, that voice spoke; and she braced herself once more to perform, with minute conscientiousness, her grim and holy task.

Above all else, what she had to do was to make her own the master impulse of Albert's life—she must work, as he had worked, in the service of the country. That vast burden of toil which he had taken upon his shoulders it was now for her to bear. She assumed the gigantic load; and, naturally, she staggered under it. He had refused to delegate authority; he had examined into every detail with his own eyes; he had made it a rule never to sign a paper without having first not merely read it, but made notes on it, too. She would do the same. She sat from morning till night surrounded by huge heaps of dispatch boxes, reading and writing at her desk.

Within two years of Albert's death a violent disturbance in foreign politics put Victoria's faithfulness to a crucial test. The fearful Schleswig-Holstein dispute showed signs of bursting into a conflagration. Victoria threw herself into the seething embroilment with the vigor of inspiration.

Albert had always taken the side of Prussia. Her course was clear. She became an ardent champion of the Prussian point of view. It was a legacy from the prince, she said. She did not realize that the Prussia of the prince's day was dead, and that a new Prussia, the Prussia of Bismarck, was born.

When at last the final crisis arose—when it seemed possible that England would join forces with Denmark in a war against Prussia—Victoria's agitation grew febrile in its intensity. Toward her German relatives she preserved a discreet appearance of impartiality; but she poured out upon her ministers a flood of appeals, protests, and expostulations. She invoked the sacred cause of peace.

England did not go to war, and Denmark was left to her fate; but how far the attitude of the queen contributed to this result it is impossible with our present knowledge to say.

Her political activity, no more than her social seclusion, was approved by the public. As the years passed, and the royal mourning remained as unrelieved as ever, the animadversions grew more general and more severe.

A wave of unpopularity, which reminded old observers of the period preceding the queen's marriage more than twenty-five years before, was beginning to rise. The press was rude; Lord Ellenborough attacked the queen in the house of lords; there were curious whispers in high quarters that she had had thoughts of abdicating—whispers followed by regrets that she had not done so.

Victoria, outraged and injured, felt that she was misunderstood. She was profoundly unhappy. After Lord Ellenborough's speech, Gen. Grey, declared that he "had never seen the queen so completely upset."

Eulogy of Prince Put Into Print

Nevertheless, suffer as she might, she was as resolute as ever; she would not move by a hair's breadth from the course that a supreme obligation marked out for her; she would be faithful to the end.

To carry on Albert's work—that was her first duty; but there was another, second only to that, and yet nearer, if possible, to her heart—to impress the true nature of his genius and character upon the minds of her subjects.

She set to work methodically. She directed Sir Arthur Helps to bring out a collection of the prince's speeches and addresses, and the weighty tome appeared in 1862. Then she commanded Gen. Grey, to write an account of the prince's early years — from his birth to his marriage; she herself laid down the design of the book, contributed a number of confidential documents, and added numerous notes; Gen. Grey obeyed, and the work was completed in 1866.

But the principal part of the story was still untold, and Mr. Martin was forthwith instructed to write a complete biography of the prince consort. Mr. Martin labored for fourteen years. The mass of material with which he had to deal was almost incredible, but he was extremely industrious, and he enjoyed throughout the gracious assistance of her majesty. The first bulky volume was published in 1874; four others slowly followed; so that it was not until 1880 that the monumental work was finished.

The public did not find the image attractive. Victoria's emotional nature, far more remarkable for vigor than for subtlety, rejecting utterly the qualifications which perspicuity, or humor, might suggest, could be satisfied with nothing but the absolute and the categorical. When she disliked she did so with an unequivocal emphasis which swept the object of her repugnance at once and finally outside the pale of consideration; and her feelings of affection were equally unmitigated.

In the case of Albert her passion for superlatives reached its height. To have conceived of him as anything short of perfect—perfect in virtue, in wisdom, in beauty, in all the glories and graces of man—would have been an unthinkable blasphemy; perfect he was, and perfect he must be shown to have been.

British Public Cold to the Chorus

By a curious mischance Victoria was also able to press into her service another writer, the distinction of whose talents was this time beyond a doubt. The poet laureate (Tennyson), adopting, either from complaisance or conviction, the tone of his sovereign, joined in the chorus and endowed the royal formula with the magical resonance of verse. This settled the matter. Henceforward it was impossible to forget that Albert had worn the white flower of a blameless life.

The result was doubly unfortunate. Victoria, disappointed and chagrined, bore a grudge againt her people for their refusal, in spite of all her efforts, to rate her husband at his true worth. She did not understand that the picture of an embodied perfection is distasteful to the majority of mankind.

The cause of this is not so much an envy of the perfect being as a suspicion that he must be inhuman; and thus it happened that the public, when it saw displayed for its admiration a figure resembling the sugary hero of a moral story book rather than a fellow man of flesh and blood, turned away with a shrug, a smile, and a flippant ejaculation. But in this the public was the loser as well as Victoria.

Words and books may be ambiguous memorials, but who can misinterpret the visible solidity of bronze and stone? At Frogmore, near Windsor, where her mother was buried, Victoria constructed at the cost of £200,000 a vast and elaborate mausoleum for herself and her husband. But that was a private and domestic monument, and the queen desired that wherever her subjects might be gathered together they should be reminded of the prince.

Her wish was gratified; all over the country—at Aberdeen, at Perth, and at Wolverhampton—statues of the prince were erected; and the queen, making an exception to her rule of retirement, unveiled them herself.

Nor did the capital lag behind. A month after the prince's death a meeting was called together at the Mansion house to discuss schemes for honoring his memory. Seven years after its inception, in July, 1872, the Albert memorial monument was thrown open to the public.

Vaudeville Wit

McVICKER'S.

Walzer and Conway:

"You say you like my eyes. What do you think of my mouth?"

"Well, taking it as a whole——"

"Sir!"

"I have so much on my hands at present that I don't know what to do."

"Why not try some soap and water?"

"The lines on your hands indicate your future clearly. You will marry a second time."

"That proves you a fraud. If I ever marry again it will be my fourth time."

"Does your fountain pen leak all the time?"

"No; just when I have ink in it."

"How are you getting on with your music?"

"I don't want to throw bouquets at myself, but some of the neighbors have told me they have stayed awake at night for hours listening to my playing."

Turn Hair Dark with Sage Tea

If Mixed with Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular, because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it, and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.

Take Yeast Vitamon Tablets to Put On "Stay-There" Flesh

And Increase Your Energy Quickly, Easily and Surely at Small Cost.

Nine out of every ten people working inside most of the time fail to get enough oxygen into their lungs or enough health-building nourishment from their foods, and as a result they become thin, sunken-cheeked, hollow-chested, run-down and underweight. Such folks will find this simple test well worth trying: First weigh yourself and measure yourself. Next take Mastin's VITAMON—two tablets with every meal. Then weigh and measure yourself again each week and continue taking Mastin's VITAMON regularly until you are satisfied with your gain in weight and energy. Mastin's VITAMON Tablets contain highly concentrated yeast-vitamines as well as the two other still more important vitamines (Fat Soluble A and Water Soluble C), all of which Science says you must have to be strong, well and fully developed. They are now being used by thousands who appreciate their convenience, economy and quick results. By increasing the nourishing power of what you eat Mastin's VITAMON Tablets supply just what your body needs to feed the shrunken tissues, strengthen internal organs, clear the skin and renew shattered nerve force without upsetting the stomach or causing gas. Pimples, boils and skin eruptions vanish as if by magic under their healthful, purifying influence. But it is not only a question of how much better you look and feel, or what your friends say and think—the scales and tape measure will tell their own story. A two weeks' test will surprise you.

If you want to quickly get more strength and vitality and have that firm flesh "pep" which makes you look and feel 100 per cent better just try taking a little of Mastin's yeast VITAMON with your meals for a short time and watch the truly amazing results.

IMPORTANT! While the amazing health-building value of Mastin's VITAMON has been clearly and positively demonstrated in cases of lack of energy, troubles, anemia, indigestion, constipation, skin eruptions, poor complexion and mental condition, they should not be used by anyone who OBJECTS to having their weight increased to normal. Be sure to remember the name—Mastin's VI-TA-MON—the original and genuine yeast-vitamine tablet—there is nothing else like it, so do not accept imitations or substitutes. How They Pay for Opera

Speaking of opera, attendance thereat, and the money involved, San Francisco a short time ago had two weeks of Antonio Scotti and his touring company. In the course of a year that city has had five weeks of opera, and has rewarded that form of entertainment more lavishly than Chicago is in the habit of doing. A year ago Scotti and his organization went out there and played a week to an intake of $93,000. Last April the Chicago Opera association made a two weeks' visit, and the box office showed a gross credit of $230,000. Incidentally, Miss Garden in "Thais" made something of a record, playing to $31,000 in the single performance. The second Scotti trip, two weeks this time, received $130,000. Total for five weeks, $453,000.

HAROLD BAUER. Pianist. TSIANINA. Soprano. DOROTHY MILLER DUCKWITZ. Pianist. JAN CHIAPUSSO. Pianist.

If Chicago supported its own ten weeks on a similar scale, the intake would be $906,000, making, as far as this city is concerned, a list of guarantors unnecessary and supererogatory, also making a position among the guarantors both prominent and inexpensive, and therefore desirable. But Chicago does not.

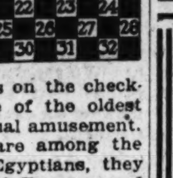
CHECKERBOARD PUZZLES

by P. H. Ketchum



Squares on the checkerboard are numbered from 1 to 32, beginning at the upper left hand corner and running from left to right, as shown on the diagram. It will be necessary to refer to this for the solution to the puzzle. The white squares are used so the checkers will show.

GAMES and puzzles on the checker board are one of the oldest forms of intellectual amusement. Checker boards are among the relics of the ancient Egyptians, they amused the Greeks and Romans and the monks of Chaucer's time varied the monotony of telling tales with contests over the board.

Interest in the checker board is greater now than at any time in its history. While chess, checkers, and the losing game, or give-away, are the only games played on the board in this country, in other parts of the world it forms the basis for a wide variety of games.

A puzzle on the checker board will appear each Sunday, and the solution will be printed the following Sunday. They will not be difficult, and with a little patience you will be able to work them out. Get out the checker board and join in the sport.

PUZZLE NO. 1.

Place eight men on the board so that no two of them will be in line either diagonally or horizontally. Now this puzzle is old, and perhaps you have worked it out before, so we will qualify it by asking you to arrange them in a symmetrical manner so that each hall of the board will be the counterpart of the other.

If you can't solve this, see next Sunday's TRIBUNE.

Finally, you finish your frock with the inimitably clever little touches of the true French modiste. Smart little ideas of frenchiness are revealed to you in profuse detail—every important touch that gives your frock the air of Paris.

Go to the Butterick pattern counter. Select there the Parisian styles that you like best; the Deltor simplifies the making of the most intricate gowns, suggests correct materials, and saves 50c to $10 because it specifies less material than would be possible were it not for the Deltor's layout chart.

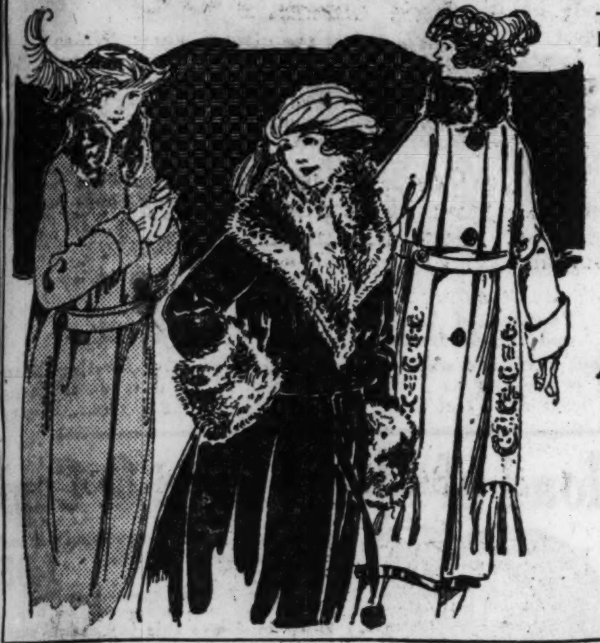
Women's Coats: Fashionable and Serviceable

Fifth Floor.



Here's an opportunity for the woman who wants smart style when she buys her winter coat, yet who at the same time insists on a coat that will give excpetional wear—such coats are these of Normandy, Salt's Peco and sealskin fur plush; flare and semi-belted models that radiate the spirit of the new mode.

Very handsome fur collars in the popular shapes, of black opossum, Australian opossum, and raccoon.

Many are lined with fancy silk, others with peau de cygne; artful touches by the hand of a master designer have given these coats unwonted distinction and every detail is carefully attended to; choice of black, brown and navy; coats you'd expect to pay $75 for at the very least, Monday, at......... $55

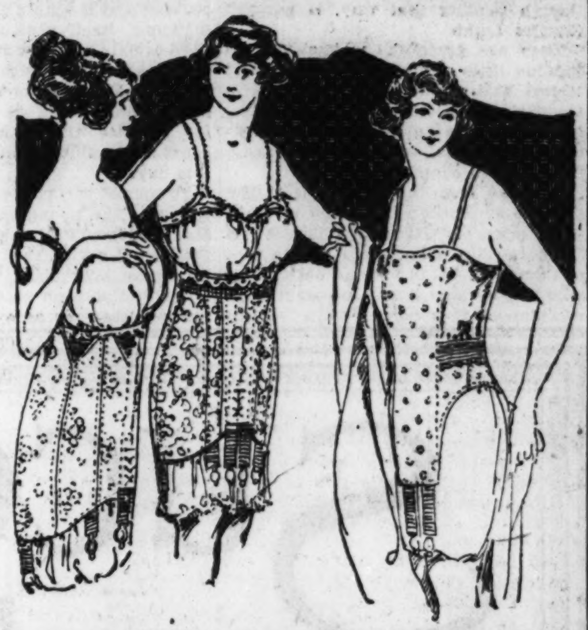
At $35 Coats of Bolivia, Elvira and Normandy are grouped at this lower price—most of them are excellent copies of much higher priced garments and naturally have a charm not generally found in coats at so low a figure.

Belted and semi-belted models, with fashionable shawl or square collars of black opossum, ringtail, beaverette and raccoon.

Every coat is attractively lined with good quality fancy silk; reindeer, brown, black and navy to choose from. It wouldn't really be fair to judge these coats by their low price; one must really see them to appreciate that they are exceptional values at........................... $35

The Importance of the Cleverness of Our Corsetieres

Third Floor—Dearborn Street



The well dressed woman realizes that to be both fashionable and comfortable she must be corseted correctly to the last degree—fitted so cleverly that the corset is scarcely apparent. Still a corset—and a good corset—is, as always, the all important foundation of the simplest or most elaborate costume.

Our corsetieres, conceded to be the most efficient, the most scientific, in all the city, can fit practically every woman correctly with the aid of some one of the many Warner models we feature. For the fitting service no charge is made.

The Warner corset for Fall is more than ever before a skillful welding of grace, fashion and comfort into models for every type of figure, from the very full figure to slight, small models. It is important to note, too, that here you will always find your size in the Warner model you should wear. How many other stores can say the same?

Warner corset, as illustrated, for the tall average figure which requires a corset that holds firmly; it gives the wanted youthful lines. Its special feature is the elastic across the topless front—that also extends across the back—but wider in back, taking care of and massaging the flesh above the waist line; skirt takes good care of a plump figure; six good quality hose supporters; sizes to 34, at........................... 7.50

Warner Corselette, as illustrated, for the debutante—in a dainty flesh satin and batiste; preferred by the slim and moderate figure, for dancing, etc., at........................ 5.00

Deft Max Again, and a New Sangster

garet Sangster, an amiable teller of tales, poetess and moralist who, with a method far less oppressive, may be said to have renewed in American letters the tradition which Hannah More established in English letters. She was, in a word, accepted moralist to the young, and her success lay in the fact that, orthodox though she was, she could write morals without writing cant.

The tradition which her grandmother followed the young Margaret Sanster does not abandon, but the field into which she has ventured is wider, and wider, too, her vision, her contacts and her sympathies seem to be.

The elder Margaret died nearly a decade ago. For a long time thereafter, apropos of little stories, poems, and descriptive articles in magazines, her granddaughter would receive letters from persons who thought they were writing to the first Margaret. "It seemed strange," the second Margaret says, "to receive letters written to me as though I were my own grandmother."

Some Poignant Bits of Talk.

There are some bits of talk on an early page of "The Island of Faith" which indicate succinctly enough the trend of Miss Sangster's story. The good people at the Settlement House—that "brown building that is tall and curiously friendly"—that "warm hand stretched out in welcome"—are telling why they went thither:

"Rose-Marie's voice was earnest, though shaken. 'I came,' she answered, 'because I love people and want to help them. I came because I want to teach them to think beautiful thoughts. . . . I came because I want to show them the God that I know—and try to serve.'"

The young doctor speaks:

"'And I came to make their bodies as healthy as possible. I came because curing sick bodies was my job—not because I loved people or had any particular faith in them. Prescribing to criminals and near-criminals isn't a reassuring work; it doesn't give one faith in human nature or in human souls!'"

And the superintendent who, while the talk ran high, had been forgotten:

"'I came to make people better.'"

The young people leave her musing alone:

"The superintendent, left alone at the table, rang for the stolid maid. Her voice was carefully calm as she gave orders for the evening meal. If she was thinking of Giovanni Celleni, his brute face filled with semi-madness; if she was thinking of a burned baby, sobbing alone in a darkened tenement while its mother breathlessly watched the gay colors and shifting scenes of a make-believe life, her expression did not mirror her thoughts. Only once she spoke, as she was folding her napkin, and then——

"'They're both very young,' she murmured, a shade regretfully. 'Perhaps she was remembering the enthusiasm—and the intolerance—of her own youth.'"

In the long processional of so much unnecessary woe, of so much grief that will not be assuaged, of so much hope and aspiration, and of so much service that e'en to the most devoted must at times seem futile and is at most times ill-requited, there is life in the raw and drama of the utmost rigor. That with a searching eye Miss Sangster has discerned and that, with a fond heart and an honest hand, she has set down.

As to the Price of Fact.

An old and cogitative friend of mine, Robert J. Thompson, who has seen much of life in public and private services, told me once that back in the seventies there was a country school teacher in Iowa who kept, and bore in on the boys and girls, a kind of price list of facts. Every fact, he would say, that you lay hold of and retain is worth so much to you—5 cents, 10 cents, maybe a quarter, perhaps as much as a dollar. He was no Gradgrind at that, but an informed man trying to fix in carefree minds the thought that what you know is what you are worth.

Charles S. Brooks' latest book of essays grouped under the title of "Hints to Pilgrims" costs $2.50, which is a good deal of money for the leisurely lucubrations of a man who, though tending that way, is not yet Charles Lamb.

They are graceful, whimsical, sagacious little papers on books and streets and dinners and various grotesqueries of existence, but there is frequent and pleasant intrusion of something substantial—of a fact worth, say, from 5 to 25 cents and upward.

This one, from the essay called "The Posture of Authors," I mark at $2.50—the price of "Hints to Pilgrims":

"Lately, in a bookshop at the foot of Cornhill, I fell in with an old scholar who told me that it was his practice to recommend four books, which, taken end on end, furnished the general history of English letters from the Restoration to a time within our own memory. These books were 'Pepys' Diary,' 'Boswell's Johnson,' the 'Diary and Letters of Mme. d'Arblay,' and the 'Diary of Crabb Robinson.'"

From Cromwell to Lincoln by Pleasant Ways.

Mr. Brooks, who manifestly put the fact into action, adds:

"Beginning almost with the days of Cromwell here is a chain of pleasant gossip across the space of more than 200 years. Perhaps, at the first, there were old fellows still alive who could remember Shakespeare—who still sat in chimney corners and babbled through their toothless gums of Blackfriars and the Globe. And at the end we find a reference to President Lincoln and the freeing of the slaves."

All that runs easily into $2.50 worth because memoir reading unsystematized is, of all reading that is not merely novel running, the most wasteful and escapable kind of reading. It is, as our mothers used to say of bites between meals, "piecing." It makes no pattern and it blunts the mind's power to apply itself zestfully to systematized annals and long surveys. Many a man reads Cellini with delight without realizing him as a contemporary of the great Charles and of Luther, though for Charles the artist-artisan fabricated a war shield that you may see to this day.

To almost everybody Pepys and Boswell and the young lady-in-waiting to Mrs. George Third are known, though that is not saying that they are known by almost everybody.

Crabb Robinson is more recondite but not less easy to read.

Born the year before our revolution, Henry Crabb Robinson lived to be 92. From Samuel Rogers to Tennyson he knew everybody, estimated everybody, and wrote pungently about almost all of them. Solely on these memorabilia of his will his long fame rest. As "the diarist" only is he recorded in the dictionaries of brief reference. He had, in the late years of Rogers and the early years of himself, the inestimable privilege of attending the celebrated breakfasts of the banker-poet in Russell square, where was heard the best talk audible in the English speaking world.

A Book Lawyers Have to Have

FEDERAL CRIMINAL LAW AND PROCEDURE, by Elijah N. Zoline; 3 vols., 8vo. Little, Brown & Co.

BY HOWARD ELLIS.

THIS work, covering a field hitherto practically untouched, is a necessary addition to the lawyer's library. The extraordinary growth of federal prosecutions within the last few years makes the subject of especial interest at this time.

Mr. Zoline has rendered a service to the bar in clarifying federal criminal procedure. He has taken great pains to collect forms of indictments, motions, etc., with especial emphasis on instructions to juries. The substantive criminal law has not been so admirably treated, although any lawyer who has searched the criminal statutes of the United States for any given provision will be attracted by Mr. Zoline's codification of the criminal law and his voluminous index.

A Book That One Boy Says All Boys Will Like

BY EDWIN NEILSEN.

(Aged 15; Tribune Copy Boy, Boy Scout, and—Just Boy. Full of Business, Quick on His Feet, and Loves Books.)

"THE BOYS' BOOK OF CAMP-FIRE STORIES" is a book that all scouts and even the boys who are not scouts should read, not only for their own amusement but to furnish enjoyment for younger boys. The stories are in such variety that any boy is sure to find something to interest him. There are humorous stories, such as "Dey Aint No Ghostes," and stories of bravery and hardship, as in "The Weight of Obligation." Stories of the kind that any boy's mother would approve of, AS MOST ALL OF THEM ARE TRUE TO LIFE. They are all a bunch of little short stories. The two I mentioned are about the best ones in the book, but they are all good. The one called "The Weight of Obligation" is the only one with an example—a moral, I mean—and it shows how a man might turn against his best pal up in those tracts in the northern wilds. I am a Boy Scout in Troop 848, Chicago, besides being on THE TRIBUNE.

Children will be glad to know that the Reilly & Lee company is bringing out for the Christmas tree more than a dozen of those Oz books in new editions that glow with pictures in color. They cost $2 each, which seems fair for color books, in view of the prices some publishers are tucking on to very routine looking volumes.

SUCCESS

By Samuel Hopkins Adams

Up the ladder of Fortune go the strong—striving, struggling, some for fame, some for gold, and some, like Banneker, for power and a woman's love.

The soul of America is mirrored in this great story of human struggle and achievement.

Drawn by love and ambition from the Arizona desert, Banneker plans the conquest of New York. How he flings himself into the seething currents of journalism and fights his way to success is told in a romance filled with the surge and clangor of contemporary life.

The Iron Food for Vitality

They both need it—
"The Food Iron for Vitality"

Hot Fruited Toast

Toast this raisin bread and taste a new delight at luncheon

Dainty thin slices of crispy, brown, fruit-flavored toast!—with or without butter—and a cup of tea.

A whole luncheon can be made of it.

There's a daintiness about it that simply cannot be described—you have to try it.

Also an important value in it—in the raisins' food-iron—that every woman should know.

Raisins are rich in iron. And it is iron, supplied daily to the blood, that promotes vigorous vitality in women—an irresistible magnetic force which is woman's greatest charm.

You need but a small bit of iron daily, yet that need is vital.

Bright eyes, healthful energy and naturally rose-tinted cheeks are the visible signs of it.

So this delicious toast is good for you. Remember that, and have it frequently.

Raisin Bread

Add raisins to the "staff of life" and you have a perfect food

Stewed Raisins

Serve for breakfast every morning and get your daily iron this way

Cover Sun-Maid Seeded Raisins with cold water and add a slice of lemon or orange. Place on fire; bring to a boil and allow to simmer for one hour. Sugar may be added but is not necessary, as Sun-Maid Seeded Raisins contain 75 per cent natural fruit-sugar.

Raisin Pie

Men are quickly refreshed at night by a dessert like this

- 2 cups Sun-Maid Seeded Raisins
- 2 cups water
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1 tablespoon corn starch
- 1 teaspoon sugar

Wash the raisins, put in saucepan with 1 cup cold water and bring slowly to a boil. Add sugar, salt and corn starch which has been mixed with 1 cup cold water. Boil 2 minutes; add lemon juice. Pour in pie tin which has been lined with crust, while hot cover; brush top with cold milk and bake in moderate oven until brown.

All measurements for these recipes are level.

Free We'll send 100 luscious raisin recipes in a free book to anyone who mails coupon.

SUN-MAID RAISINS

Use Sun-Maid Raisins, made from California's finest table grapes—American raisins, processed and packed immaculately in a great modern California plant.

Seeded (seeds removed); Seedless (grown without seeds); Clusters (on the stem). Also a fine, ever-ready dessert.

Raisins are cheaper by thirty per cent than formerly. See that you get plenty in your foods.

Mail the coupon for free book of tested recipes which describes 100 attractive ways to serve

SUN-MAID RAISINS

Delicious raisin bread and raisin pie are sold by bake shops and grocers everywhere. Buy of them to save baking at home.

Real raisin bread is made with lots of raisins. Insist on it. First-class bakers do not stint.

Rah! Rah! Rah! Sis-s-s-s! Boom! Bah!

PROLOGUE.

The refining influence of the feminine presence is overestimated . . . nothing breeds brutality in a football game so surely as the presence of a stand full of screaming co-eds, egging the combatants on to new forms of mayhem . . . the well known Roman gladiators, Brutus and Cassius, often stalled through their ten round bouts with the cestus until the vestal virgins began to shriek, "Attaboy, Brutus; soc et tuum, Cassius; macte virtute esto," after which Brutus would cross a brutal one on the Cassius jaw, while Cassius slammed a wicked left into Brutus' noble Roman beak, until the referee hollered "Habet," the Ciceronian equivalent for "Let him up, he's all cut."

Scene I.—The Football Game.

Gladys Rankin—now that the Rankins have struck it rich—is going to college in the city, but Mamie Potter still chums around with her on occasions, this being one of them . . . we find them this glorious afternoon at the football game, shrieking with excitement and squealing with delight.

MAMIE (indicating cheer leader):

Why does he jump around so gay?
How in the world do they get that way?

(A fair question, but who knows the answer?)

GLADYS: O, here come the fellows . . . gee, ain't they swell!
C'mon, join in, girls . . . we're going to give the yell!

"Rah! Rah! Rah! Miller! Miller! Miller!"

(The two cheer leaders suddenly take an excruciating cramp, break out into an epileptic fit, and then go crazy . . . the frenzy spreads to the stands, which roar out an insane chant:)

Eeph-a-soph-a-loph-us,
Eeph-a-soph-a-loo;
Do we knock 'em kicking?
We'll say we do—
Rah, rah, rah,
Sis-s-s, boom, bah,
Hullaballo, Hullaballo, Hullaballoo,
Boo!

(This being one of the increments of a college education which Edison overlooked.)

MAMIE (with true feminine instinct):

Who is that great big fellow there,
The one by himself with the bright red hair?

GLADYS (with a shrewd glance at Mamie—us girls can't fool each other much):

That's Red Miller;
Isn't he a thriller?
He's some full back—
Say, he's a killer.

MAMIE (half to herself):

Gee, he's a peach!
My, he's a bear!
Lookit him go!
Say, he's there!

WILD CHO. BY INSANE COLLEGIANS:

Rah! Rah! Rah!
Miller! Miller! Miller!

(Red Miller has just carried the ball twenty yards, after which the entire opposing team sits down on him to rest. When they are pried off the doctor and the sponge bearers rush in from the side lines to help dig Miller out of the ground.)

MAMIE (in anguish):

I hope they didn't hurt him.
O, dear, he may be dead!
'Ja see that bunch of cowards?
They jumped right on his head.

GLADYS (sympathetically):

O, he'll come out all right, all right;
Y'see, he's getting up.

MAMIE (relieved):

I hope he kills that other guy,
The mean old nasty pup.

(The other guy being the quarter back who tackled Miller—and he's not a mean old nasty pup, either—he's some dear old mother's fair haired son—but mother can have him now, as far as Mamie is concerned.)

DEMONIAC CHO. BY DEMENTED COLLEGIANS (as Miller runs again with ball):

Brekety Ex, Coax, Coax,
Brekety Ex, Coax, Coax,
Hullaballoo, Hullaballoo,
How-dee-you-do, How-dee-you-do,
Miller! Miller! Miller!
WOW!

(And so the golden minutes speed . . . and the sun sinks . . . and Red Miller is pried out of the ground a few more times and brought back to life by the nonchalant medico and the sponge squad . . . and Mamie's heart goes pittity-pat and plunkety-plunk . . . and the first half passes, and the third quarter . . . and the last quarter . . . and Red plunges across the line with another touchdown and a wrenched arm . . . and the whistle . . . and the mad, mad pandemonium as the shrieking, sobbing, hysterical students pour out across the field.)

Scene II.—A Dramatic Interlude.

Mamie can go home to dream of Red Miller without meeting him, or else—well, what would you do if you were a girl? . . . Exactly! So will Mamie.

GLADYS (at the gate):

O, here comes Jim—
That must be him.

(Jim being what Gladys thinks about when she hears Mon Homme.)

JIM: 'Lo, there Glad'.
How you be?
Come over to the Phi Psi;
We're going to have tea.

(The "Phi Psi" being the "House," of course . . . and of course they're having open house after the game . . . and of course Gladys goes out and brings Mamie, although Mamie is an off-campus girl and will be about as popular with the college girls as a shiny nose.)

JIM: The team's coming over in a half hour or so.
Bring your friend along, Glad'. C'mon, let's go.

"O, what did they do to your poor arm?"

(And they go . . . will Mamie meet Red Miller? . . . She will if there is anything she can do about it.)

Scene III.—At the Phi Kappa Psi.

The usual postmortem on the game is being held . . . about thirty minutes after Mamie's arrival with Gladys and Jim the football heroes come in, and the more banged up ones try to sneak upstairs unseen. . . . "Ah, let the stricken deer go weep, the hart ungalled play." . . . Yea, can they not sneak away and lick their wounds in sweet seclusion? . . . No! a thundering No! . . . for here is the hero of the fray, none other than our friend Red Miller, with his right arm in a sling.

CHO.: There he is . . . O, you red! . . . Rah! Rah!
Rah! Miller! Miller! Miller! . . . Speech! . . .
Speech! . . . Attaboy, Red! . . .

MILLER: Aw, forget it!

(A modest rejoinder, egad . . . 'twas in such a wise, no doubt, Cæsar himself did thrice reject the kingly crown on the Lupercal . . . "Attaboy, Julius; c'mon, be king, won't you, Cæsar, old top? Here, take the crown . . . O, you Julius!" . . . and then the mighty Cæsar: "Aw, forget it.")

CHO. (with the shrill voices of worshiping co-eds over all):

O, you Red . . . you showed 'em . . attaboy, Red . . . What's the matter with Miller? . . . He's all right. . . . Who's all right? . . . Miller. . . . He is, he is, he is all right.

GLADYS (to Mamie):

C'mon over here, he'll come this way . . .
Would you like to meet him? Whaddye say?

(Would she like to meet him? Will a cat eat perch?)

GLADYS (to Miller):

Some game, Red . . . you sure played fine.
I want you to meet a good friend of mine.

(In this casual manner the big moment comes to Mamie . . . does the sun darken? Does the earth tremble and stay its mad flight? Do the planets stagger drunkenly in their orbits? No; and yet why not? Are not Mamie Potter and Red Miller standing face to face for the first time in their eternities. And are they not staring at each other, oblivious to the astounded co-eds who worship Red from afar and are as nothing in his eyes? Can this be love at first sight? Children, it can . . . it is . . . and if you have doubts, then listen to the testimony.)

1ST CO-ED:

You'd think he never saw a girl before.

2D CO-ED:

I don't see what he sees in her.

3D CO-ED:

D'yever see her before? I never did.

(That settles Mamie for them . . . naturally, she can't amount to much if they never saw her before.)

1ST CO-ED (looking Mamie over critically for the tendon Achilles):

Bobbed hair is getting so common, don't you think?

2D CO-ED (edging closer and smiling in another direction to throw off suspicion):

What's he saying to her?

3D CO-ED:

Of all the nerve! And she's a townie, too. You'd think they'd be enough girls on the campus for Red Miller.

"O, dear, he may be dead!"

MAMIE (to Miller):

I think you were just wonderful . . . and that time when all those cowards jumped on you I wanted to go right out there and punch them in the nose.

MILLER: Say, I guess I kinder knocked a few of them for a row of steam heated ice bags . . . did I, or did I not?

MAMIE (with misty eyes):

I'll say you did. (Tenderly) But your poor arm . . . O, what did they do to your poor arm? If I just had you at home I could fix it up for you so nice . . . I took Red Cross training, you know.

(Which, when you study the maidenly suggestion, is pretty fast work for Mamie.)

MILLER (with sudden interest):

You did? . . . Maybe you could do something for it at that . . . but then it would be too much to ask you to do anything for me.

(Miller is a pretty fast worker himself . . . My, my, this young generation!)

MAMIE: I could dress it better than that. (Suddenly covering up) Mother has some wonderful liniment and stuff.

MILLER (as if the idea had just occurred to him):

You're going home pretty soon, anyway. Suppose I take you over and drop in and see what your mother can do for me?

("Your mother" . . . the sly dog! . . . Well, well, aren't the co-eds sore now! Red Miller going out with Mamie Potter . . . into his snuggly roadster, too . . . if that isn't fast work . . . and an off-campus girl, too, of all things.)

MAMIE (in car):

Here, let me tuck your coat around you. (She does, very tenderly.) How can you shift the gears with your arm in a sling?

MILLER (nonchalantly, and suiting the action to the word):

O, I can shift them with my feet . . . here we go . . . where do you live?

MAMIE (snuggling down and closing eyes dreamily—maybe she'll wake up and discover it never happened):

Go straight ahead; I'll tell you when to turn.

(And that's that—until next Sunday.)

Better Balanced Crop Production Urged on Farmers; Sanitation Figures Largely in Raising Cheaper Pork

By Frank Ridgway.

OVERPRODUCTION of farm products this year and accompanying low prices have upset the farmer's scheme of crop rotation. Complexities that enter into the job of figuring out the kind of crops to plant next spring have made a puzzle for rural economists and farm management experts to work out. Opinions of leading agriculturists differ somewhat in detail, but in the main most of them seem to agree that limiting production of all agricultural products should not be advocated, but that it would be wise for farmers to study conditions as they are today in order to produce intelligently so that production would be more evenly balanced.

Henry C. Wallace, secretary of agriculture, says that it is not a matter of reducing the total output, but that there must be an adjustment of the different crops to meet the needs of consumption. That is practiced by all well organized businesses. He thinks the way the cotton situation was handled in the south this spring is an example of what may be done in the growing of other crops. The secretary thinks this would be a good time for farmers to grow more clover, grass, and live stock. This will act as a storage, he says, and as the country works out from under this period of depression there will be something in reserve to draw on—meat and soil fertility will both be stored up to draw from later.

On a recent visit to Chicago Secretary Wallace said that the government would give more attention to the gathering of statistics on world production and world consumption in order that the farmers might be more able to produce intelligently in the future.

Limiting Product Unprofitable.

Eugene Davenport, dean of the college of agriculture, University of Illinois, says: "The farmer should not and will not deliberately limit production. It would not be morally right nor individually profitable, because every farmer is best off with all the yield he can produce with the methods he can employ. However," adds the dean, "farmers will be exceedingly economical in what they do another year, and this will limit production automatically unless they have a good season."

The farmer, who represents one-third the population in this country, would be severely criticized by the other two-thirds if he were to limit the production of all agricultural products as a means of increasing prices for what he sells, but he could not be blamed for planting less of the crop that has been overproduced and more of some other crop.

"Overproduction is an economic waste and should be avoided as far as possible," says Herbert W. Mumford, secretary of the farmers' live stock marketing committee of fifteen. "Shortage of agricultural products is a men-desirable. A greater stabilization of prices of agricultural production is highly desirable. A greater stabilization of prices of agricultural products will follow a more intelligent equalization of supply to demand and benefit alike the producer and consumer. Neither producer nor consumer profits in the long run from overproduction or shortages, but these incidents form a fertile field for exploitation of the producer and the consumer."

Cut Corn Crop Next Year.

Some of the corn belt farmers who are familiar with the recent experience of the cotton grower in the south—where production was decreased and prices shot up, more than doubling the returns of this year's crop—are wondering if they have been wise in producing a big crop of corn. Mr. Mumford points out that occasional attempts have been made to stimulate and to retard production. During the war large increases were effected.

"The cotton acreage in the south was decreased 28 per cent this year," he said. "It is reported that farmers in India have seeded 15 per cent less acreage than a year ago. Corn growers will undoubtedly seed considerably less corn next year. Regulatory production policies have been successfully

A NEW idea in the problems of hog sanitation has been recently worked out among farmers of McLean county, Illinois. It has already saved thousands of pounds of pork for the hog men in that country, and will mean millions of pounds of pork and thousands of dollars to the farmers of the hog belt in the middle west as soon as the McLean county system of hog sanitation is once generally known and put into practice.

After all of the study that has been made in trying to learn the cheapest way of producing pork, McLean county hog men found that they were still overlooking one of their most important jobs—sanitation. Like many others, they had been interested in prices and had not been giving enough attention to keeping their hogs out of mud holes and reducing the number of runts to the minimum by fighting diseases and pests.

Realizing that sanitation is one of the most important phases of efficient production, farmers in McLean county began a campaign against the round worm, which, they believe, causes twice as much loss among their hogs as all the other swine maladies put together, hog cholera and mixed infection included. Three years ago a group of McLean county farmers, aided by their local farm bureau, started the handling of their pig crops under the system that is now being used successfully by twenty farmers in that county.

Sow Is Given Careful Attention.

The pigs are carefully handled until they are 4 or 5 months old, when they are not so susceptible to the attacks of the round worm. At farrowing time sows are kept in pens that have been thoroughly cleaned and scrubbed with lye mixed in boiling water. After the floor and walls have been scrubbed, clean bedding is put in and the sow is given a bath in warm water and soap. Particular attention is given to the udder, which is often covered with mud containing round worm eggs. The sow is then given an oil bath and kept in the pen until she is removed with her litter to a clean pasture. The farmers use stone boats to haul the sow and her litter to the pasture when the pigs are about 2 weeks old.

By taking these precautions they are able to prevent the worm eggs from getting inside the small pigs. If the eggs get into the pig's intestines they hatch, and the larva that comes from the egg finds its way through the circulatory system into the lungs. It is in this stage that the real damage is done. This is frequently the cause of the skinny, hunchback pigs that are common in practically every hog raising district. The pigs have a cough and the thumps. The same pigs may be the fattest ones in the herd before they begin to cough. The lungs become badly infested with the larvæ of small worms, causing congestion and inflammation similar to the condition found in pneumonia.

This is the critical period for the small pig, and it is not uncommon for half of the litter to die; those that live usually become runts. This journey from the intestines through the lungs and back to the intestines is said to take about ten days. The pigs cough up the larvæ and swallow them, and when they reach the intestines they develop into the large round worm.

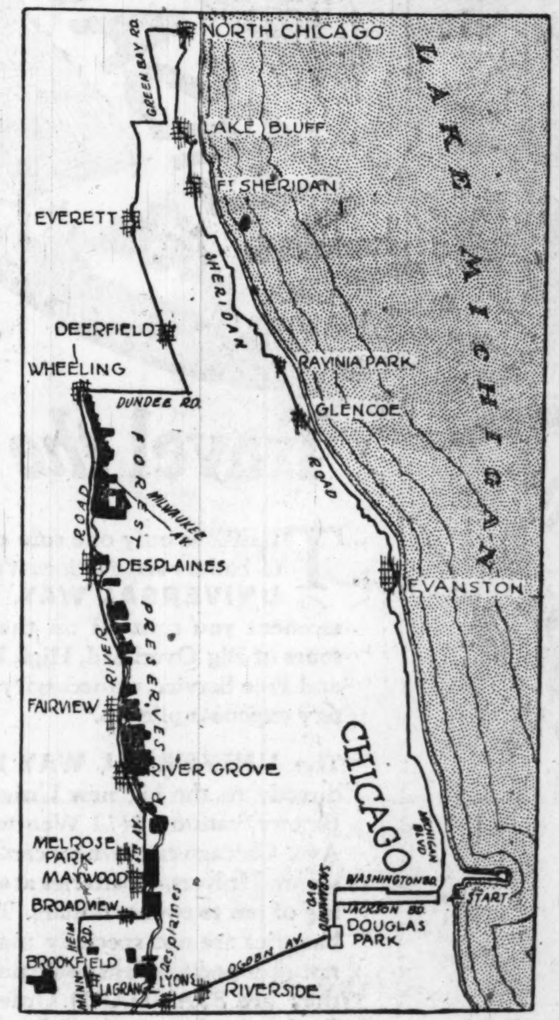
Great Contrasts in Herds.

"I know of one man who hauled off two wagon loads of dead pigs, varying in age from 1 to 2 months," writes R. L. Cuff, associate farm adviser of McLean county. "They were killed by the round worm. If you were to visit some of the hog farms in McLean county you would see some great contrasts in the condition of herds. I could take you to a farm where a thousand pigs were cared for under the new sanitation system. Three carloads of them have already been marketed; two carloads averaged 200 pounds and another carload averaged 170 pounds. I could take you to another farm where the system was not used. There were 1,000 pigs farrowed, but only 450 of them lived long enough to be taken to the pasture."

PATHS TO THE WILDERNESS



OCTOBER has come to Chicago this year bearing rich gifts. And first among them is 20,000 acres of flaming woodlands in the world famed forest preserve district, where charms of an unspoiled wilderness touch and overlap a mighty, modern city.

Means to enjoy this fall loveliness in full measure are now at hand in the new concrete roads whose completion give easy access to spots in the preserves formerly off the beaten paths. Here is a map showing an ideal Sunday tour of approximately ninety-five miles, which leads directly into and through some of the most beautiful stretches of the south and west tracts, particularly the historic survival bordering the Des Plaines river, and covers the most important of Cook county's newly opened highways.

The circle takes Washington or Jackson boulevard west to Sacramento, turns left through Douglas park and bears right in Ogden avenue, following vard west to Sacramento, turns left through Douglas park and bears right in Ogden avenue, following the concrete through Cicero, Riverside, and Lyons to La Grange. There turn right in the Mannheim (stone) road to Roosevelt road. Turn right in Roosevelt to 5th avenue in Maywood. Turn left in the new River road, following the river and preserves to Des Plaines. Continue north in the River road to its intersection with Milwaukee avenue and bear left with Milwaukee into Wheeling. Go through the Wheeling business district, turning right on the concrete of Dundee road to the Telegraph road. Turn left with concrete through Deerfield and Everett to end of road and follow the paving right to the Green Bay road. Turn left to the barricade at cemetery and right with gravel and cinder road into North Chicago. There turn right in Sheridan road to Chicago.

This tour recommends itself as one of the most attractive of the many fall automobile trips possible to Chicagoans who enjoy the outdoor life behind the wheel and its accompanying view of the native landscape. Other tours will be described from time to time in these columns.

Motorists Demand Through Roads in Illino's Bond Issue System

By J. L. Jenkins.

HEAVY rains and rough roads through the greater part of Illinois last week brought a halt to the state's increasing movement of highway traffic and served to impress motorists generally with the necessity for speed in connecting paved roads of the bond issue system.

Chicago drivers were affected but slightly by the arrival of the bad weather, which, a year or so ago, meant a restriction of traffic to city streets and the use of rail lines in business or pleasure trips into the country. They found that the Cook county construction campaign has laid down all weather pavements leading to practically every point of importance in the Chicago district, and, in addition, has built permanent connections for its essential highway routes, a service second only to the building of the routes themselves. Truck transport schedules were maintained as usual, and the flow of farm to market traffic went on without delay.

Some Lines Connected.

A few communities downstate enjoyed the same freedom from the ancient mud embargo. They were the cities and towns located on the connected federal aid highways now completed between Chicago, Danville, and Marshall; between Springfield and Peoria, and between Chicago and Fulton on the Mississippi river. These complete trunk lines, constructed to give the state the greatest possible connected mileage in the shortest possible time, proved their value; but their utility gave rise to still another failure in this year's road building program.

Transportation men point out that Gov. Small's refusal to accept construction bids for stretches of highway costing more than $30,000 per mile and his subsequent award of contracts for work on the sections that can be built under that figure has resulted in a patchwork construction system. The scheme, they say, has also broken into the carefully laid plans of the state highway department to build bond issue roads in sequence as nearly as possible and to open connected sections to service as the building work progresses.

Avoided "Patchwork."

Former state administrations have followed the theory that through routes are of first importance to the state, although the bond issue law provides that road construction should proceed simultaneously in the various counties. Engineers of the department, given a program of 500 miles of new road to build in a year, argued that the mileage should go down where traffic could use it, and should not be divided to give each county in the state but five miles of paving in the season.

It is the working out of this plan by former administrations that resulted this year in the opening of the Lincoln and Dixie highways and the hundred mile stretch of the Chicago-Springfield-St. Louis road and will connect the National Old Trails route between East St. Louis and the Indiana state line before the building season ends.

Latest construction reports issued by the state highway department show the utility plan has been practically overlooked by Gov. Small and that scattered contracts have marked the present season. To Oct. 1 a total of 40.47 miles of paving had been completed under the Small contracts, according to the report, and at present about eight miles of construction work is being completed under the same contracts each week in unrelated jobs, while more than 200 miles of new paving has been completed under Lowden contracts, carried over from 1919 and 1920.

The main new contract connections include the road from Kankakee leading east to the Dixie highway and rush work on state route 4 between Bloomington and Dwight. Even this work, contractors declare, was delayed so long that there is little hope of completing the connection.

In direct contrast is the latest report made public by state highway commissioners of Michigan, who announce that "1921 has given Michigan her roads." Their report shows a total of 174.10 miles of pavement laid on 1921

MOTORDOM

Jobs for Million Men Are Offered Along U. S. Roads

Solution of Common Labor Problem in Hands of Congress

THAT the federal government in cooperation with the states can promote the establishment of a great and necessary public utility and at the same time give employment to more than 1,000,000 men is a fact pointed out in a statement issued here by the good roads board of the American Automobile association.

The statement says: "Expenditures for public roads and bridges outside of incorporated cities will amount to approximately $600,000,000 during the current calendar year. This vast expenditure is applied to the payment of labor, materials, machinery, and profits. Of this sum, approximately $500,000,000 by the end of December, will have gone for the employment of labor. On the basis of $3 per day this means that during the current year there is being applied to public highways of the country about 166,000,000 labor days. Thus, on the basis of 200 working days, employment will have been given to about 830,000 laborers.

"Hence, if the pending federal aid, providing an additional $75,000,000 of federal money to be matched by $75,000,000 of state money during the calendar year 1922, becomes a law, there will probably be expended during the year on public roads in the United States approximately $800,000,000, of which about $640,000,000 will be applied to the employment of labor. On the basis of $3 per day, and giving 200 working days to each individual, this means that during 1922 more than a million workmen will be employed in the building of roads and bridges and in the manufacture of roads machinery therefor throughout the United States.

"It is estimated that during 1921 about $500,000,000 will be expended on street work in the different cities in the United States, and that during 1922 at least $600,000,000 will be expended for this purpose. On this basis, approximately 750,000 laborers will be employed on street work, making the total of 1,750,000 laborers engaged in combined street and highway maintenance and building.

"It would seem, therefore, that the early passage of the pending roads legislation, which would provide for the continuation of this activity, would be a most direct and sensible means of solving the unemployment problem and thus help to resore the national prosperity."

The Phipps-Dowell-Robison bill, continuing the federal aid road act of 1916, which expired in June of this year, has already passed the house and senate and is now in conference. The house measure did not contain an appropriation, but many of its provisions were accepted by the senate. The upper branch of congress appropriated $75,000,000 to be matched with a like sum by the states.

Handy Combination.

An indelible pencil, on the nonbusiness end of which is screwed a valve cap, serves a doubly useful purpose. The pencil end is used for marking holes in tubes for later repair, while the valve cap is used as a valve wrench.

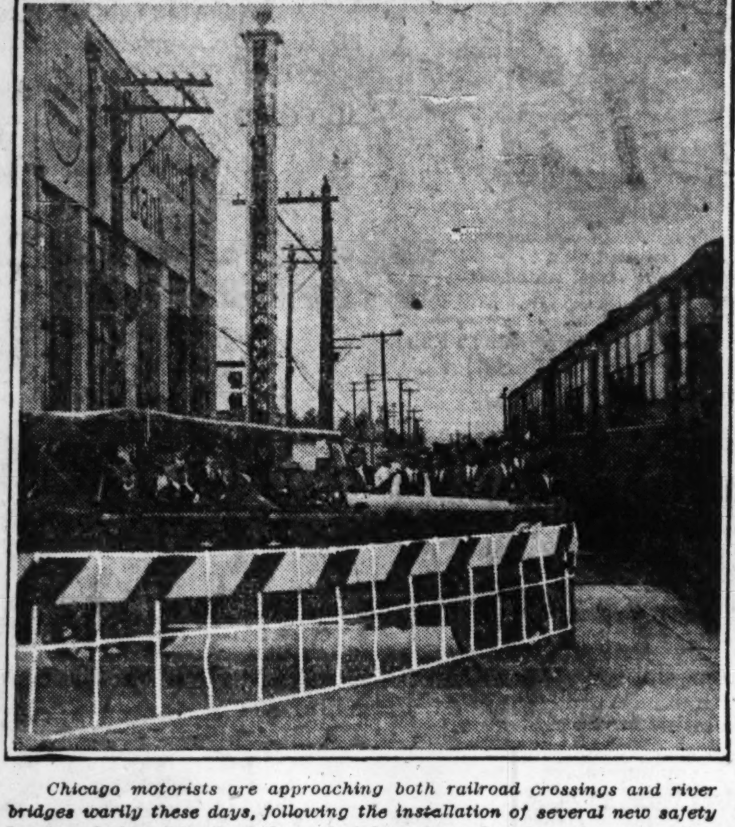
CITY TESTS "NEW FOOL CATCHER"



Chicago motorists are approaching both railroad crossings and river bridges warily these days, following the installation of several new safety barriers designed to cheat the undertaker of speed and carelessness cases. This one serves both as a warning signal and barrier at a west side crossing. It falls as a train enters the nearest electric block and stops even a speeding car. Like barriers have been installed on the east drive of the boulevard link bridge, but they operate behind the warning gates which are lowered when the bridge is raised.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

REMANUFACTURED cars alone will solve the ever increasing used car problem, in the opinion of W. S. Mehaffey of Triangle Motors, 2229 Michigan avenue. To back up his contention the local branch has developed a complete and highly efficient construction plan which rebuilds every car taken in on a trade. The process is followed out on a traveling platform basis, just as new cars are built in automobile plants. Each job is stripped and moves along under the inspection of expert engineers, who direct the replacing of even the smallest parts and repairs to workable parts. It has been found that through this carefully planned system the average used car can be entirely rebuilt at a cost less than the former price of repainting.

R. C. Cook has taken over the sales and service for the King Motor Car company line in Chicago. The sales and show room is located at 2258 Michigan avenue and the service station at 2929 Wabash avenue.

Fred Wilson, newly appointed sales manager of the Stutz company, has assumed his duties at the Indianapolis plant.

Motorists of State Demand Through Roads

contracts at a cost of $33,155.57 per mile. The work is now going forward at the rate of eighteen miles each week, due to the early start made last spring, and consistent pushing of the improvement. An additional hundred miles has been completed on contracts carried over from last year, and practically all of the state's main trunk highways have been connected.

The Michigan cost figures have proved of interest to highway experts throughout the country. Their average of $33,000 per mile includes some sections of concrete road in Wayne county built under nine inch thickness specifications, and the greater part of the contracts were awarded in the spring, when the high cost controversy delayed Illinois and a few other states. Some of the construction ran to extremely high figures, where roads were laid through typical Michigan sand or demanded heavy grading or grade reductions. The commission went ahead with these expensive roads, first leveling the bad hills, eliminating dangerous turns, building new bridges and culverts, and making the state system as safe as possible for current traffic. It improved the good roads with the bad and succeeded in proving a promise made last spring to get a "maximum mileage at a minimum cost."

Same Old Game.

Warning has been sent to the Chicago Motor club by the Racine Commercial club of the activities of a motorcycle rider posing as a police officer operating in Racine county. This man stops passing motorists and charges them with violation of the traffic laws. He "accepts" cash bail of varying amounts and when the offending motorists appear in court to answer charges against them they find that no charges have been made and that they have been the victims of a swindler.

Washing Aid.

A mighty useful device for the man who washes his own car may be made by sawing a keg or barrel in half and clamping to the edge an ordinary clothes wringer. The half barrel is filled with water and the chamois cloths used for cleaning the car are soaked therein and afterward passed through the wringer, so that a dry surface may be assured in the final operations of cleaning the body.

The Inquiring Reporter

The Question.

How long should a man drive his car before turning it in for a new one?

Where Asked.

Van Buren street and Michigan boulevard.

The Answers.

Michael Robinson, 1207 South Avers avenue, chauffeur—Well, a car is like a human being—if a car is properly cared for it will last for a long time, maybe six or seven years. I drive a taxi and I turn in about every two years, but the car runs twelve to fourteen hours a day.

Miss A. N. Lasnier, 827 Lawrence avenue, typist—We have had our car for five years and it is still running. A good car kept in good condition ought to last about five or six years. A lot of people do not know how to handle a car.

P. J. Serritella, 1517 Flournoy street, news dealer—One year is long enough for the ordinary car. When you speak of the higher priced cars it is different. They ought to last five or six years. I have had my car three years and it is still in good shape. I shall not change until I find it is necessary.

Miss Frances Rhodes, 3662 Pine Grove avenue, typist—My folks have had their car four years and it runs as it did the first day we bought it. We expect to get a larger car, but that should not be taken to mean that our car is not in good working order. Four years is about the limit, I think, for the average car.

Clarence Harding, 1932 Mohawk street, chauffeur—I think that two years is long enough to run a car. I know a lot of people that turn in their cars every year, but they do it to be in style. A high price car never gets out of style. They can be run forever, almost, and give great satisfaction.

Body Squeaks.

Ordinary cotton braid, such as every woman's sewing kit contains, makes an admirable silencer wherever sheet metal comes in contact with sheet metal. Heavy cotton tape is better where there is heavy wear, as, for instance, under the hood. In the case of squeaking fenders a length of cotton braid bunched under the fastening nuts, which are then drawn up tight on lock nuts, will be found useful in silencing noise.

CARING FOR THE TUBES.

The tube should be rolled flat with cotton between the layers. A strip of flannel rolled up with a tube is excel The roll should then be placed in a cloth bag with the stem protruding, and mouth of the bag be tied around the It is a good plan to put talcum powder in bag.

Aero Club Offers Ashburn Field to U. S. Air Service

May Bring U. S. Test Field to This City

BY MORROW KRUM.

THE United States air service has been offered the use of Ashburn field for flying purposes by the Aero Club of Illinois.

In a letter to Maj. W. C. McChord, air officer of this corps area, Charles Dickinson, president of the flying association, offered the field at the rate of $1 a year, providing the offer is accepted before Nov. 1. If the government decides to take the field after that date the Aero club will make a special price for the property.

The offer came after Maj. McChord sent a letter to the mayor and the city council and asserted that if a flying field was offered at a nominal rental the government would bring several airplanes, hangars, and enlisted men, and establish a regular air service field in this city.

Ashburn field is within the city limits, the boundary lines for the city forming the west and south boundaries of the field. The field is level and unobstructed. The approach is good. City telephone service is connected with underground wires. The city sewer and water systems are within 500 feet of the property. There is an eight inch gas main on the west side.

The Wabash and Grand Trunk railroads form a junction at Ashburn station one-half mile from the field. There are ample switch tracks. The Clearing yards are but a short distance away.

Of course, business men will assert that Ashburn field is a great distance from the loop. There are no street car lines running past the field. But the automobile roads are good, and there seems to be little chance of securing an aviation field in the heart of Chicago.

Every time an airplane is seen over Grant park the property owners get into communication with the south park board of commissioners and ask that the airplanes be kept away from the park. But little progress has been made in the plans of securing fields at 16th street and at Grace street, although either of two locations would be desirable.

"We believe that we have the best field and the best proposition in the city," said Mr. Dickinson. "We hope the government will accept, because it means much to Chicago. It may result in the bringing of an air service experimental station here, and then Chicago would really be the center of American aviation. We hope that our offer will be accepted."

Going to Omaha.

Chicago will have at least two entries in the races at the International Aero congress, which will be held in Omaha Nov. 3, 4, and 5. These ships will not enter the Pulitzer trophy race, as they are commercial planes in the seventy-five to ninety miles an hour class, built for carrying passengers and freight on long hops.

Charles Paterson, builder of the Paterson Hornet, an OX-5 job, with side radiators, a round nose, and a spinner on the propeller, will enter two free for all races.

Price Hollingworth is putting the finishing touches to a Standard that he has powered with a Breadmore motor. This ship will carry three passengers and fly around ninety miles an hour. Hollingworth believes he has a good chance to win the ninety m. p. h. contest.

Going South.

The Triangle Airways ships that have been flying over Chicago for two months left yesterday for the south. J. C. Doyle and R. B. Clark flew the big HS-2, Liberty motored ships to Peoria, St. Louis, Memphis, and on down to New Orleans, where they will spend the winter.

National Guard Air Forces of 18 States Under Way

Minnesota Guardsmen Flying; Others Follow

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 15.—Air forces of the national guard of eighteen states authorized in the organization of the army of the United States are getting under way, according to Maj. Gen. George C. Rickards, chief of the militia bureau. From coast to coast the air defense under the new army plan will be complete, says Gen. Rickards. There will be eighteen squadrons attached to as many divisions, now in process of reconstruction, each bearing the designation of a national guard division in the world war. In addition eleven states will furnish national guard air service units to operate with army corps.

The enthusiasm of the national guard for this new service is stressed in the fact that the 109th squadron of Minnesota, which has the honor of organizing the first unit and gaining recognition on Jan. 17, 1921, has been operating all summer with airplanes of its own and a flying field with hangars supplied by the state. The unit has twenty officers and ninety-four men, and in observation tactics and photographic work has made notable strides.

Maryland's 104th squadron, with twenty-three officers and ninety-three men, was recognized June 29, 1921. It is also flying its own airplanes and is using a government field located between Fort Howard and Baltimore. The 102d squadron of New York, with a field at Mineola, L. I., as a base of operations, is about to gain recognition, having passed the required war department inspection. The corps air service of Indiana, recognized Aug. 1, 1921, has fifteen officers and eighty-one men, and the Tennessee corps air service is rapidly approaching a state of complete organization.

Because of the lack of air equipment the war department is still unable to furnish airplanes, but Gen. Rickards believes this situation will soon be overcome when new airplanes contracted for are delivered to the army air service, which will then release observation machines for use of the national guard. Each of the national guard air squadrons will eventually be equipped with nine airplanes and other material, including trucks, motor transport, motorcycles, side cars, etc. The states are required to furnish fields and hangars, or to make arrangements for the use of government fields in the vicinity of air squadron headquarters. Each air unit consists of an observation squadron and a photographic section, and when granted recognition army aviators are assigned to them by the government as instructors.

Both in the Same Fix

[Owners of stately English homes feel financial straits of maintaining them.—News Item.]

By Guy Lee

I used to envy potentates their palaces so grand;
Their stately mansions made my soul with bitterness expand;
They almost turned me bolshevik, those rambling old châteaux,
And how I cussed the earls and dukes, and nursed my jealous woes!
But when the world-wide war brought on its income taxing sequel
I figgered that it sorter squared conditions nearer equal;
For I was told the owners had to do a lot of wrassling
To try to raise the wherewithal to keep their castles castling.

I used to envy potentates their costly homes. Ahem!
We're brothers in affliction now, and I condole with them.
I thought I had it on them when I got a four room flat
For fifty, even sixty, bones a month. Alas! but that
Was long before the profiteers had juggled with the rent;
Since then I'm in as bad a fix as any titled gent!

. . . .

And so, my lords, it's up to us to check the outgo fleet,
'Or noble and plebeian both may slumber in the street!

The WELL-DRESSED MAN

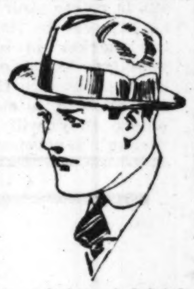
Soft Hats in Light Tints Vault Into Favor

By Alfred Stephen Bryan.

NEW YORK.—That worthy minister who, receiving a call to Minneapolis, took his first sermon text from St. Paul, meant well, but he lacked a sense of the fitness of things. In the fine art of dress, too, the fitness of things is the first requirement. Town clothes should smack of town; country clothes should hint of the country, and sport and travel clothes should bespeak, in their fullness and freedom, far streches and open spaces.

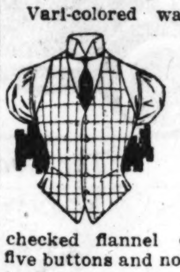
To illustrate, loose gloves go properly with lounge dress; snug gloves belong with formal dress. Trousers with turnups are capital for knockabout or the field; trousers for urban wear are preferably of single thickness at the bottom. Patch pocketed jackets are tiptop upon the links, but upon the avenue they do not look so fitting. Running through the whole theme of dress, like a fugue in a musical composition, is the basic idea of appropriateness to place and purpose. If one dresses appropriately others might doubt one's means but they cannot doubt one's taste.

The Hat at the Head.

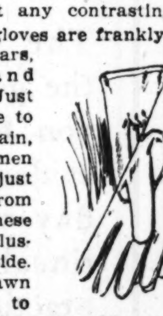


Soft hats with contrasting ribbons, as black spanning pearl and tan spanning sand, are most in favor this autumn, as are also the lighter shades of felt, sometimes worn with gloves and gaiters to match. Portrayed is a soft hat which is typical of similar blocks — rather snug of crown with a brim of fairish width, often rolled. The bow of the ribbon is either directly in the center or set just a trifle back of it.

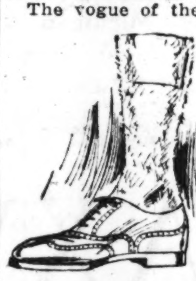
Brightening Up the Waistcoat.



Vari-colored waistcoats, commonly called fancy, are quite the thing again to pair off with dark colored jackets, as blue, brown, green, and gray. One of these is reproduced here. It is single breasted of checked flannel or cashmere with five buttons and no collar. The ground is light or cream colored, and the straight and cross stripes are carried out in almost any contrasting tint.



Buttonless gloves are frankly a fad, which appears, disappears, and reappears. Just now a few are to be seen again, usually upon men who have just crossed from abroad. These gloves are illustrated alongside. They are drawn on and left to wrinkle smartly and softly atop the wrist. Capeskin, buckskin, mocha, chamois—almost any leather will do.



The vogue of the brogue is not so marked as it used to be, but this fashion is far from getting the boot. A brogued shoe is pictured here with its familiar wing tip and punching, the latter brought back to the heel and even clear up to the eyelet stays. It is a masculine affair with a resounding clamp to it.

Tree Planting to Feature Armistice Day Celebrations

By Leola Allard.

WITH Armistice day less than a month away, organizations throughout the country are putting the final touches upon their Armistice day celebrations, when Memory trees numbering many thousands will be planted upon America's highways to the honor of all the soldiers who served in the world war.

Perhaps the biggest allotments of trees to be planted by any organizations will be the 6,000 trees placed upon the Lincoln highway in Indiana by the St. Joseph County Memorial Tree organization; the 10,000 trees planted by the Illinois Legion and Boy Scouts upon the government road to Waukegan from Niles north through Glen View on the western skirts of Shermerville, directly north of Waukegan; four miles of trees on Roosevelt road leading into and out of Wheaton; twenty-five miles of the West Coast road by the Rotary Club of Florida; the beginning of the Victory highway of black walnuts from Saginaw, Mich., to Chicago; the beginning of 6,000 trees by the Fond du Lac Kiwanis club; 10,000 trees by the Joliet, Ottawa, and Aurora chambers of commerce, and twenty-five miles of trees in Allen, Hardin, and Marion counties, O., past the home of the President at Marion.

Texas Is Enthusiastic.

From Texas, one of the most enthusiastic Memory tree planters, comes word that Mrs. Ben F. Boydstrum of Greenville, chairman of waterways and forestry, Texas Federation of Women's Clubs, is going to actively interest the state's 40,000 club women and have each plant a soldier tree, which would surely place Texas in the front row for the prize in Memory tree planting. The state forester, E. A. Siecke, sends news of the arrangement perfected by Mrs. Boydstrum.

"THE PINES"—SHALL THEY BE A MEMORIAL?

THESE STATELY, SOLDIERLY PINES are part of the oldest pine forest in Illinois, situated in Ogle county. A proposal is pending before the legislature to make this forest a state park as a memorial to world war heroes.

Merritt B. Pratt, acting state forester at Sacramento, Cal., came to THE TRIBUNE a few days ago with the news that California wants to conform to the general plan in marking her Memory roads, and he had an interesting story of the nurseries California has started with the one idea of soldier trees upon the highways.

California Buys Redwood.

"The state forester is in charge of the roadside planting," said Mr. Merritt, "but the highway commission is in charge of the land, and the owners of property along the way can't even burn grass without a permit from the commission. It wouldn't do them much good to protest about roadside planting out there. Any way, no one does protest. They all want it.

"The women's clubs and the chamber of commerce in Sacramento are staking and planting twenty-five miles of trees with 104 trees to the mile. It is costing them about $4 per tree. The state has appropriated $300,000 for the buying of virgin redwood timber, and these trees will be placed along the highways. After our trees are planted they are cared for by the highway commission, and eventually, I can safely say, the state of California will have enough trees to plant them along all highways, and they will all be given away without cost."

Mr. Merritt says the Native Sons society has arranged to make a stretch of road into a Memory road for the soldiers, and their plans are now perfected.

The International Memory road at Washington brought to the minds of some who saw it the Chinese ginko tree, now growing at Grant's tomb in Riverside and sent to this country by Li Hung Chang to honor the American general.

J. L. Zender, nurseryman and member of Kiwanis, who has already donated three beautiful 20 foot globe elms to his organization for the Memory road, has offered to sell 2,200 maple, elm, and ash trees and to plant them for Memory roads for $4.50 per tree. They are two and a half inch trees. Other nurserymen are making prices for Memory road trees, so when buying state what the trees are wanted for and the price will fall. Ask for the price planted, unless you want to do the planting yourself under wise direction, when the price will be considerably less.

Plea to Use Highway.

The Lions club of Flint, Mich., will plant 167 Memory trees on Armistice day for the soldier dead of Flint. This will be to start the city's Memory tree planting, which will continue in the spring. Through the Chamber of Commerce the citizens of Flint have been asked to take part in the dedicatory exercises and help with the program.

Again the plea is put forth that all tree planters place their Memory trees upon the highways and not within cities. The idea is too big to be selfish with, and the place for your soldier's memorial is in the line with other soldier trees, where, a hundred years from now, when you are not here to watch it, it will not be chopped down or forgotten by some one who builds where your tree stands, and has no interest in its fate. If you want the marker to be permanent, mark your tree as the others are marked, in bronze, through the American Legion, and allow it to stand with the others, where they will be given protection through centuries to come.

RIALTO.

King and Rose:

"I can't trust you out of my sight for a moment,"

"What's the matter, pet?"

"I'll teach you to flirt with young girls."

"You don't have to; I know how already."

"What's that?"

"I said, 'I'm much too steady.'"

"I ought to get even by flirting with every man I meet—but I haven't got the face to do it."

"No; your face would scare them away."

"Is that so? Then perhaps you didn't see that man smile at me just now as we passed."

"That's nothing. The first time I saw you I nearly laughed my head off."

"Are you trying to insult me before all these people?"

"No; they can insult you first if they want to."

"Don't get me excited or I'll wrap your cane around your bean and separate you from your memory."

"I bet I married John L. Sullivan's mother."

"You've said enough."

"I want you to understand that I'm no fool."

"No, a fool and his money are soon parted, and I'm never able to get a nickel out of you."

ASTRONOMY

HOW GRAVITY SHAPES CONTINENTS.

WORLDS, shrinking under the force of their own gravity, establish their surfaces in equilibrium. It seems there never is a time when chaos reigns on any body, great or small. There is always law everywhere. Evolution is a law. The externals of a world may change, but not its inner plan. It is no accident that land and water areas on the earth lie as they do.

The process of continent formation was begun while the world was still a mass of gas and stones. The places where land and water were to lie were fixed before the surface of our globe ceased to be a place of heavy clouds above the sea and rocks.

The sun now shows the first stages of their building. The spots which fleck its surface are not mere accidental irregularities, but the visible manifestation of forces which extend to the core of the sun itself. Sun spots, no matter how scattered, are all connected in one great scheme, the purpose of which is to bring the various layers of the sun into unified stability.

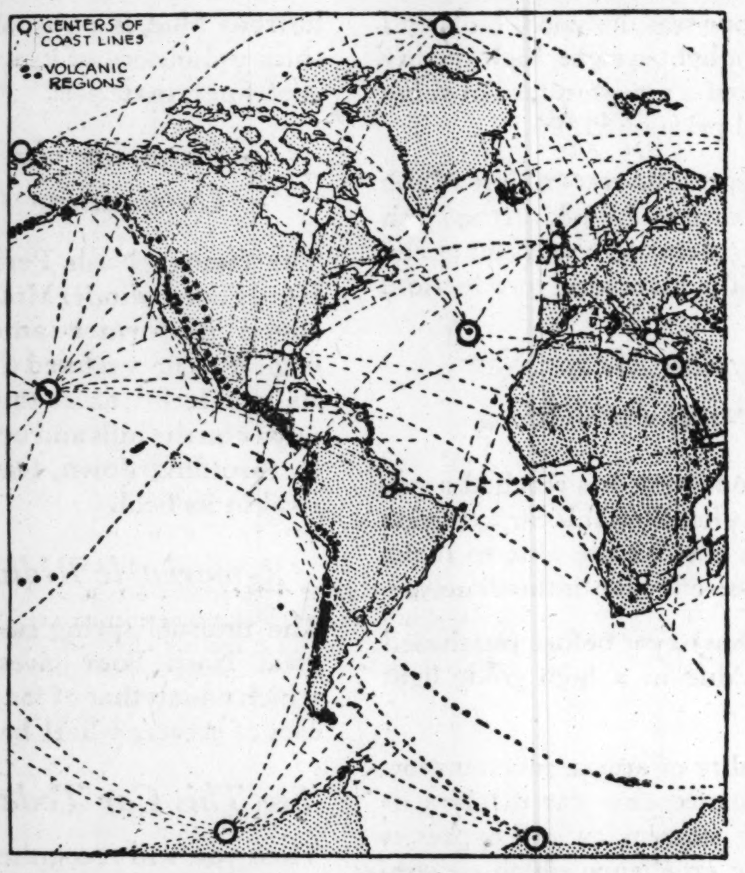
On Jupiter, itself a sort of semi-sun, we find the process of world building in a more advanced stage. Here the spot zones of the sun are multiplied into well deefined belts. A certain spot appeared on Jupiter about thirty years ago and has continued to be visible ever since. It was a bright red color when discovered, and, although now faded yellow, is still called "the great red spot." It has the appearance of a solid floating isalnd in a sea of dense gas.

There are many other spots on Jupiter, less conspicuous than the great red spot, perhaps, which partake of its character, and judging from the orderly way in which they repeat themselves, we know their cause is deep rooted in the substance of the globe. They testify that on Jupiter, too, matter is trying to adjust its equilibrium.



THE ORIGIN OF COAST LINES
BY S. F. MAXWELL

It is a long step from the stage of Jupiter to the earth. We can only guess about what took place between the time when our globe was like Jupiter and the time of our earliest geological periods. We know, however, that the first land that appeared and left record of its existence lay according to a plan and the general position of the continents has not changed since that time.

The rule is for coast lines, deeps, mountains, and often even rivers to follow the arcs of great circles about the globe. These great circles are generated from nine main centers and numerous lesser ones. Six of them are near the polar circles, one is at Bering strait, one off northern Greenland, and one at the Gulf of Obi. Each has its respective antipode in Antartica. Roughly midway between are the other three, at Hawaii, the Azores, and Suez.

Areas of violent volcanoes are often found where lines from these centers cross. The principal volcanic fields are found in the East Indies, the Red Sea, Italy, the West Indies, Mexico, the Andes, the western United States, Alaska, and Antarctica.

The plan that the world is built upon has decreed that continents and oceans shall lie where they do. When a mass of land rears itself out of the water its coast line is bounded by the segments of these crisscrossing arcs, for the crust breaks and moves along these lines easier than it does across them. The weather and the rivers are always wearing down the land and transporting its substance to the sea. This in time would destroy the earth's balanced shape, but should that danger threaten, as it often does, the surface writhes and swells and rises up again in some new place.

J. H.: Astronomy increases the grasp of the mind. It has a broadening effect. It has great cultural value, and it shows that there are many things of importance to be learned beyond the facts of food and dress and the pursuit of pleasure.

For Every Ford Truck

The NEW Standard Governor solves the Ford Truck owner's problems. It eliminates high repair cost. It insures a better truck—more service, less expense, less wear and tear, less trouble. The Standard Governor for Ford Trucks controls the motor at a uniform speed on all grades and inclines. It will hold the speed constant under all loads, and in this it is a boon to the inexperienced driver. It saves fuel by prevention of motor racing, and though it is set for a certain speed, it can be instantly and easily throttled down.

No driver can race his truck at an unlawful speed when it is equipped with the Standard, nor can he shorten the life of his car by overtaxing it.

A Word About Installation—The installation of the Standard Governor is exceedingly simple. The governor drive is taken from the cam-shaft gear, and fits into the generator opening. The work of installation requires less than one hour!

REMEMBER—The Standard Governor is positively guaranteed.

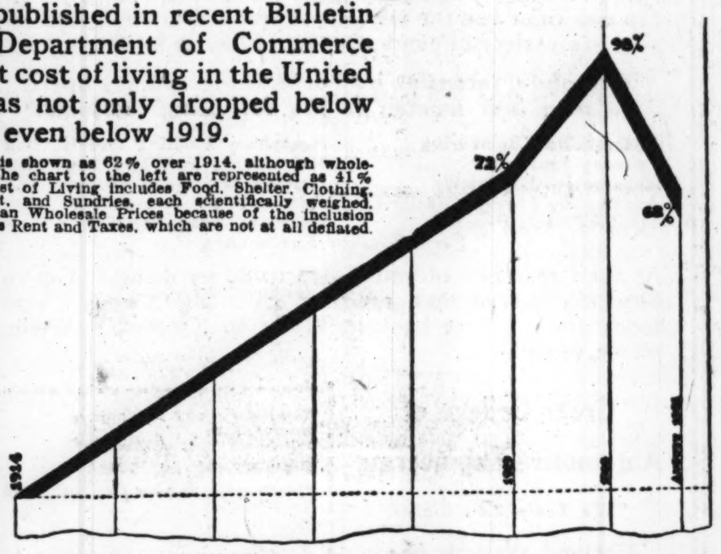
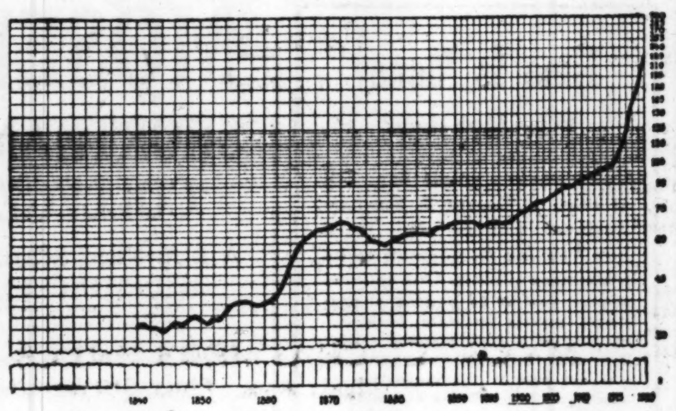
Cost of Living

Figures published in recent Bulletin of the Department of Commerce show that cost of living in the United States has not only dropped below 1920, but even below 1919.

Cost of Living is shown as 62% over 1914, although wholesale prices in the chart to the left are represented as 41% over 1913. Cost of Living includes Food, Shelter, Clothing, Fuel and Light, and Sundries, each scientifically weighed. It is higher than Wholesale Prices because of the inclusion of such items as Rent and Taxes, which are not at all deflated.



The chart below shows how wages have increased during the past 80 years. The reductions during 1921 represent a drop on this scale from the peak figure of 225 to somewhere between 200 and 210, leaving the figure still far above any previous period. This chart was prepared by the Continental and Commercial National bank from statistics of the Bureau of Labor.



On the right are index numbers of the wages per hour—1913-100

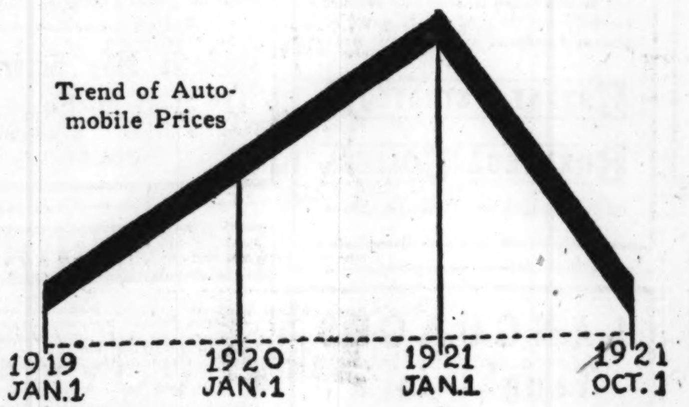
The following table shows the wages paid to unskilled labor by the United States Steel Corporation after each advance or cut since 1915, together with the percentage in advance of the 1915 rate. Even after the latest cut (far more severe than in other lines) steel labor is receiving half as much again as six years ago.

	Wages 10 hr. Day	% Advance Over '15 Rate
1915	$2.00	......
Feb 1, 1916	2.20	10.0
May 1, 1916	2.50	25.0
Dec. 15 1916	2.75	37.5
May 1, 1917	3.00	50.0
Oct. 1, 1917	3.30	65.0
Apr. 16, 1918	3.80	90.0
Aug 1, 1918	4.20	110.0
Oct. 1, 1918	4.62	131.0
Feb. 1, 1920	5.06	153.0
May 16, 1921	4.05	102.5
July 16, 1921	3.70	85.0
Aug 29, 1921	3.00	50.0

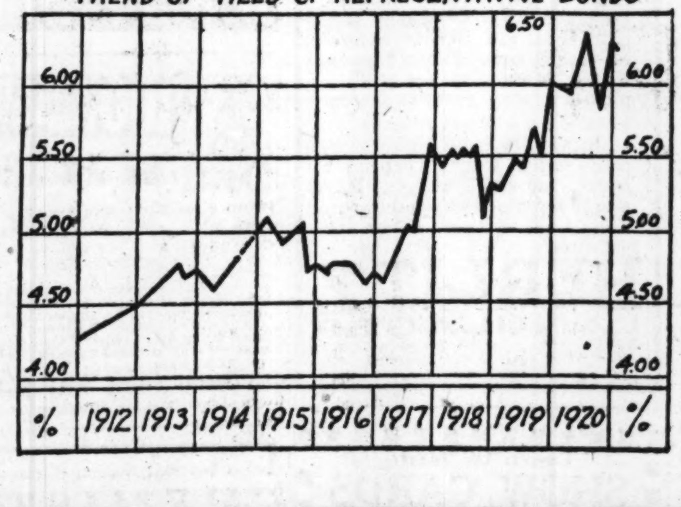
Rail workers' wages, even after the latest cut, are estimated as double the average paid in 1913.

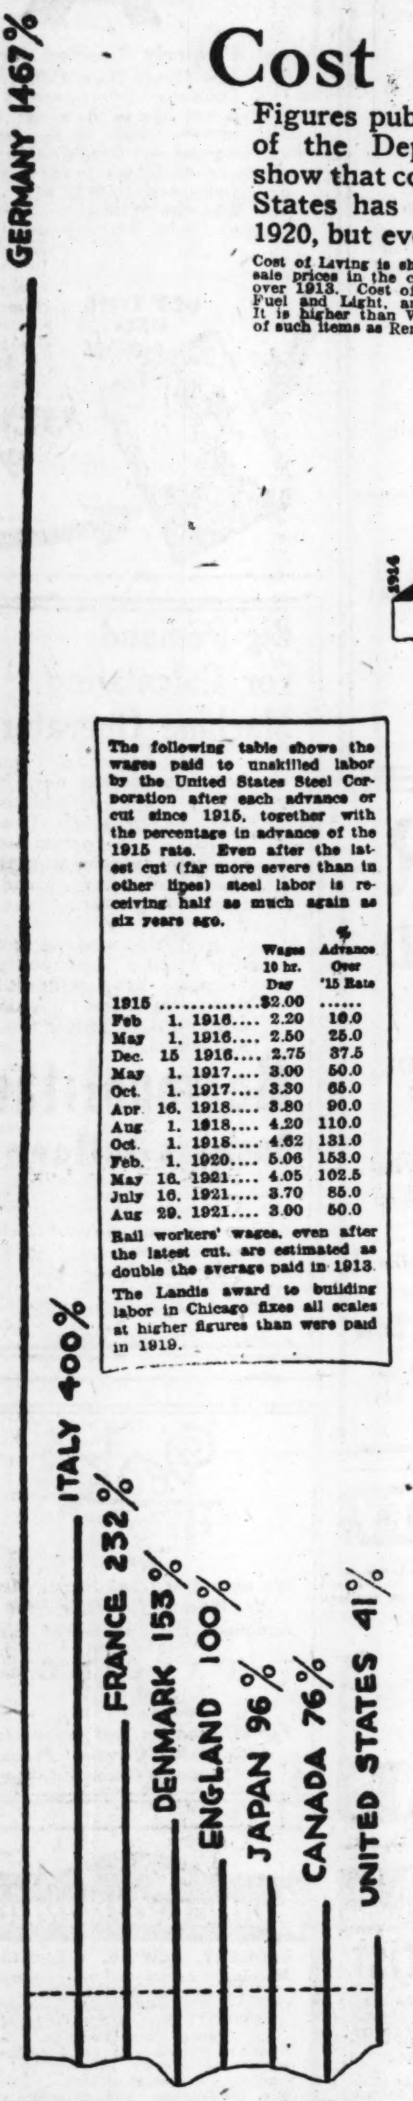
The Landis award to building labor in Chicago fixes all scales at higher figures than were paid in 1919.

Trend of Automobile Prices



TREND OF YIELD OF REPRESENTATIVE BONDS





The above chart shows how present wholesale prices in various countries exceed those of eight years ago. Dotted line represents 1913 as 100.

CHANGES during the past year and a half have been tremendous, but most of us have been so close to them that we "couldn't see the city because of the buildings." One chorus has been shouting that "prices must come down," while another set thundered that "wages must come down." Each group is so busy trying to outshout the other that attention has been distracted from the fact that both prices and wages are down. Prices have dropped faster than wages, which is as it should be, and, therefore, conditions are ripe for business revival.

TO drive home these facts The Daily Tribune recently printed a series of full pages under the slogan which heads this page. The price situation with regard to General Merchandise, Securities, Food Products and Automobiles was analyzed in these advertisements over the signature of a representative man in each line. Contributors to the series included:

D. F. Kelly
Director of the National Retail Dry Goods Association

Roy C. Osgood
President Investment Bankers Association of America

W. A. Heath
Chairman of the Board of the Chicago Federal Reserve Bank

Thomas J. Hay
President of the Automobile Trade Association of Chicago

Bismarck Feilchenfeld
Chairman of the Central Executive Committee of Retail Food Distributors

These pages have been reprinted in portfolio form and will be mailed free to any selling organization if requested on business stationery.

Each advertisement is a thorough treatment of the subject by an authority and is illustrated by charts such as appear on this page. The following quotations indicate the stimulating nature of the campaign:

MR. KELLY said that prices are now as low as they would be if normal development had not been interrupted seven years ago by war. He added:

> "Both prices and wages are higher than they were several years ago—but the balance is in favor of wages.
> "If you doubt this, consider the standard of living of the average man; consider the quality and variety of the comforts and conveniences and luxuries which he enjoys as the result of each day's work and compare them with what the man in the same position a generation ago would have been able to afford.
> "A day's work has purchased more during each decade notwithstanding advancing prices because a day's work produces more. The achievements of science, of engineering, of organization, of executive ability—in short, of brains—enable men to create more wealth with each day's work, and therefore to obtain more of the good things of life."

MR. OSGOOD emphasized the unusual income yield obtainable by purchasing securities at present prices. He said in part:

> "Investors who are still out of the market may be deterred by a fear that the tide has not definitely turned for the better or by a feeling that prices may go still lower. We can not prove that these people are wrong, but a consideration of all factors shows that the probabilities are that the tide has turned and that present opportunities for genuine investment bargains will not long be available.
> "The dollar which is not at work is as great an industrial waste as an idle man. It is injuring its owner and the public. The dollar that is put at work today by investment in a sound bond will not only do its share in speeding up industry but will insure a high return to its owner for many years to come."

MR. HAY presented a tabulation of 52 cars, with peak price and present price of each, showing a drop of 20%. He pointed out that auto registrations have increased 89,673 in Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Wisconsin for the first six months of 1921 as compared with the same period of 1920.

MR. FEILCHENFELD concluded his statement with this paragraph:

> "At present prices and present wages my employees can buy more food in the average Chicago grocery store than they ever could with the results of a day's labor. Prices are down."

CHICAGO TRIBUNE advertising has also decreased in cost during the year. Rates have remained the same, although circulation during the past six months has averaged 46,114 more daily and 90,627 more Sunday than during the corresponding period of 1920. At the average rate charged by Illinois newspapers, this additional circulation (which Tribune advertisers receive at no additional expense) is worth 13 cents per agate line Daily and 26 cents per line Sunday.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Institute for Church Workers Begins Tomorrow

By Rev. Gardner MacWhorter.

TOMORROW evening the "Institute for Church Workers" will open for the first session of the fall term at the University of Chicago. Dean Shailer Matthews of the divinity school—under whose auspices the institute is held—announces practical courses in Bible study, religious education, and recreational activities to be given at two periods every Monday evening from Oct. 17 to Dec. 18, inclusive.

The 7:30 o'clock class work period offers three courses for church workers: "Paul, a Pioneer in Christian Living and Christian Service," given by the Rev. Dean Matthews; "Religious Development in Childhood and Adolescence," by Prof. Joseph M. Artman, and "Bible Stories in Religious Education," by Miss Georgia L. Chamberlin.

The lecture and class work period at 8:15 o'clock will include a course on "The Religion of the Old Testament Prophets" given by Prof. John M. Powis Smith, and "The Social Values of Play for the Junior and the Adolescent," a class to be directed by Miss Margaret Burns, assistant professor of physical education.

In the last two years, for this is the third Institute for Church Workers, several hundred people have been enrolled in the Monday evening classes, and in last year's classes representatives of more than forty churches were registered. A cordial welcome is extended by Dean Shailer Matthews to church members who desire to gain a more vital knowledge of the Bible and of religious education and recreation under church auspices.

On Thursday evening a rally of all the Lutherans in Chicago will be held at Medinah temple, Cass and Ohio streets, in the interest of the Lutheran Memorial hospital, Haddon and Kedzie avenues. The features of this rally will be an organ recital by Edward Rechlin of New York and an address by the Rev. E. T. Lams of Oak Park.

The Rev. Joshua Stansfield, D. D., comes to the McCabe Memorial Methodist Episcopal church at Blackstone avenue and 5th street as the new pastor today, and will preach his first sermons this morning at 11 o'clock, and this evening at 7:45 o'clock. The Rev. Dr. Stansfield succeeds the Rev. George McAdams, D. D., pastor for the last four years, who has become the pastor of the Olivet Methodist Episcopal church on West Adams street.

On Oct. 5, in THE TRIBUNE Memory Test column, the question, "How many books in the Old Testament of the Bible, and in what three divisions are they classified?" was answers as follows: "Twenty-four books in the Old Testament; the Law five (5), the Prophets eight (8), and the Writings eleven (11)."

A number of readers have taken exception to this answer, stating that the number of books should be thirty-nine instead of twenty-four.

The authority for considering the Old Testament as composed of twenty-four books is the article "Canon of the Old Testament" in Hasting's Dictionary of the Bible, an authoritative work published by Charles Scribner's Sons, New York, in 1914. The article was written and signed by the Rev. D. M. Kay, M. A., D. D., professor of Hebrew in the University of St. Andrew's, Scotland.

The books of the Old Testament and their classification, as given by the Rev. Mr. Kay and as accepted by Biblical scholars throughout the world, are the Law five books—Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy; the Prophets eight books—Joshua, Judges, Samuel, Kings, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and the twelve minor prophets considered as one book; the Writings eleven books—Psalms, Proverbs, Job, Canticles, Ruth, Lamentations, Ecclesiastes, Esther, Ezra-Nehemiah, Daniel, and Chronicles.

An old fashioned country fair and bazaar will be held by the members of St. Lucy's Roman Catholic church in the school auditorium at Mayfield and Lake streets, Austin, for one week beginning Saturday. Committees of men and women in the parish under the leadership of the Rev. M. A. Dorney, pastor, and the Rev. M. Hayden, assistant pastor, have been making preparations for the last month, and it is announced that there will be a feature entertainment each evening during the fair.

The religious service at the burial of the "Unknown American Hero" in Arlington cemetery, Washington, D. C., on Armistice day will be conducted by the Rt. Rev. Charles Henry Brent, D. D., Episcopal bishop of western New York. Bishop Brent was the senior chaplain of the A. E. F. on Gen. Pershing's staff, and was awarded the distinguished service medal for his service during the war.

"The Great Waste Product" will be the subject of an address today at the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall by Dean Francis G. Peabody of Harvard university, Cambridge, Mass. For thirty-nine years, Dr. Peabody has been of the faculty of Harvard. His influence on the growth and development of that institution during these years has brought him wide recognition in educational circles. He was first exchange professor at Berlin. Internationally known for his writings and lectures, Dr. Peabody attracts large audiences annually at the Sunday Evening club.

A concert of sacred, vocal, and instrumental music will be given in St. James' Episcopal church, Cass and Huron streets, on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. The vested choir of forty men and boys will be assisted by Mrs. Orpha Kendall Holstmann, soprano. John W. Norton will preside at the organ.

The third season of Dr. James M. Gray's Sunday afternoon Bible expositions at 4 o'clock in the Moody Bible institute auditorium will open today. No church or denomination is represented by these services, which have been attended by ministers and laity of all creeds, where their own church services do not conflict. Last season there was an average attendance of 700. Every Sunday the passage of Scripture chosen for the exposition—differing from a sermon or address—is placed in printed form in the hands of each auditor. Alfred H. Holzworth will again be the choir leader and Foss L. Fellers the organist.

A bronze bas-relief memorial tablet of the late Dr. D. B. Towner will be unveiled at dedication exercises Thursday evening at 7:45 o'clock in the Moody Bible institute auditorium building. The tablet is the gift of former members of the Moody church choir, of which Dr. Towner was chorister from 1893 to 1916. The presentation address will be made by the Rev. William Evans, D. D., and the speech of acceptance on behalf of the Moody Bible institute by Dr. James M. Gray. Prof. Foss L. Fellers will play a medley of Dr. Towner's compositions, and Harry Clarke will sing.

Brig. Gen. George H. Harries will speak this evening at the First Presbyterian church, Grand boulevard and 41st street, on "World Peace and the Army Man," in a series of Sunday evening community meetings dealing with the question of world peace, preliminary to the conference of the world powers on Armistice day in Washington.

The Magnetism of Complexion

Why the Use of Stuart's Calcium Wafers Has Such an Influence That It Clears Skin of Pimples

It is generally admitted that the laxative action of calcium sulphide is one of the best influences to clear the skin. But not until Stuart's Calcium Wafers were introduced was this fact so generally manifest.

Their action in the bowels and liver is so prompt that the blood is cleansed of those impurities that show in the skin in the form of pimples.

The skin thus influenced by these wonderful Stuart's Calcium Wafers clears of those little eruptions, and firm skin grows with the health that protects from wind and weather.

These wafers contain no poisonous drug of any kind and soon overcome bad breath and the dull, stupid feeling that results from constipation. Mild in action.

No matter how hard you have tried to make your skin beautiful, Stuart's Calcium Wafers should work wonders with it. Rash and a muddy "filled-up" skin texture all give way to a more lovely complexion.

You can get Stuart's Calcium Wafers at any drug store at 60 cents a box, and you will be positively delighted with their wonderful laxative and beautifying influence.

FARM and GARDEN

Experts Advise Stabilizing the Farmer's Output

accomplished and I believe can be effected wherever and whenever there is imperative need for it."

Furthermore, he warns that any advocacy of the regulation of agricultural production that disregards either the interests of the producer or the public is vicious. The object of regulation of agricultural production Mr. Mumford summarizes as follows: "To stabilize the supply of food products, that there may be available at all times an adequate supply of foodstuffs at prices that the public can afford to pay, to insure price levels that will return to the efficient producer a reasonable profit; to eliminate economic waste, and bring about a better balance in agricultural production."

HERBERT W. MUMFORD.

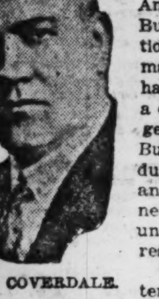
Fluctuations Work Hardships.

While Mr. Mumford does not overlook the many complexed and involved factors that affect supply and demand, he says that price is probably the largest factor in determining the supply of agricultural commodities, and the greater the variation in price the greater the tendency toward radical fluctuation in the quantity of the farm product involved.

"Extreme fluctuations in price always work hardships," he says. "Abnormally low price levels for agricultural products are nearly always followed by a general reduction in the quantity of the product which the producer is either willing or able to produce. If the price is abnormally high the producer may or may not largely profit thereby, depending upon whether the higher prices reach the producer or are absorbed in one way or another by factors, including distributors dealing in the farmers' products. Abnormally high prices tend to stimulate production to the overproduction point with its accompanying difficulties.

Aim to Create Mass Mind.

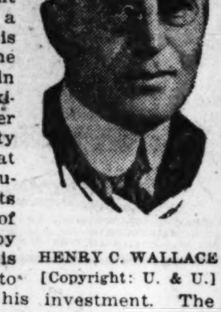
The average farmer is beginning to realize that he must look beyond his own back fence in order to produce more intelligently. J. W. Coverdale, secretary of the American Farm Bureau federation, says that many farmers have long pursued a course of intelligent production. But when one produces intelligently and a score of his neighbors produce unintelligently the result is negative.



J. W. COVERDALE.

"We are attempting to create somewhat of a mass mind among all farmers of the nation for intelligent production," he said. "Only organization and education can bring this about.

"There is never a thought in the mind of a good farmer to restrict his farm output. A good farmer does not think that way. The rural mind is constructed on a fundamentally different principle. Ask a farmer about his business and he will reply in terms of maximum bushels per acre. The city mind is not that way. A manufacturer reflects the prosperity of his business by citing you to his sales sheet or to the return on his investment. The farmer has pride in maximum output and so measures his success. The manufacturer has pride in maximum return on his capital. Any study of such a fundamental problem as agricultural production must take this into consideration."



HENRY C. WALLACE
[Copyright: U. & U.]

The farm bureau expects to gather facts about world production, according to the secretary, and distribute information to the farmers so they will be able to plan their operations intelligently. "Before he starts to plow for wheat the farmer should have at hand all the facts about wheat—how much wheat the world will need, how much wheat is on hand now, how much wheat was raised last year and for the last ten years, how much wheat was carried over, and what is the average cost of producing a bushel of wheat in this section. Give him facts such as these over a period of years and the farmer will not overproduce wheat. He will have a planter's guide and know how to produce wheat intelligently."

EUGENE DAVENPORT.

Waste in Overproduction.

J. R. Howard, president of the farm bureau, said: "I am not an advocate of limiting or curtailing production on the farm, in the mines, or in the factory, but I believe that it is unfortunate for all classes of our society to have for too long a period of time an overproduction in any line. Whenever indications point that the carryover of any crop, together with a normal yield for the ensuing year, will mean more than normal domestic and export demands, the farmer would be justified in temporarily limiting his production of the crop that is overproduced. He could do this either by growing another kind of crop or by putting his land to clover or other legumes, thus storing up fertility for future needs."

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

THE SYNCOPATED GLOM-SHOP.

[Music and dancing is now a feature in many cafeterias.]

When Music, heavenly maid, was young
  (As some one else has said),
She never thought she'd sing among
The spinach, cabbages, and tongue
  To earn her daily bread,
Accompanying with merry lays
The tintinnabulating trays.

Tripping by on dancing feet
  In a ravening, rhythmic line,
They spear the culinary treat
To a pulsing, syncopated beat
  That titillates the spine—
An Aurora Borealis flame
That flutters up and down the frame.

The salmon sobbing in its can,
  The ham-hock's mating call
Is blended with the rataplan
Of a diabolical drummer man
  And the bugler's lusty bawl,
And the guttural, gastronomic groan
Of the jazztronomic saxophone.

Penberthy Re-Atomizers Prevent Dilution of Crank Case Oil and Give Perfect Lubrication

Dilution of crank case oil always has been a lubrication evil. Every prominent oil concern and automotive engineer in the country has attempted to discover a way to prevent this dilution, which ruins the value of oil as a lubricant and shortens the life of the bearing surfaces of the motor. It remained for Penberthy to make the discovery which lubrication experts declare to be the most important and far-reaching in the development of automobile transportation.

How Our Test Was Conducted

A car of standard make, run previously only 4,000 miles, was operated over the streets of Chicago for 500 miles. The start was made with 6 quarts of new lubricating oil in the crank case without a Re-Atomizer. After the run the oil was removed and found to measure 5.1 quarts. Analysis showed that 38% of it was gasoline and kerosene.

The same car was then run another 500 miles under like conditions. The start was made with 6 quarts of the same kind of new oil—but with a Penberthy Re-Atomizer inserted in the intake manifold. After the run only 3.7 quarts of lubricating oil was found in the crank case. And it was excellent, non-diluted lubricating oil.

Oil shrinks in volume under heat, so where did the 1.4 quarts come from in the first test without the Re-Atomizer? Analysis showed it to be a mixture of gasoline and kerosene, which could only come from the unburned fuel from the engine! The second test showed no dilution because the Penberthy Re-Atomizer caught the liquid gasoline before it ever reached the cylinders. The volume increases with dilution and your oil gauge does not tell you when you need oil.

How the Penberthy Re-Atomizer Stops Crank Case Dilution

Gasoline gets into the cylinders in liquid form as it leaves the carburetor. Naturally the place to stop it is where it starts. The Re-Atomizer is inserted between the intake manifold and the carburetor. It traps the liquid gasoline as it collects on the side walls of the manifold; feeds it into a powerful air stream completely re-atomizing it—passing it evenly into all the cylinders. Re-Atomizers not only prevent dilution of crank case oil but make an astonishing improvement in the performance of your motor.

Go to a Dealer Today and Try One!

Prove for yourself just what the Re-Atomizer will do for your car. Slip it into the manifold yourself. It will take only a few moments. Prevent forever the greatest menace to the vital parts of your car and reduce repair bills 50%!

MEN, ARE YOU SATISFIED? GET STARTED RIGHT.

A reliable, fast growing loop Real Estate firm can use the services of two high grade, experienced Subdivision Managers who can handle, train, and coach men to produce results. The men we want must be employed at present in the above capacity or be good salesmen who have confidence in their ability to qualify. Must drive their own cars and be Chicago men. Real men who are looking for a future rather than a mere job are preferred. We have enough high grade improved properties with present transportation to keep us going for two years, and a real building service with the most reasonable terms an interested person could ask for. You know what this means as soon as this building jam is over and the big boom starts. Our policy has made us what we are today, which is—Back the men in the field to the limit. High class quarters, big commissions, choice property to sell, bona fide leads, reasonable terms, paid closers, and many other things is the answer for our men sticking and not changing jobs all the time. If this proposition appeals to you, and you have a good, clean selling record and think you can handle it, call for a personal interview with JOHN C. STRUTHERS, General Sales Manager, Suite 1016, 36 S. State-st.

President Harding was right on his "normalcy" idea. But the Resale Shop didn't begin to think and act on the "normalcy" basis ONLY this last year. We have ALWAYS been a "normalcy" proposition, because we have ALWAYS been keen on figuring on the smallest percentage of profit possible. When big profits were the common thing we simply did not get on the bandwagon. As a result we made a great many new friends and did a record breaking volume of business.

Just now we are mighty glad we stuck to the small profit-big volume idea, for we have secured a real reputation as the Chicago fur store of unbeatable value.

Remember, everything is absolutely new and guaranteed. Don't forget that this is a "normalcy" sale, but that there is a lot of abnormally big values down here. And we will sell an abnormally large number of coats this week. If you are a normal person you will come down early and get first choice.

Don't think that it takes a lot of money to get a really beautiful fur coat which will wear well. Come down and let us show you how really inexpensively you can appear well dressed.

INDIVIDUALITY IN FURS.

Women usually appreciate the significance of "first impressions," for appearance does express individuality.

This is especially so in Fur Garments, as furs so often bring out hidden charms when made to suit the personality of the Wearer.

It's the ability and experience to create garments of individuality that has given the name "MILLER" a foremost place of supremacy in the minds of the well dressed woman of Chicago.

Quality is economy—and "MILLER" quality means value—value that is enhanced by the fair, honest prices asked.

Good quality, good style and good prices constitute the "MILLER" value.

CADILLAC'S 11 BARGAINS

COLE, 1920, BERLIN LIMOUSINE. This late series Limousine is coming into our hands in nearly new car condition. It has many extras, including bumper, front and rear; extra tire, Westinghouse shock absorbers, clock, etc. It also has an excellent set of cord tires. Upholstery shows practically no wear. Mechanical condition is exceptionally fine. We have priced this car extremely low for immediate sale. If interested you will have to come early Monday to avail yourself of this bargain. Special for this sale, $1,500.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 59, SUBURBAN SEDAN. Probably one of the most popular of our enclosed models. This roomy 7 passenger Sedan has just been turned into us by the original purchaser. Has the original paint on the car, which is a Cadillac blue, and has the appearance of a new automobile. Has an excellent set of cord tires, one extra, bumper, clock, seat covers, motometer, etc. The seat covers have always been on this car, so the velour upholstery shows no wear. We have made a thorough inspection of this car mechanically, made replacement of parts where necessary, and will sell this car as a guaranteed automobile. You will probably never have another opportunity of purchasing a late model Cadillac Sedan at such a low figure. Special for this sale, $3,500.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 57, 5 PASSENGER SEDAN. The body on this car is a custom made body with most excellent lines; in fact, this particular car has the appearance of our latest model. It would cost more for a body like we are describing than we are asking for the whole car. Mechanically this car is guaranteed. Has an excellent set of cord tires, one extra, and bumper. Has just been refinished in our own paint shop a standard Cadillac blue and all bright parts have been replated. As this is priced very low, your immediate action will be necessary. Special for this sale, $2,750.

NATIONAL, 1920, MODEL BB. This is a special car all the way through. The paint is in fine condition, is a special color of blue. Has 6 wire wheels, 2 spare tires, motometer, spotlight, a bumper front and rear, clock, windshield wings, tonneau windshield wings, seat covers, trunk rack, nickel lamps and radiator. The original purchaser of this car has not used it a great deal and for this reason it not only looks like new but runs equally as well. We are offering this at a low figure to move it quickly. There is practically a 50% reduction from the original cost. Special for this sale, $2,500.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 57, TOURING CAR. This is a double letter series. We can truthfully say we have never offered a Cadillac in quite as fine condition mechanically. Has just been refinished in our own shop a Cadillac dustproof gray and all bright parts replated. Motor runs as quiet as a new car. Has an excellent set of Goodyear cord tires, bumper, spare tire, and clock. The upholstery, top, and general condition of this car is like new. We believe this to be the best bargain we have ever offered in this model. Price $2,000.

PEERLESS 8 SEDAN, 1921. This is a nearly new car, painted special Peerless gray. Goodyear cord tires show practically no wear, one extra, bumper, rear vision mirror, clock, seat covers, etc. We believe this car to be as good as a new one. Cost when new nearly $4,500. Special for this sale, $3,250.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 59, VICTORIA COUPE. This late series we are offering at a great bargain. Painted Cadillac standard blue. Excellent set of Royal cord tires, one extra, bumper and clock. Mechanically this car is almost like a new one and is guaranteed by us. Velour upholstering shows no wear. Priced low for quick sale. Price, $3,500.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 59, ROADSTER. This is practically a new car and the customer has only used it a very little and has exchanged it for one of our enclosed models. Without a question this is one of the best roadsters we have ever offered. If you are looking for a practically new Cadillac car at a great saving do not fail to see this particular car. Cord tires on it are like new. Has two extras, bumper, etc. This car is sold as a guaranteed automobile. Special for this sale, $2,750.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 59, PHAETON SPORT MODEL. This is the model that has been so popular with us the year past. The customer is exchanging it for one of our new cars and it is coming into our hands in most excellent condition. We will guarantee it mechanically. Has an excellent set of cord tires, spare tire, bumper, etc. This car does not look like the ordinary used car and the lucky purchaser will obtain one of the best bargains we have ever offered. Special for this sale, $2,500.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 59, TOURING CAR. This is our standard 7 passenger model. This particular car has not had a great deal of mileage and has been carefully handled by the original owner. For this reason its mechanical, paint, and coach condition is superior to the average price car. Cord tires show but very little wear. Has many extras. If you are looking for a Cadillac touring car that has just been run enough to limber it up, we believe this car will please you. It carries our standard guarantee. As it is priced extremely low, we would suggest your immediate action. Special for this sale, $2,500.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 57, LANDO LIMOUSINE. This car we have just received from our refinishing department. We have made a thorough inspection of it mechanically and we will guarantee it. All bright parts have been replated. Upholstery in this car shows practically no wear; in fact, the entire automobile does not look like a used car; has many extras, including an excellent set of cord tires, one extra, bumper, clock, etc. If you are looking for a limousine that is greatly reduced in price and is good looking and guaranteed this car will surely come up to your expectations; special for this sale, $1,750.

PACKARD

Packard Twin Six Touring. This latest model car cannot be distinguished from new in any detail. The chassis and motor are in rebuilt and guaranteed condition. The entire car has been refinished in Rolls-Royce blue with fine ivory white stripe and is one of the handsomest cars we have turned out in some time. The price represents a considerable saving at $4,000.

Packard Twin Six Cabriolet Coupe. Overhauled by us and in first class mechanical condition. Newly painted in deep maroon with black enamel hood and fenders. Equipped with very good cord tires, heater, motometer, etc. This is an ideal car for year round use and is priced very conservatively at $2,500.

Oldsmobile Coupe, 1920 model. This is a dandy little car for cold weather use. The paint is in good condition, upholstery is silk velour and tires above the average. Nothing necessary in the line of mechanical work before putting the car into active service. We would advise an early inspection. $1,000.

Buick Roadster, 1920 model. Here is practically a new car in everything but the price. The equipment is very complete, mechanical condition perfect and paint showing hardly a sign of use. The price is only $900.

Oldsmobile 1920 Model Sport. This is the latest series 8 cylinder car and cannot be distinguished from new. The paint, upholstery, top and tires show no signs of any use. The price represents a wonderful saving. $1,250.

CHANDLERS

USED CAR DEALERS TELL US THAT CHANDLERS ARE ALWAYS IN DEMAND. WHY?

BECAUSE LASTING QUALITIES ARE BUILT INTO THEM AT FIRST!

BECAUSE THERE HAVE BEEN NO CHASSIS CHANGES IN 6 YEARS, AND ONLY MINOR CHANGES IN 8 YEARS. THE PRINCIPAL CHANGES HAVE BEEN IN BODY DESIGN ONLY. THIS MEANS THE DESIGN AND QUALITY WERE RIGHT. IT MEANS IT IS EASY TO GET REPAIRS AND PART SUPPLIES, AS THE MODELS ARE NOT OBSOLETE. IT MEANS WHEN YOU ARE READY TO SELL OR TRADE YOUR CHANDLER YOU HAVE A CAR WHICH WILL BRING A HIGH PRICE, AS IT IS A CURRENT MODEL AND THEREFORE SALABLE. SEE THESE CARS WE ARE OFFERING AND COMPARE THE SERVICE THEY WILL GIVE WITH THAT OF A NEW CAR AT THE SAME PRICE.

CHANDLER COUPE, 1920 SERIES—This car was turned in to us on a new sedan. It has received the best of care and is in excellent condition. We have made all necessary repairs and adjustments after making a complete examination. It is refinished in standard Chandler blue and black, with cream wheels. All bright parts renickeled; 4 very good cord tires; dark tan velour upholstery, with detachable linen covers. Remember, this is an exact duplicate of our present model.
SPECIAL PRICE........$1,850.

CHANDLER SEDAN, 1919 SERIES—This car has been thoroughly overhauled in our shops. Needless to say it runs as well as when new. The gray whipcord upholstery is in excellent condition. Body is refinished in standard Chandler colors. All bright parts are renickeled. Our price on this car is very low.
SPECIAL PRICE........$1,560.

CHANDLER SEDAN, 1918 SERIES. Five or seven passenger car. Overhauled in our shops. Runs very quiet and smooth. Has plenty of power. Car carries four excellent tires. Body refinished in standard factory colors. Excellent family car. Our price should sell it very quickly.
SPECIAL PRICE........$1,175.

CHANDLER TOURING, 1920 SERIES. This is a late model car and is an exact duplicate of our present model. The original finish is excellent. Is equipped with a new set of tires. Run enough to be properly broken in. Condition does not show slightest signs of abuse. This is a very good value.
SPECIAL PRICE........$1,150.

BRISCOE TOURING, 1920—An exact duplicate, we believe, of the present model that is delivered in Chicago for $1,185. This car is in first class condition and is offered for quick sale at our
SPECIAL PRICE..........$550.

HAYNES TOURING—Late 1916 model. Five passenger. Individual front seats. A very neat job and very classy. Mechanical condition is excellent. Practically the same motor that is used in present model. This is not a heavy car. It is one of the most popular Haynes models. Our price is considerably under the market.
SPECIAL PRICE..........$500.

Our tremendous surplus stock of tires must be sold at this big sacrifice in prices. These standard make tires are practically new, only used on demonstration cars. Not to be compared with double treads or seconds. Thousands of motorists use our tires exclusively because they get up to 6,000 miles out of them. Take advantage of this exceptional offering and stock up a whole year's supply. BUY NOW. These prices are thinning down our stock.

'CO-OP' FLAT IDEA, AFTER A YEAR OF TRIAL, A SUCCESS

Tenant-Owner-President Tells About It.

BY AL CHASE.

Think of never having to wallop or tip the janitor to get a little heat in your flat! Think of having something to say about whether one member of your neighbor's family upstairs pounds out "Ain't We Got Fun?" on a player piano at midnight, while all the rest of that family and their guests toddle your pictures off the walls! And think of a few more of the commonplace apartment house annoyances, such as no hot water, clothesline battles and such, and then picture a sort of flat millennium without any of these worries.

For there are three of such places—perhaps more—where these petty worries and good sized troubles have been practically eliminated and that much absurd word "coöperation" has done it.

Albert W. Swayne & Co., were pioneers in the medium priced "coöp" flat. Their first was the Argyle Apartment Building company's twenty-four apartment building at 1458-64 Argyle street, organized May 1, 1920. The second was the Kimbark Apartment building corporation's twenty-one flat structure at 6100-08 Kimbark avenue, organized Jan. 1, 1921. The most recent is the twenty-four flat Ashland Court Building corporation's structure at 6612-22 North Ashland avenue, organized July 1, 1921.

Calls It a Success.

With a year's perspective on the experiment and with numerous requests for information as to how it has worked out, it seems timely to tell about what the "coöp" flat really has accomplished.

William C. Firebaugh, TRIBUNE librarian, and president of the Kimbark coöp apartments, calls it a substantial success.

"I am paying $39.79 a month for the same flat I used to pay $69.50 for," he said, grinning contentedly, "and instead of worrying about rent boosts I can look ahead and see my rent gradually tapering off to around $17. I own my own home and my $39.79 monthly is paying for it.

"The most striking thing about the coöp flat is that the tenant-owner's conception of the rights of other people is far beyond that of the average flat renter. That means living in a coöp apartment is pleasanter than in an ordinary flat building.

"Probably the next most important feature of coöp living is that we have heat whenever we need it, whether it's a chilly day in July or a raw day in August. If any one wants heat he gets it. And there's hot water and lots of it every hour in the twenty-four, 365 days in the year."

There are four directors in the Kimbark, one from each of the three entrances and one at large. They serve without pay. One of the four is president. Another is a bonded treasurer for the organization. This body governs the community. They select a business manager from the tenants, who also serves without pay, and he has charge of the union scale janitor. The directors meet the first Tuesday in each month and any tenant, male or female, who cares to attend may do so.

Too Much Noise Taboo.

Countless little things conducive to harmony and comfort have been accomplished in the coöp flat. High class coal is now delivered instead of the former poor grade. As few as possible tenants are on party lines, so phone squabbles are obviated. Decorating as wanted by the occupant is given at first—the rest of the time the individual does it at his own expense. Boisterous conduct late at night is taboo—a circular letter sent to all by the directors quickly stopped one individual case of too much racket, without ill feeling.

Albert W. Swayne has given a complimentary banquet at the Hotel La Salle to each of the three groups of coöps prior to their start on the sea of landlordism. Later at the first annual stockholders' meeting in the building basement the Kimbark residents combined business with pleasure and all met again.

Ordinary Loses Eliminated.

"There are no managing expenses, no loss in rents, no vacancies, no moving in and out, and at least half of the decorating expenses are eliminated, all of which is 25 per cent of the gross rental ordinarily paid out by landlords," said Mr. Swayne. "The directors manage the property better than I ever could, for there's one at each entrance and every one takes a personal interest in the property because he's an owner."

As there were 500 applications for flats in the Ashland Court building, the matter of selection by the temporary board of directors named by Mr. Swayne was a careful one. Only two or three owners have had to move and they sold their apartments at a good profit. Each new owner must be approved by the board of directors before he can buy a coöp flat. Even if it seems to be a somewhat tedious process to become a coöp owner, it's well worth while, judging from what they all say.

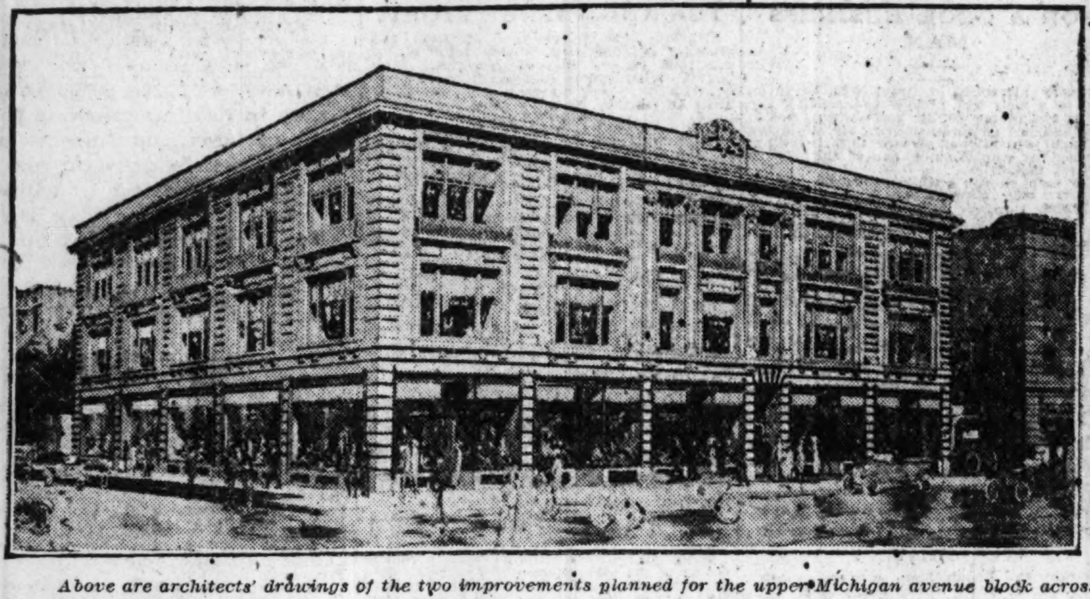
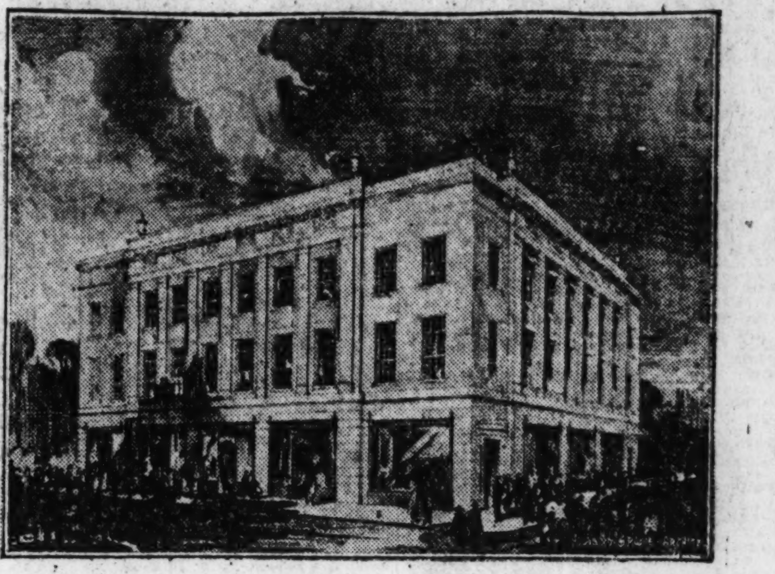
A BLOCK OF GOLD COAST BUILDINGS OPPOSITE THE DRAKE

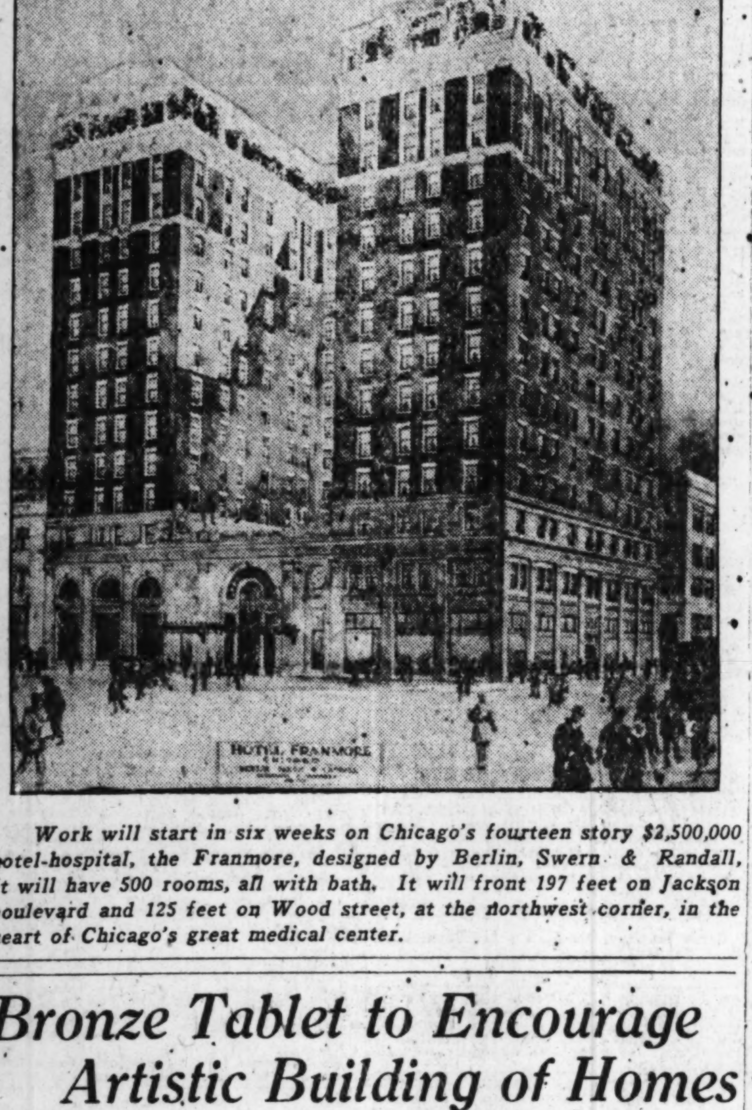




Above are architects' drawings of the two improvements planned for the upper Michigan avenue block across from the Drake hotel, between Walton place on the south and Oak street on the north, announced some time ago. On the right is the Bedford stone structure designed by Holabird & Roche for the Palmer estate. It will have foundations for five stories, although only three will be built now. This is at the north end of the block, directly across Oak street from the Harold McCormick residence. Ross & Co. already are negotiating with several big concerns for shops.

Architect David Saul Klafter designed the building on the left for the Michigan-Walton Building corporation in the Italian style of architecture. There will be six shops and sixty offices. Willis & Frankenstein will manage the property.

BIG HOTEL FOR WEST SIDE



Work will start in six weeks on Chicago's fourteen story $2,500,000 hotel-hospital, the Franmore, designed by Berlin, Swern & Randall. It will have 500 rooms, all with bath. It will front 197 feet on Jackson boulevard and 125 feet on Wood street, at the northwest corner, in the heart of Chicago's great medical center.

GETTING OUT THE OLD F. P. IS APEX OF SALESMANSHIP

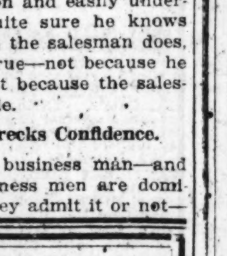
Expert Urges Quiet at That Moment.

The following lecture on "The Promotion and Sale of Real Estate," given in part, was delivered by John A. Carroll of John A. Carroll & Brother at the real estate course of the Y. M. C. A. school of commerce, under the auspices of the Cook county real estate board. Robert E. L. Brooks, former president of the Cook county real estate board, will discuss the Torrens system at next Tuesday's lecture.

THE safest and, it might be said, the rarest quality in a real estate salesman is to know the property he's offering so well that no question may be asked which will confuse, surprise, or shake him; other qualities salesmen may have, but knowledge of and confidence in the property he's offering is the sure road to success in selling. But to know it and to have confidence in it is not enough. He must have enthusiasm for it, so much so that he forgets all selling arguments and inspires such confidence in his prospective purchaser as to cause him to reach for his fountain pen.—JOHN A. CARROLL.

BY JOHN A. CARROLL.

Selling real estate is like everything else; it's not the thing you do, it's the way you do it. That, after all, is the big idea of this or any other line of salesmanship.



JOHN A. CARROLL.

You'd be surprised how interested you could make a business man, a banker if you please, in a piece of real estate around the corner by the proper presentation of a new idea concerning it. By the same token, it's idle to take up the time of a busy man in useless generalities about the advisability of investing in real estate. If he's a business man worth cultivating he probably knows more about the subject in a general way than the average salesman who approaches him. Every man thinks he knows all there is to know about real estate. He may admit theres' something to learn about bonds and stocks, or life insurance, but real estate is so common and easily understood that he's quite sure he knows more about it than the salesman does, and often this is true—not because he knows so much but because the salesman knows so little.

First Wallop Wrecks Confidence.

The dominating business man—and all successful business men are dominating, whether they admit it or not—will often land a broadside at a salesman to get his measure, as it were. If he floors him with the first wallop he instinctively get the idea that the salesman doesn't know what he's talking about, and confidence, the first essential to a successful business relationship, is destroyed.

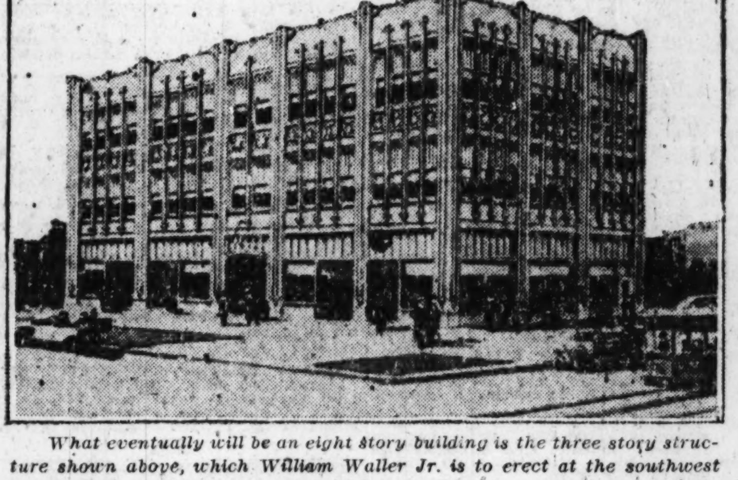
I used to say that there was one sensitive part in the average man's anatomy, and that is along the front of his right leg, where the bank roll lay. In selling, a salesman knows that he's reached the top of the hill when his prospect reaches that other sensitive part—his upper vest pocket where the fountain pen lays. The unscrewing of the top of the fountain pen is the apex of all salesmanship. The job is then finished, or it should be.

But do you know that there are a lot of salesmen who don't know enough to quit talking when the old man is unscrewing the pen? They don't know when they've reached the top of the hill. They walk right up and then they walk right down again. They talk themselves into a sale and then often talk themselves out again.

Selling Not a Weak Man's Job.

The big idea is to be alert and earnest and, above all, to be industrious. Selling is dominating—it's not a weak man's job. It is convincing one man that he ought to have something that the other man possesses. Above all, it is promotion, discovery, putting the new light on the old picture, making what appeared commonplace look attractive.

Boul. Mich.'s Newest Building Project



What eventually will be an eight story building is the three story structure shown above, which William Waller Jr. is to erect at the southwest corner of upper Michigan avenue and East Chicago avenue from plans by Architect Robert T. Newberry. It is one of the most important of the recently contemplated Boul. Mich. improvements.

Bronze Tablet to Encourage Artistic Building of Homes

While the big interests along Upper Michigan avenue have been debating for more than a year whether or not to adopt the New York 5th avenue plan of awarding medals and diplomas for the best architectural work each year, Greenebaum Sons' Bank and Trust company yesterday stepped forward with a specially designed bronze tablet which is to be awarded annually to the owner of the most artistic building for dwelling purposes erected anywhere in the city.

With the coöperation of the Municipal Art league, a jury of five each year will pass on drawings and blue prints submitted and on completed structures. The prize will be for homes, apartment and hotel buildings only, structures occupied for other than dwelling purposes not being included. The first tablet will be awarded for buildings completed during 1922.

In speaking of this movement to encourage more attractive architecture, Walter J. Greenebaum, cashier of the Greenebaum bank, said: "We believe a competition of this kind will result eventually in making Chicago a city of beautiful homes. It will undoubtedly act as a stimulus to architects and owners to make their buildings more artistic. Increased values naturally follow additional architectural beauty. While there are many attractive homes in Chicago, there is much room for improvement. It is our hope that this annual bronze tablet award will bring about the desired result."

The cost of a building will not affect the award in this competition. Consideration will be given only to the artistic merits of a structure, whether it be a $10,000 house or a $1,000,000 apartment building or hotel. Selection will be made soon by the Municipal Art league of the jury of award, which will prepare the rules under which the competition will be held.

NEW PLANT FOR CLEARING.

The Murphy-McSuen company, recently organized, has bought from the Clearing industrial district a site 480 feet west of South Austin avenue, fronting 205 feet on Wests 65th street, with a maximum depth of 614 feet to the Belt railway, containing two and one-half acres, for $17,000. A plant for the manufacture of asphalt roofing, etc., is expected to be completed by Jan. 1. Fred A. Eskridge is architect. Petit, Cummings & Colson acted for the buyer and L. T. Jamme represented the Celaring industrial district.

COLORED GLASS MAKERS BRING NEW INDUSTRY TO CITY

What is claimed will be a brand new industry for the Chicago district, the making of colored glass on a large scale, is being established in a $175,000 factory, now going up on a ten acre tract at West 33d street and South 52d avenue, Cicero, by the Oriental Glass Manufacturing company. The company, recently formed, paid $20,000 to Mary Von Hagen for the site. A. M. De Vry & Co. were brokers.

A. E. Saunders, formerly a superintendent at Tiffany's, New York, and with that famous concern for sixteen years, is secretary and general manager of the new local company. Robert Malcom is president. Five former Tiffany experts are in Chicago waiting for the new factory to open, which is expected will be within ninety days.

"We'll make colored sheet glass," said an official of the new company, "and all kinds of colored glass specialties and glass for church windows, etc., as well as table ware. In fact, we'll do work similar to Tiffany. The first unit will cover only a small part of our site. We expect to build several more units later."

SHOP BUILDING FOR SOUTHWEST CORNER MICHIGAN-CHICAGO

One of upper Michigan avenue's most conspicuous bits of real estate, the southwest corner of Chicago avenue, is to be improved with a high grade building, which ultimately will be eight stories. William Waller Jr. has had plans drawn by Architect Robert T. Newberry for a structure in the Gothic style of architecture, to be three stories at present, but with foundations in strong enough for five additional stories as Boul. Mich. develops into the shopping thoroughfare expected of it.

Mr. Newberry's plans call for shops so arranged that any one can rent space in the two upper floors and in some cases have private elevator service connecting with the ground floor shops. The building will front eighty feet on the boulevard and forty-five feet on Chicago avenue.

Beg Your Pardon

In reporting the ninety-nine year lease of the site for a proposed $1,000,000 theater at Sheridan and Lawrence, in Friday's real estate department, it was incorrectly given as the southwest corner. This should have read southeast. Frank P. Armistead, manager of Dawson Brothers, represented Mrs. Annie G. Dawson in the deal.

PLANS 14 HOUSES ON FIVE ACRES IN HIGHLAND PARK

Highland Park is to have fourteen new houses, standing on lots from 70x200 up to 110x250, as a result of the purchase of a five acre tract at the northeast corner of Ravine and Linden avenues by J. L. and L. F. Harris of Chicago. The site formerly was part of the property of the Northwestern Military academy, and was purchased from Col. Davidson of that school. It is east of the tracks.

"We expect to have a few ready by spring," said L. F. Harris, "and the balance completed by summer. Our tentative minimum price is $15,000, with a probable maximum of $20,000. They will have from seven to nine rooms. Part of the five acres is wooded and is only a few blocks from the station."
